SOME VIOLINIST.

First he firmly adjusts his chin,
On the tailboard end of the violin,
Gives a tightening turn to all the keys,
Till its tones his critic fancies please.
Draws back and forth the resined bow
Across the strings, solemnly, slow,
And then he's ready to begin
Those torturing tunes, on the violin.

How that ill-fated fiddle wails
As he runs the gamut of the scales,
Sometimes so sharp and shrill the tones
'Twould pierce the marrow in the bones,
Then mournful low the uncanny strain
Like the lost soule moan of hopeless pain,
But we encore and praise, in sooth,
With secret apology to the truth.

So on he plays, with a weird delight,
Thinking we're lost in wonderment quite
Like himself just sunk, in a dreamy trance,
When in fact, we only await a chance
To escape the sound of its harrassing groan
And leave him to murder the music alone
For we hate, as only we hate vile sin
The sound of that screeching violin.

U. S. FAILED TO FORESEE THAT BIG STRAIN WAS SURE TO COME

Result is the Present Transportation Congestion—Power Given to Impractical Men—Military Officials Stop Trains to Exercise the Horses—Cry For "Practical" Men

PRIORITY ORDERS OFTEN WORK BACKWARDS

(By E. J. Archibald.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 2.—Less than two weeks ago there were twenty-five thousand freight cars jammed into a few Atlantic ports, some of which had stood on sidings for weeks, waiting to be unloaded. Such conditions are no more created in a day than they can be remedied in a day, and the coal problem is only a part of a vastly greater one.

I have talked to many people who have insisted that if the whole steam transportation question had been handed over to "practical men" nothing of this sort would have happened. That is the cry that is continually made against the whole Wilson Administration for that matter. Against this alleged lack of practical experience in railroading on the part of many persons who have taken a hand at it the reply is made that since the Government took the matter into its own hands the "practical" railroad men have done very little to help out, that in fact they have rather enjoyed the spectacle of confusion that has been presented lately.

There were bad mistakes made, nevertheless. The first was in the method adopted for paying for Government orders. The producer got one-quarter of his money when the contract was let and the other three-quarters when the goods were placed on the cars. On the face of it this looked like a sure way to speed up production. It did, but it also converted tens of thousands of freight cars from one end of the country to the other into travelling warehouses, which traveled only so far and then stopped and stuck.

Priority Orders a Fiasco.

Then came the priority orders They were designed to speed up freight movements, just as the methods of Government payments were designed to speed up production. Like them, the orders also worked, but not always in the way they were expected to. A priority card tacked to a freight car gave that car precedence over another on the same train which did not have one. When big yards were reached and trains were broken up for re-sorting and forwarding to their destinations the priority cars were given right of way over the others. That might have been all right had the authority to affix priority cards been confined to a few persons, but it was gradually extended, though without being so intended, at first to take in every quartermaster in the United States army, as well as other officials, military and civil. The confusion thus created all over the railway systems of the country was exceedingly great.

The classic instance of an absurd order is the case of a large consignment of anchors rushed to an Atlantic port under priority orders for ships the keels of which were not even laid.

So wide was the authority given to the military officials over the railroads that it is only recently that orders have been issued to officers in charge of troop trains forbidding them to stop the trains whenever they pleased to exercise the men or animals.

I have presented the dark side of the picture first. There is, needless to say, a brighter side. It is to be found in the remedial measures which are being taken to straighten out the tangle. The pooling of the immense facilities of the great systems whether along their lines or at their terminals is one of the chief of these. Another is an inter-allied agreement covering all shipping from American ports. One man, and a very able one, Major-Gen. Goethals, has been put at the head of the army transport system. A temporary embargo has been put upon freight to the most congested districts until the blockade has been cleared up. The Garfield order must also be listed in this class, although you will find more opponents than friends for it even here in Washington, where there are no manufactures to be affected by it. Finally, the priority orders have been curtailed, and the numbers of those authorized to issue them substantially cut down.

Food Controller Means To Act If The Potato Men Limit Sales

Wants Specific Information About Overcharging or Restrictions of Sale —No Scarcity Whatever

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 2.—That there is no scarcity of potatoes in Toronto and that any overcharging to the consumer or any apparent shortage must be placed at the door of the ated from the Food controller's office, retailer is the statement which eman-

It has been stated that in Toronto some grocers are charging as high as 50 cents a peck for potatoes, and are limiting their sales to half a peck. The retailers, it is contended, have no right to hold up the price of potatoes and no right to restrict the supply. The wholesalers are licensed by the Food Controller and the Department has full knowledge of the supply.

The maximum price which the wholesaler is permitted to charge is $2.25 a bag, or about 37 cents per peck. On this price the retailer is only entitled to reasonable profit.

The department has a man in the Maritime Provinces whose duty it is to see that sufficient shipments of potatoes are made. There are plenty in store at Toronto and if there is any trouble either as to supply or price it lies with the retailers.

The Food Controller would be pleased to receive any data or specific cases of overcharging and restriction of sale and will take action accordingly.

CATTLE MARKET

The live cattle and the wholesale beef trade was hit both ways this week as a result of the recent big storms. Monday's storm put the railroads almost out of business for a few days so far as the shipping of either cattle or beef was concerned. Cattle were in consequence kept tied up in their stables on the farms, and business was practically at a standstill in the local markets.

The big packing houses had plenty of beef on hand, but the railroads again were not available for shipping out to country points. The result of this complete shutting off of business at both ends was that when a few the packers were not eager to buy them, and prices promptly receded from the strong position they held on last Monday's market. The week-end market quotations are therefore about 50 cents lower than last Monday on all grades of butcher cattle.

Sheep and lambs have held about steady.

Hogs settled at $18.50 for week-end deliveries, but are likely to be quoted 50 cents lower for next week.

TOO MUCH COAL TO CANADA.

Complaint is Made by New York State Fuel Administrator.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Criticism of the section of shippers and producers in sending coal to Canada at a period when factories throughout New York State need fuel to carry out Government war contracts is contained in a statement issued here to-day by C. E. Robertson, deputy state fuel administrator.

As an instance of "the flagrant violation of the law of equity and fair distribution," he said, Mr. Robertson quoted figures indicating that Canada last year received about 26 per cent., or nearly 3,000,000 tons of coal, "in excess of her proportionate share" from the United States as compared with the increased production of anthracite in this country in 1917 over the 1916 production.

"Wretched distribution" of coal was declared to have resulted in a situation to-day where 20 per cent. of the state's factories will close, entirely or partly, unless fuel is available at once. Weather conditions over Pennsylvania and New Jersey, where coal trains are declared to be buried in snowdrifts, will make the situation even graver next week, it was asserted by fuel authorities.

NO NUT COAL TO-DAY

Hurry Up With the Peat Or Its Back to the Fence Rails.

"Not nut coal" was the nanchalant ultimatum to an uneasy public to-day. However, the Bolshevik will look for his shadow to-morrow, although a frost cnured people are past worrying whether spring breaks early or late. Ordinarily the railways never expect snow blockades until February.

At that rate the real sting of winter is to be unleashed in the next twenty-seven days. But the people have become fatalists, and if the mythical gets a frozen paw to-morrow, it may teach him to snooze hereafter until the May bells ring, the robins trill and the dandelions dot the verdant meadows, and the frogs fill the marshes with joyous life. Oh-h-dear.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Well," Dennis tiped his chair back in his customary attitude, but meeting with no sustaining wall, he retrieved himself from disaster by a violent lurch. "It's plain to be seen the girl's family know some secret about her that they are keeping to themselves, but sure they can't know anything about who murdered her. Even if she'd given them trouble, as she seems to have, there'd be no reason for them to shield the one that killed her, and if Quimby wanted to, for the sake of avoiding more notoriety—which is a pretty slim excuse—I don't believe that the aunt would stand for it."

"They must have had a fine time of it, keeping her a prisoner for the last few months," remarked McCarty.

"What? Keeping who prisoner?"

"Marion Rowntree, of course. Didn't you get that? Every time you hear of her leaving the house, the aunt was mounting guard. Even the seamstress said that this last spring she could hardly get a word alone with the girl; that Miss Beckwith or one of the maids was always on hand. That shows they were afraid she would help the girl on the quiet in some way, and they were good guessers as it happened."

"Three days before the murder she gave her aunt the slip at the dressmaker's, and went to the Glamorgan, but what her object was of course, we don't know yet. Last Monday afternoon she beats it the minute the old lady's back is turned and goes to Manhattan Bridge and meets the aviator fellow."

"If he hadn't been there Terhune would have a fine time trailing her to Astoria and Steinway."

"If he hadn't been there," McCarty said slowly, "she'd never have gone to Steinway, I'm thinking."

"What do you mean, Mac?" Dennis' jaw dropped. "You don't think it was a date, by any chance?"

"I know I'd like to have a look at that little boarded up cottage that neither of them knew the address of, yet both could find so easy," averred the other. "Out through Astoria's nice and quiet after you pass the factories. If I was in a fashionable society, and wanted to get away somewheres for a bit of a talk without being seen by my friends, I don't know as I could pick out a better spot."

"I wonder where he was that night, when she was killed!" Dennis said in a sepulchral tone. "If Terhune's the bright fellow I think he is, he'll look up that young flying man's time."

"If he does and expects to find him at the Quimby hangar, he'd better look sharp," McCarty retorted. "I'm thinking that the young man is due for a quick bounce, from the looks he got to-day."

"You don't think it's him they was trying to keep her from, all this time they've been watching her?"

"No, or they would have discharged him long ago. They know what they were holding her back from, all right, and they knew what was drawing her to the Glamorgan. They got a few jolts this morning at the inquest; the very first sight of the other witnesses gave them both a shock that even Quimby himself couldn't help showing, and later on when he testified that he didn't know of an enemy his stepdaughter could have had, he glared down at the bunch like a wolf."

"I tried to see who he was looking at but he recovered himself before I had a chance. There is one thing; Marion Rowntree must have been fair desperate about something to slip out of the house at night when everyone was in bed and rush off to the apartment more than a mile across."

"'Twas a love affair," Dennis nodded sagely. "It's only that that can make a woman act more of a fool than the Lord intended. Maybe it was the man who was calling on Mrs. Doremus that the girl was in love with and they quarrelled—"

"Lovers' quarrels end sometimes in a clinch, and more times in the courts, but not by one of them getting shoved through a window, unless they are a low, wild class" McCarty paused and then cried: "I'd forgot all about the car! Now what do you think of that for a bonehead?"

"What car?"

"The limousine and the two men waiting across the street before the new building that's going up! They beat it the minute her body hit the sidewalk!"

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Something, or they would not have gone so quick. The Rowntree girl didn't come in it herself, that's sure."

"Glory be! Mac, 'twas the man come in it! The man who was in Mrs. Doremus's apartment!"

"At seven o'clock of a fine summer evening, in a closed limousine, with the sun hardly gone down?"

"Well then, maybe he'd arranged to have it come and meet him there to take him away. He might have used a limousine, in spite of the heat, if he wants it to be as darned private as his actions seem to make out."

"If that's the action to it," McCarty was thinking aloud and running his hands violently through his hair, until it stood up like a sandy brush, "why didn't it wait for him? Why did it go like the devil when the girl came flying out of the window? Those that were running it couldn't have recognized her across the street in the dark! They could only have gone because they expected something like that to happen, were on the lookout for it and determined to keep out of trouble if it did come!

"But that would mean that the man, whoever he was, went there with the intention of murder in his heart and that couldn't be! Denny, we are getting in too deep! If ever there was a murder committed on the spur of the moment, and a red-hot moment at that of anger, or jealousy, or revenge, it's this one. We'll have to look at it another way if we are going to connect that limousine with the crime."

"You've enough loose ends as it is, to tangle up in, Mac, without dragging in every motor car in the street," Dennis observed. "What with everybody lying, and the girl herself speaking with her dying breath of a 'flying man' when there is no such thing in the world, and that Mary hearing talk of a stepfather, it's the worst mix-up ever you tackled, or Terhune either."

"It's a child's game to see why Mary's giving herself such airs, and taken the whiphand; she's got something on Mrs. Doremus and the man, too, and she could give him away even if he had nothing to do with the murder. They have probably bribed her to hold her tongue, and they're lucky if she does not blackmail the two of them. She's a cool hand, and she's out for the coin. You can see that by the way that she went after Quimby, at the drop of the hat, when she thought he was going to pay for information about the murder. Whatever ails you, Mac?"

For McCarty was staring at him speechlessly, his eyes alight with the fire of a great discovery. At the abrupt question he found his voice in a bellow, and dealt the desk a smashing blow with his fist.

"By God, Denny, you've got it! Why didn't I think of it before! 'At the drop of a hat,' eh? You've got Terhune himself faded!"

"What have I got?" demanded the mystified Dennis. "Wasn't I just saying it was an impossible mix-up? You've too many pieces, like a picture puzzle; they'll never all fit together."

"I'm thinking they will," McCarty's tone was strangely quiet after his outburst of the minute before. "A few of them fit now, Dennis, lies and all, and I'm afraid it will not be a good picture to look at when it is finished. And to think you should hit on it without being any the wiser!"

"If all you can do is to sit there gassing to yourself, I'll be getting on back." Dennis rose with an injured air. "If anything I said made you throw that fit I suppose you'll tell me about it in your own good time!"

"Hold on a bit, Denny. I'll explain as soon as I've got a little more information out of our friend Terhune. I can't grasp it yet myself, hardly, it's like the wildest sort of a guess, and yet it fits in. If it turns out to be the truth it'll be about the biggest case in the history of the department. I'll hunt up Terhune in the morning."

But McCarty did not find it necessary to take that step. That evening when he returned from the little restaurant where as usual he dined, he found Wade Terhune awaiting him on the door-step.

"Good-evening, sir. Wait till I go ahead and light up for you. 'Tis a bit cooler to-night, thanks be!"

"I didn't have an opportunity to talk to you at the inquest to-day, Mac, and there are one or two points I would like to go over with you." The detective had fallen easily into the use of the intimate abbreviation which the police department and his friends alike bestowed upon McCarty. "I looked for you when the proceedings were adjourned, but you had gone."

"That was very kind of you, sir," McCarty responded cautiously. 'I didn't want to be wasting your time——"

"You wouldn't," Terhune broke in bruskly. "I like your point of view, when I've been looking at a thing so long from my own angle that I cannot readily shift to another without the stimulus of a fresh opinion. Then, too you have a ridiculously lucky way of stumbling on facts that would ordinarily take a tremendous amount of thought to reach."

"McCarty's mind went swiftly back to the discovery Dennis's idle words had led him that afternoon, and he was silent as he brought forward an easy chair for his visitor, and placed the matches within reach.

"What did you think of the inquest to-day?"

McCarty glanced up at that.

"I think since you asked me, sir, they are the biggest pack of liars, male and female, you could find even with that little spy-glass of yours.

"There was some tall prevaricating going on, there's no doubt of it," the detective agreed. Still, I think we succeeded in making some headway."

"Your rounding up of those new witnesses did that," remarked McCarty. "Especially the aviator fellow, Edwards. Do you happen to know what he did that night, sir? Was he in town, I mean?"

"You mean, was he near the Glamorgan, don't you?" The detective laughed good-naturedly. "No he went back to Long Island, dined in a little restaurant in Jamaica, where several men who knew him talked with him, and went on to Garden City. He sat in a little game of poker there until midnight nearly, and then went to bed."

"Sure, he's got as nice a little alibi all tied up and ready, as the other fellow, Grafton Foxe." McCarty paused and added carelessly: "I wonder where Mr. Quimby's engagement took him that night?"

"Not suspecting him, are you, Mac?" Terhune was still chuckling, but his face grew swiftly grave. "Of course, Miss Rowntree's meeting with the aviator in the afternoon and her dying reference to a flying man, was the merest coincidence, but there would not be two such coincidences in the case. It's unthinkable. The one word 'stepfather,' which Mary claims to have heard down the air-shaft, has a direct bearing on the case, I am certain. Not that Stephen Quimby is guilty of the actual murder, for his alibi, too, is unshakable, but I tell you in confidence that there is a possibility he was instrumental in it."

He paused, but McCarty could only stare at him wordlessly, and he went on:

"I realize the gravity of such an assertion, but I have established a motive—the only possible one, I think in this case. You heard the seamstress say to-day that Miss Rowntree would have been twenty-one had she lived two weeks longer. When she became of age, her stepfather would have been compelled to turn over to her the huge estate left her by her mother, which has been in his charge and, Mac, he couldn't do it!"

Croup

"Grany" Chamberlain

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without they are prepared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough and watch their little one gasping for breath.

You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expel it by vomiting.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an absolutely safe and certain remedy for croup, and if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack."

Yours for Health.—Granny Chamberlain

Dover Patrol Known as the Efficient Cinderella of Britain's Great Navy

BRITAIN has raised an army of somewhere in the neighborhood of 6,000,000 men and a good proportion of them have been carried across the narrow straits which separate England and France. Of these millions, millions have returned repeatedly on leave or to recover amid the loving care of their own people. This transport of men, with all the equipment and guns and munitions and supplies of all kinds needed by great armies, this carrying to and fro of wounded men and men on leave has gone on for close upon three years. During all that time the German submarines, and occasionally their destroyers, have raged and their naval communiques have often imagined a vain thing, but the fact remains that no transport, or, if one's recollection is correct, any other ship of military importance, has been wrecked on the route to France by submarine, mine, or other enemy agency. The explanation of this is to be found in the Dover patrol.

Riding the waters of Dover's 600-acre harbor and bay, under the shadow of the white cliffs of England, is one of the strangest imaginable navies. It is a navy which has grown up to a large extent since the war began, and without disparagement to the super-Navy hidden in the mists of the North Sea or to the battle cruiser and light cruiser squadrons charging out almost daily to scour the seas, generally with hope deferred, for the German Navy, it has done more than its share of genuine hard work. It is the Cinderella of the British Navy and a very efficient Cinderella.

It sweeps the narrow seas for mines, it searches and hunts the submarine. It convoys transports and hospital ships to and from England and France, it is ready for a fight with German surface craft if the latter will give them an opportunity, it even bombards the submarine and destroyer bases on the Belgian coast. And all this is done by warships which never dreamt before 1914 that they had any fight in them and by orthodox war vessels among which the destroyer or perhaps the monitor is king.

Dover bay is a strange sight to-day to those who knew it only in peace time. One wonders how the vessels of all types and sizes are able to get in and out of the harbor, so crowded does its surface appear to be. There are something like 500 mechanically driven vessels engaged on the work of the Dover patrol and Dover harbor, in its wildest moments, probably never expected to have to deal with more than, say, from 50 to 100. Dover has not the best of harbors. The strong tide at the entrance makes ingress difficult, and vessels must enter this crowded harbor at a good speed if they are to make their base at all. Bumps and bruises consequently are not infrequent, but the patrol takes them as part of the day's work.

In the harbor itself are destroyers at all angles to each other, big monitors, a submarine depot vessel with submarines, innumerable motor launches, the famous "scooters," other war vessels and craft that might or might not be war craft. Along the front are seaplane stations and occasionally in the infrequent open spaces in the harbor are to be seen seaplanes, roaring noisily along the surface of the water, preparatory to rising. Seaplanes and aeroplanes hum backwards and forwards in the sky, and occasionally an airship can be seen cruising out over the sea. The Dover patrol, in fact, looks after the safety of its charges from the sky above as well as from the sea. Khaki and blue, but more blue than khaki, are the favorite wear ashore, and a stray civilian in a frock with an umbrella under his arm has a strangely unreal look. The whole scene appears joyful and peaceful under the bright sun, but at Dover one feels strongly the atmosphere of war, the sense of war as the sole labor and preoccupation of the people. The length of training required by a soldier recruit, it is well known, can be substantially reduced if he is trained in France, where the intensity of the war atmosphere is even greater, but it is certain some weeks could be knocked off it in Dover.

The officer who directs this strange flotilla, which includes, it may be mentioned, every one of the vessels that in peace time plied from Dover to Folkestone, from the cross-channel steamers to the paddle vessels for trippers at 6d a trip, is Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Hugh Spencer Bacon, K.C.B., K.C.V.O. This short, sturdily built officer with the alert, coldly practical yet humorous expression, is one of the most inventive intellects in the navy. His destroyers are full of his devices, and some of his officers declare that he thinks of nothing but inventing and bombarding. To him belongs the distinction of having started the submarine boat service in the Royal Navy. In the present war he has fought both on land and on the sea. He had retired in November, 1909, after filling various important naval posts, such as captain of H. M. S. Dreadnought during her first commission, naval assistant to the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, aide-de-camp and Director of Naval Ordnance and Torpedoes, to become managing director of Coventry Ordnance Works, which post he held till the war came, when he resigned and was gazetted colonel second commandant, R. N. Thereafter, until he was appointed to command the Dover patrol, he commanded the heavy howitzer brigade of the Royal Marine Artillery with the expeditionary force in France. In these different capacities he has rendered signal service to his country, and his brilliant inventive ability may be judged from the fact that the Coventry Ordnance Works are reported to pay him a retaining fee that would satisfy a cabinet minister for the use of his services when the war ends.

He is not afraid to defy even the Northcliffe press, as when some time ago he roused its fury by his wreath to commemorate a "brave and gallant enemy," the German sailors who had fallen in the fight with the Shark and the Broke. Vice-Admiral Bacon did not "make" the Dover route's tradition of safety, for he is the third officer who has commanded there in this war, but he brings his own brilliant qualities to maintaining that tradition. His staff have great confidence in him and so have his officers and men, and if they complain of overwork they recognize that even the flotilla at Admiral Bacon's command is almost insufficient for the vast work it has to do.

One aspect of the Dover patrol's work has already been dealt with, namely, the convoying of transports and hospital ships to France and back. Convoying, submarine hunting, and mine sweeping are the main branches of the Dover flotilla's work. There are other, but minor, branches, for example, the submarines which are based on Dover and the old Arrogant, a vessel of some 6,000 tons which was converted into a submarine depot in 1911-12. The Arrogant is probably as useful now as she ever was, though she never stirs out of the harbor for, if necessary, she can entirely refit a damaged submarine.

ONE PLOT FAILED.

The Kaiser Tried to Start Holy War Among Moslems.

Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, from 1898 had been cultivating Mohammedans in Turkey and had given the Sultan of Turkey to understand that Germany was the real protector of Islam around the world, even allowing the impression to be fixed that he himself was a Moslem, and that Germany's sympathies were with the Moslems.

Half-tone pictures have been printed in official Turkish papers in Constantinople showing the ruins of churches and cathedrals in Belgium that the German troops had destroyed, accompanied by the declaration that if these troops had been Christian they never would have destroyed a Christian church; therefore, they must have been Moslems. That argument seemed to be conclusive for a time in Turkey.

If the Kaiser had succeeded in precipitating a religious war, with the Mohammedans in their zeal attacking all non-Moslems who were neither German nor Austrian, the world would have been bathed in blood as never before in all history, and the rule of England and France and Russia would have been shaken to their foundation by the uprising of the Moslems in these different countries, but the reverse happened, contrary to every expectation of the Kaiser. From every Mohammedan country, even from the leading Mohammedans in Turkey itself, one universal protest was raised against Turkey's unholy and unwarranted alliance with Germany and Austria. This protest came from practically every Mohammedan country in the world. The rise of Arabia against Turkey was Arabia's protest against Turkey's alliance with Germany.

This attempt on the part of the Kaiser to precipitate a holy war not only resulted in the disruption of Mohammedanism, but in increasing the loyalty of Mohammedan countries to England, France, and Russia, and in the final repudiation of the Sultan of Turkey as the Caliph of Islam.

The alliance of Germany with Mohammedan Turkey has led many of the leading Germans to take the ground that Mohammedan countries are no longer in the field for missionary propaganda. Even in the face of the terrible atrocities perpetrated in Turkey, unquestionably at the suggestion of Berlin, their leaders are claiming that Mohammedanism must be recognized as a co-religion with Christianity to develop alongside of Christianity; that hereafter no German missionary society can look on Mohammedan peoples as legitimate objects of missionary endeavor. It has led even to high praise of Mohammedanism in official quarters.—James L. Barton, Foreign Secretary American Board of Foreign Missions.

The first industrial village for disabled soldiers and sailors is to be constructed in Lancaster, England, on a large estate given by Sir Thomas Storey. It is to be laid out with workshops, houses for married men and hostels or fraternal homes for others. IRRITATING FORM OF ITCHING PILES

A SOURCE OF CONTINUAL WORRY AND ANNOYANCE—SLEEP AND REST IMPOSSIBLE UNTIL RELIEF IS OBTAINED.

Bridgetown, N.S., February 2.—All classes of people are subject to piles, but especially those who are exposed to dampness. Teamsters, farmers, railroad men and laborers suffer greatly from this distressing ailment.

While there are plenty of remedies recommended as a treatment for Piles, Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only actual and guaranteed cure. It is truly wonderful how the merit of this preparation has become known throughout this continent and Europe.

But when a person has endured the torture of piles, the itching, stinging sensation, the sleepless nights of misery, the annoyance during the day when going about the daily work, he feels grateful for the relief and cure brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment and does not forget to recommend it to his friends.

Mr. E. G. Langley, Bridgetown, N. S., writes: "I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. Chase's Ointment. For about fifteen years I was troubled with piles and all the so called remedies that I used brought me no relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment and am glad to say that it has made a complete cure. It is nearly twenty years ago since I was cured and I have never been troubled with piles since. At one time I was away from home travelling a great deal, and I always carried a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment with me. Ever since I was cured I have been recommending it to everyone whom I knew to be troubled with piles."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

A Wonderful Island.

White Island, thirty miles distant from New Zealand, is probably the most extraordinary island in the world. It is an enormous mass of rock nearly three miles in circumference, rising 900 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds, which are visible for nearly 100 miles.

The island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small proportion of gypsum. Some years ago an attempt was made to float a company to work the sulphur, which is of high quality; but, strange to say, sufficient capital was not subscribed. Therefore, the export of sulphur from White Island is still very small.

In the interior is a lake fully fifty acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark cloud which envelopes the island.—Tit-Bits.

Shoelaces Replace Jewelry.

Girl workers in the danger buildings at Woolwich arsenal are not allowed to wear jewelry. They have therefore, hit on the idea of wearing colored shoe laces. The Cap Shop girls appeared one morning with bright emerald green ribbon on their shoes much to the envy of other departments. The next morning the whole factory was in the fashion, says Doctor A. K. Foxwell, the principal supervisor. Shoes were tied with blue, pink, red, white, rebwhite ribbons; with anything but the government boot lace of untanned leather. The fashion spread to the office and women clerks paraded the platform during the dinner hour with resplendent shoelaces.

The Ford Saves the Hay and Oats the Horses Eat

IT HAS been estimated that five acres of land are required to maintain one horse for a year, and that the same five acres would produce nearly enough food for two people. If 50,000 Canadian farmers each replaced one horse with a Ford, 250,000 acres would be added to the Nation's source of food supply and enough extra food made available to feed 100,000 people.

Just think what a great service this means to the country at the present time and the benefit to the farmers from the sale of food produced on this acreage.

A Ford car also saves the farmer a week or more of valuable time each year, which can be used for further productive work. The Ford travels three times as fast as a horse and rig—costs less to run and keep, and is far easier to take care of. With labor so scarce and high priced, time means money, so do not delay in getting your Ford.

New Country Residence For the British Premier Princely Gift to Nation

COLONEL SIR ARTHUR LEE, K.C.B., M.P., has presented his princely mansion of "Chequers," with its estate of 1,500 acres, to the British nation as a country residence for British prime ministers. Premier Lloyd George in accepting the gift, assured Sir Arthur Lee that: "Future generations of prime ministers will think with gratitude of the impulse which has thus prompted you so generously to place this beautiful mansion at their disposal. I have no doubt that such a retreat will do much to alleviate the cares of state which they will inherit along with it, and you will earn the grateful thanks of those whose privilege it will be to enjoy it."

This is but the briefest story of this "free gift in trust" to be "maintained in perpetuity as the official country residence of the British Prime Minister." Under the trust deed as drawn up by the donor "Chequers" is to be offered in turn and the order named to the Prime Minister, then to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, "in view of the ancient association of his office with the house," then to the British Foreign Minister, and then to the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, which, in the opinion of William R. Baich in the Boston Transcript, is a remarkable compliment to the United States. After the American Ambassador declines, the speaker of the House of Commons, the ministers for the navy, the army, and finally the first commissioner of works are to be invited. It is safe to say the speaker and the others before him in the list will never have the chance! Sir Arthur clearly foresaw the circumstances under which the prime minister might have his own country mansion, and the waiving of their rights by the chancellor of the exchequer and the British Foreign Minister in order to pay a compliment to the United States and its then importance in the affairs of the world. Sir Arthur may or may not have thought a bit further about the United States—and its niggardly care of its diplomats—when he inserted in his trust deed this princely paragraph:

"The main features of the scheme are, therefore, designed not merely to make 'Chequers' available as the official country residence of the prime minister of the day, but to tempt him to visit it regularly, and to make it possible for him to live there even if his income should be limited to his salary. With this object a sufficient endowment is provided to cover the cost of a permanent nucleus staff of servants, of keeping up the gardens and grounds, of maintenance and repairs, and other necessary outgoings. There is also a residential allowance for the official occupant, calculated in a fashion deliberately designed to encourage regular week-end visits." The trust fund will yield about $100 per annum from invested funds. The revenue from the farms is annually expected to increase this by several thousand dollars more. Wonderfully as Sir Arthur has thought out his gift, Americans will note this provision as the most delicate and generous compliment ever paid to the nation. Sir Arthur's entire trust deed is rare testimony to his mental equipment. His reasons for making the gift are simply stated and delightfully logical.

"This scheme is not a mere whim, but a carefully thought out policy based upon a long experience of political life and official conditions and of the beneficial effect that the climate and atmosphere of Chequers invariably exercises upon hard-working men of affairs. It is not possible to foresee or foretell from what classes or conditions of life the future wielders of power in this country will be drawn. Some may be, as in the past, men of wealth and famous descent; some may belong to the world of trade and business; others may spring from the ranks of the manual toilers. To none of these, in the midst of their strenuous and responsible labors, could the spirit and anodyne of Chequers do anything but good. To the city bred man especially, the periodic contact with the most typically rural life would create and preserve a just sense of proportion between the claims of town and country. To the revolutionary statesman the antiquity and calm tenacity of Chequers and its annals might suggest some saving virtues in the continuity of English history and exercise a check upon too hasty upheavals. Apart from these more subtle influences, the better the health of our rulers the more sanely will they rule, and the inducement to spend two days a week in the high and pure hills and woods will, it is hoped, result in real advantage to the nation as well as to its chosen leaders."

The restrictions on the happy occupant of Chequers are confined to one thing only. It is inconceivable that any tenant would wish to run counter to the trust deed. Sir Arthur lays it down:

"Another cardinal object of the scheme is to preserve so far as possible, the main architectural and archeological features of the house and surroundings in their present restored condition. It will, therefore, be provided, and strictly enjoined, in the trust deed that no alteration, mutilation, addition, or subtraction, shall be made to the principal features of the house."

SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Banana Cultivation.

It is not generally known that the banana is an annual. The fruit comes to maturity about a year after the shoot is planted, the trunk of the tree subsequently attaining a height of from eight to ten feet and a girth of thirty-six inches. From this trunk, which is of a fibrous nature, are thrown out long palm-like branches, at the junction of which appears the fruit, each group of bunches, numbering from four to twelve, being called a "hand" and each hand having eight or ten bananas upon it. A bunch of eight hands is the ordinary standard size of "shipping" fruit. From the root of the tree several shoots or suckers sprout, each of which in turn becomes a fresh tree. The life of the banana-tree, however, is not usually long, for it is felled after the fruit is gathered, and sometimes indeed during the operation. Jamaica contains many banana plantations, varying in number of trees from twenty-five thousand to two hundred thousand, for the most part cultivated by the small settlers in the different parishes. The cultivation is very primitive. The land being cleared by a big iron hoe, a hole is dug and the sucker is planted in it, in most cases nature doing all that is necessary; but in larger plantations the trees are planted with some degree of system in the form of squares, and trenches are dug for irrigation, the banana thriving best in damp stiff soil.

An Erroneous Death Notice.

Erroneous death announcements are extremely dangerous in China. The Jih Pao, one of the leading daily papers printed in Chinese in Pekin, was completely wrecked because of an announcement it printed of the death of General Chiang Kuei-ti of Jehol.

General Chiang was not dead, and thirty of his soldiers who happened to be in Pekin, visited the newspaper office and demolished it completely, charging that the paper had endeavored to ruin the political career of their leader.

The soldiers smashed the premises, piled all the type, broke the windows, and demolished the office furniture.

THE LOST TRIBES.

A Mystery of the Hebrew People That Has Defied Solution.

The "lost tribes"—or at least part of them—remain a mystery to this day. A portion of the Hebrew people—the tribes of Judah and Benjamin—returned from exile and became the ancestors of the Jewish people. The story of their return is recorded in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah.

Others, probably some of them belonging to the missing tribes of the northern kingdom, are believed to have returned from still remoter lands and mixed with the Jews in Palestine again (see Luke ii. 36), while a few at least probably mingled with the mixed population with which the king of Assyria colonized Samaria and who became the ancestors of the Samaritans. Many, however, remained in the Assyrian empire and lived in colonies throughout the east.

Various writers have claimed that traces of them had been found among the Afghans and also among the Tartars, the Nestorians and in India and Africa, but these are rather speculative ideas than substantial evidence. Josephus, the Jewish historian, wrote that the habitable globe was so full of Jews that there was scarcely a corner of the great Roman world empire where they might not be found.

A Natural History Note.

Insects recognize each other by smell. Among the bees each distinctive class of workers—the guard, the fanner, the pollen carrier, the wax-maker, the architect, etc.—has its own distinctive odor. And besides this, each bee has its own separate hive odor, which is its passport into its own particular home.

The average output of potatoes from Jersey is no fewer than 60,000 tons a year.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Joffre's Way.

Joffre had a genius for working fast. Even in times of stress there was no litter upon his desk, and anybody who had a reasonable errand could see him. Some little time before the Battle of the Marne an officer came with the request that fifty guns be sent to the position which he was holding.

He declared that it would be impossible for him to check the advance of the Germans without these fifty guns.

"You say you must have fifty?"

"Absolutely," replied the officer.

"You can't get along with fewer?"

"Impossible."

The General pondered a moment and then he wrote out an order. "Here," he said, "is an order for twenty-five. Now go away and don't bother me again."

Railroad in Siam.

The linking up of the Siamese Southern railway line with Singora and Trang, the most southern and important ports in the Siamese Malay states, has now been carried out, the line from Bangkok to these cities having been opened to traffic last year. According to the present arrangement the journey from Bangkok to Trang will occupy four days, two nights being spent at rest-houses erected at Chumporn and Tung Song. Travelers to Siam may now proceed from Singapore by way of Penang in the British Federated Malay states to Trang and thence by rail to Bang-kok. The total length of the southern line now under traffic is 272 miles, of which 575 miles represent the main line.

Weight of War on Universities

No other British institutions have been so vitally affected by the war as the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Their entire object was to train young men of the age and social standing that would be most likely to go to the front. From them have come in normal times a certain proportion of the officers of the regular army, and now that new units have been raised to almost indefinite numbers, and men who ordinarily would expect commissions have enlisted freely in the ranks, the diminution in the numbers of undergraduates has been extraordinary.

Many of the colleges have but 15 or 20 per cent. of their average attendance "up," and these are not the type of men who have given the universities their peculiar tone. For the most part, they are incapacitated for physical reasons from joining the army, and they have little of the love of athletics characteristic of the ordinary Oxford and Cambridge men. The "bloods," who had raised luxury and idling to a fine art, have been fighting and dying for months in the trenches, the athletes of the university crews and cricket and football teams were the first to answer the call to the colors, and even the average men have joined the army in one capacity or another. Only the medically unfit or the confirmed "slackers" have dared in such times as these to go up to the varsity.

To the teaching staff of the university the war has dealt a heavy blow. In spite of the endowments of the colleges, all of them are more or less dependent on fees from the undergraduates, and they saw a respectable portion of their incomes swept away, as it were, overnight. For example, in one college a tutor made in the May term before the war broke out, by lecturing and coaching, nearly $550, while his fellowship was worth $1,200 a year. Last May term he made not a single cent in fees, and he was wondering whether he would get from his fellowship for the entire year $600 or $700.

The reason that the fellowships have fallen so much in value is because many of the colleges have invested in university property. For example, at Cambridge a large number of undergraduates have to live in lodging houses licensed by the university. It has seemed to the colleges that they would at the same time insure a comfortable income to themselves and keep some sort of control over the lodging houses if they were to own them. But as the undergraduates suddenly disappeared, the lodging houses were left empty, and the leasees have been utterly unable to pay their rents. The colleges have been faced with the dilemma of dispossessing, and thereby ruining a set of worthy tenants with whom they have dealt for years, or of remitting the rents and pocketing the loss. To their credit let it be said they have stood by their tenants in this crisis and have seen their own incomes fall in consequence.

Still harder has been the fate of the independent coaches, who have had an important part in the university system. Although graduates of the university, they held no official position and had no official incomes, but, as they were a necessity, made very comfortable incomes from coaching undergraduates privately. Suddenly their pupils all left them and they were stranded.

Some relief has been afforded the university communities by the great demand of the Government for assistance. The dons skilled in science work and a good many of the other fellows have found jobs more or less lucrative in the Government departments. Moreover, the graduate as well as the undergraduate ranks of the universities have contributed to the army, and not a few of the younger fellows have laid down their lives in Flanders or the Dardanelles.

With the universities thus virtually shut off from their proper work as teaching institutions, the Government has turned their buildings to its own uses. The colleges have been found excellent substitutes for barracks. At Cambridge the largest college, Trinity, has an isolated set of buildings known as Wheweli's Court, although as a matter of fact it forms two small courts standing a little apart from each other.

Since the beginning of the war these have been taken over entirely by the military authorities. Though the names of the undergraduates still remain on the staircases, as in the old days of peace, their rooms have been emptied of their furniture and turned over to soldiers. Three of the older dons were willing to taste the new experience of carrying on their studies in the midst of a camp and clung to their familiar rooms, but every one else quartered in the buildings was a soldier. In one of the sacred courts a long trough covered with a rough pent-house acted as the washing place for the men, and in another a set of camp kitchens were set up for their cooking, while an ancient bathtub was used as a receptacle for the scraps.

At Caius College the general commanding the army of the East has his headquarters, as is proclaimed by a flag hung from one of the gates and the pile of bicycles left by the orderlies in the courts. Pembroke College in the King's Parade has been given up absolutely to the Officers' Training Corps, the overflow of which has had to be accommodated at Peterhouse, almost opposite. Nearly every college has from time to time had officers and men quartered in it, and not only are the courts, once held immune from everything but foot traffic, now cumbered with bicycles or the entrenching tools of the soldiers, but mounted officers have been seen riding through the gates.

A WOMAN'S HEALTH

Can Only Be Maintained by Keeping the Blood Rich and Pure

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy toils, while hurried meals, broken rest, and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headache, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is one always unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired, or depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others, it will surely do for you. Mrs. W. H. Alberry, Malorytown, Ont., says: "I was very much run down and suffered from weakness and nervousness. At times I did not know what to do, as I would shake all over, and would have to go and lie down. I was treated by several of the doctors, who said the trouble was bad blood and weak nerves, but they did not do me a bit of good. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they made me feel like a new woman. Later, when I was nursing my baby, I felt run down, and again took the pills, and my baby at six months weighed thirty-five pounds. It was this medicine that gave me the strength to nurse him, and both baby and myself greatly benefitted by it. I hope every suffering woman will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, as I did, for I have proved their wonderful merit."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As You View the World.

The world in which a man lives shapes itself chiefly by the way in which he looks at it, and so it proves different to different men. To one it is barren, dull and superficial; to another rich, interesting and full of meaning. On hearing of the interesting events which have happened in the course of a man's experience many people will wish that similar things had happened in their lives, too, completely forgetting that they should be envious rather of the mental aptitude which lent these events the significance they possess when he describes them. To a man of genius they were interesting adventures, but to the dull perceptions of an ordinary individual they would have been stale, everyday occurrences.—Schopenhauer.

English as a World Language.

English is well adapted to use as a world language because of its rich vocabulary and its grammatical simplicity. It is the literature of liberty and social equality. The fundamental hindrance to the spread of the English language as a world language is its irrational spelling. It is difficult because of the superfluity of letters and the confusion of representations. If these objections were removed and the proportional rate of increase of the nineteenth century continues English will be the language of the world."—De Witt Croissant at Chautauqua.

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

German Cavalry Strong.

Has Not Been Decreased by Trench Fighting, Says Correspondent.

Trench warfare has not diminished the German cavalry forces, as had been generally supposed, for information which has just reached the correspondent of the Associated Press on the French front shows the total of squadrons in the service to be even higher than it was at the mobilization in 1914. Changes, however, have been introduced in the mounted arm of the service by which some of the squadrons temporarily have been dismounted and utilized as infantry, while the formations have undergone considerable variation.

At preset the German army has at its disposal no fewer than 649 squadrons of cavalry, comprising active, reserve, mobile, ersatz, landwehr and landsturm units, but of these 144 have been separated from their horses and used as infantry. This figure compares with 440 squadrons on a peace footing.

When war began the German cavalry was at once formed into eleven divisions, each composed of six regiments of four squadrons. Besides those there were also the bodies of divisional cavalry attached to the active and reserve divisions of infantry.

Roumania's entry into the war made more cavalry formations necessary, and the number of organized divisions was at once increased to fourteen.

The spring of 1917 saw the end of the Roumanian campaign, and with this came a decrease of the divisional formations to six, while the divisions themselves were reduced from six regiments to four each. At the same time independent brigades of mounted troops were formed, of which the existence of at least five is known, each having three regiments of four squadrons each.

Nearly every infantry division is provided also with a unit of cavalry, whose strength varies according to the nature of the country in which the troops are operating.

From among the cavalrymen who, temporarily, are not employed on mounted duty at the front, twenty-three regiments of riflemen have been formed, which take their turn in holding trenches with the ordinary infantry formations. Each of these regiments is composed of four squadrons and a squadron of machine gunners.

Besides these, other units of cavalrymen selected from the regiments of the active army are from time to time used as infantry, but their exact numbers are not ascertainable.

Says corns stop hurting, then lift right off without one bit of pain

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus, without even one little twinge of pain.

You simply apply a few drops of this freezone on a tender, aching corn and the soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, with your fingers.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

BEDRIDDEN WITH RHEUMATISM

Felt That He Would Never Walk Again "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought Relief.

MR. LORENZO LEDUC

3 Ottawa St., Hull, P.Q.

"Fruit-a-tives" is certainly a wonder. For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism; being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine but without getting better; and thought I would never be able to walk again.

"One day while lying in bed, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me.

BERLIN FACTORIES NOW UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Kaiser Is Using Hunger To Break Up The Strike

BERLIN FACTORIES HAVE BEEN PLACED UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Workmen Have Been Ordered to Resume Their Work by 7 O'clock Monday Morning--National Demonstration Against the Arrest of Her Dutman--Liverpool Troops Execute a Successful Raid.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, February 2.—Seven Berlin factories have been placed under martial law and strikers ordered to resume their work by seven o'clock Monday morning at the latest, according to a Central News despatch from Amsterdam to-day. Their failure to return, it is announced, will be punished according to military discipline.

A national demonstration is being organized in Germany as a protest against the arrest of Herr Dittmann, an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam reports. Hugo Masse, a Socialist deputy, appealed to Chancellor Von Hertling to obtain the release of Herr Dittmann. The Chancellor said he was powerless as Berlin was entirely in the hands of the militia.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, February 2.—"The night passed in quiet," says to-day's official communication. "There was some artillery fighting in the region of Burnhampt-La-Hunt (Alsace). A raid north of Mortier Wood enabled us to bring back prisoners."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, February 2.—The steamer Montreal was sunk in a collision Wednesday, it was announced to-day. The crew was saved.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, February 2.—The Spanish note sent to Berlin, protesting the torpedoing of the Spanish steamer Giralda, requested an answer within forty-eight hours, a Madrid despatch to the London Mail asserted to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, February 2.—Organizations of radical Socialists, affiliated with local workers secretariat here, have decided to call an "indefinite general strike" Monday. Hard living conditions, due to the war, are said to be the principal cause of unrest.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, February 2.—The London Times published a despatch from Petrograd to-day stating that in order to acquire Russian money from foreign banks, the Government is refusing to allow foreign diplomats and consuls to withdraw money from Russian banks.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, February 2.—Martial law was proclaimed formally in Berlin, the proclamation being read in the Schlossplatz following the rolling of drums. An extraordinary court martial was announced.

The strike in Lemberg was reported to be growing.

The Frankfurter Zeitung demands that the Government find some solution to end the strike. During a riot Thursday at Spandau, a railway running to a factory was cut by the strikers.

A policeman was dragged from his home there and was badly beaten, according to reports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 2.—"During the night a party of Liverpool troops successfully raided the enemy's trenches southeast of Armentieres bringing back prisoners," the War Office reports.

"A raid attempted by the enemy north of Passchendaele was repulsed."

PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS DISCHARGED AT KINGSTON

The Kingston Whig makes the following references to Peterborough men discharged from the C.E.F. at Kingston:

1,063,066—Private J. T. Dobbs enlisted on 19th December, 1916, in the 247th Battalion in Peterborough. He transferred later to the 235th, with whom he went overseas, and was stationed in England at West Sandling. He was in that country four months. Returning last October. His home is in Peterborough.

454,217—Sergeant J. Graham, enlisted in June 12th, 1915, with the 59th Battalion, and left with the first draft. He transferred in England to the 39th and then to another Canadian battalion in France. He had two trips to France, and the last time was wounded in the ankle. He was twelve months in the fighting line. Peterborough is his home.

59150—Private S. C. H. Chambers, enlisted on the 22nd October, 1914, in the 21st Battalion at Kingston, and accompanied the unit overseas to West Sandling. Going later to France, where he was in action and wounded at St. Eloi, and was sent to England to the Manor House Hospital, Folkestone, and later at Cranbrook V.A.D. Hospital. (He was also in action at Messines and Ypres salient). He held a position in the Record Office, London, for fourteen months, and was five months in France. His home is in Peterborough.

Private Forsythe enlisted on the 6th November, 1915, in the 93rd Battalion, at Peterborough, and trained at Barriefield before going overseas the following July. In England his unit was stationed at Otterpool. Here he transferred to the 5th C.M.R., and accompanied them to France, where he was in action for three months on the Somme and Arras front, until his health broke down. He landed at Quebec on November 22 last. His home is in Bridgenorth.

FIRE STORY CAUSES ALARM

Evidenly many of the despatches that were sent overseas about the recent fire in Peterborough were much exaggerated. The other day Mayor Duncan received a cablegram from the Mayor of Peterborough, England, extending sympathy on the great loss sustained by the city. To-day a cablegram to Mr. R. J. Devey stated that his son, Gunner Harold Devey, of the 33rd Battery, was very anxious about the safety of his relatives, and wanted details of the fire. Apparently the impression has been created in England and France that the city has been nearly wiped out by fire

Herb. Dixon, Well Known Peterborough Boy, Writes Vivid Description of the Charge of the Canadians at Passchendaele

CONDITIONS TERRIBLE

Mr. A. E. Dixon has received the following letter from his son, Herbert C. Dixon, formerly a lieutenant in the Field Artillery, and afterwards transferred to the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry:

Dear Father,

You asked me to tell you something about the battle of Passchendaele. Well, we can't say very much, and when we send a letter in a green envelope, as this one is, we aren't supposed to mention war. However, I dont think the censor will be able to find anything wrong with what I will write. As soon as our barrage opened up, which was the heaviest ever known, we started over. Our platoon was first and I was at the first of it. When our guns opened up, of course, Fritz sent up his S.O.S., which is composed of all coloured flares; then immediately his guns opened up on us—and he had lots of guns there, too. It is a big salient, and he can concentrate all his guns on one point.

No Man's Land, which we crossed, was just marsh massed with barbed wire. Going across there the shell fire was terrific, and the noise was deafening, but when the Canadians are advancing they pay no attention to shells; their only idea is to get there. It is the excitement that makes a person forget everything. That marsh was very hard to cross. I was practically buried several times. As I was right at the front, I did not see many killed or hit; just the ones who were even with me.

Held Up For While.

The Huns' front trench hadn't been damaged much by our shells, so they held us up for some time. We had to bomb them out of there, and they didn't give up until they had to. They fought bravely, but they wouldn't fight hand to hand. They then threw up their hands and cried for mercy; every bone in their bodies shook. Of course we killed everything in sight. A fellow feels sorry for it afterwards, but at the time everyone was very angry; so many of our fellows were killed.

After that fighting, our numbers were decreased considerably. Still we went on up the hill, jumping from shell hole to shell hole, every man for himself. No orders were given from the time we started until we stopped. On top of the ridge were several pill boxes and any number of snipers scattered all over. When we had taken the pill boxes we could have gone, only there were so few men left—a couple in a shell hole here and a couple more over there. I stuck with my chum all the time, and neither one of us was hit. We stayed there all day under heavy shell fire, expecting a counter attack any time, but none came. I had only ten bullets left, and my chum had about the same, and there was no way of getting any more. That afternoon it started to rain, I suppose due to the guns.

Shell Holes Filled.

Our shell hole began to fill with

Russia's Political Prisoners Condemn A Separate Peace

General Sukhomlinoff Former Minister of War, Ex-Foreign Minister Tereschenko and Other Former Leaders Discuss the Present Situation.

ARE VERY PESSIMISTIC

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 2.— The grim Peter and Paul fortress, mystery prison of old departed days of Czarism, to-day is called "the best hole in Petrograd."

Some of its inmates themselves told me this in interviews which Bolsheviki government permitted three Swedish Socialists, Messrs. Grimlund, Niessen and Hoegland and myself, to have in their prison cells yesterday.

The fortress of St. Peter and Paul was the Czar's own particular prison spot. Only the most important of political prisoners entered there. Few emerged. The place was shrouded in mystery.

CONDITIONS ARE BETTER.

But Bolsheviki government's political prisoners, sixty in all, find the prison well lighted by electricity, the cells large and kept scrupulously clean, with plenty of windows and air. Not only that, but the prisoners of the new regime are given many liberties. They rise and retire as they please, they wear their own clothes, are permitted to receive visitors and allowed to send letters and books without censorship restrictions.

We talked to many noted prisoners. The first of these was General Sukhomlinoff, former Minister of War under the Czar.

"As a politician I am a Conservative Royalist," he said, "but personally, I thank the day when the Bolsheviki came into power. I am the goat of others of the entire system of Czarism. Despite my monarchistic convictions, I do not believe that Czarism has a chance of being revived."

Then, after a pensive moment, he continued:

"The entire world is perishing. Mankind and culture are being destroyed. Where will salvation come from?"

One of my visitors interjected:

"Why not try Socialism?"

"Perhaps," Sukhomlinoff answered, laughingly. "I do not know. I am unable to follow the world situation in prison.

TERESCHENKO'S VIEWS.

Next we entered the cell of former Foreign Minister Tereschenko, which Tereschenko shared with former Provisional Minister of Finance Bernadetsky. He had just read Trotsky's second speech to the Russian Pan-Soviet in which the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister revealed the possibility of a separate peace. Tereschenko violently attacked Trotsky's viewpoint.

"His policy is absolutely against Russian interest," he declared. "It is illogical and impracticable. A separate peace would be a misfortune for Russia and for the entire world. I tried my hardest to prevent this."

Bernardetsky and Tereschenko were very pessimistic over the future of Russia.

In next call we found M. Puriskevitch, a noted anti-Semite leader and reputed as actual slayer of the mad monk, Rasputin.

"Which do you consider the most important cause of the revolution," he was asked.

REDUCE RATIONS TO STARVE STRIKERS INTO SUBMISSION

Kaiser Is Using Hunger as His Ally in Bending His Striking Subjects to His Will—Thousands of Women and Children Will Suffer

CHARLOTTENBURG RIOTS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 2. — Hunger will stalk through Germany to-day—the Kaiser's ally is bending his striking subjects to his will.

Thousands of women and children, innocent victims of the German militarists determination to starve the protesting workers into submission, will come under the Governmental order to reduce the strikers' rations, effective to-day. The order was contained in despatches received through Zurich.

Back of this Kaiserist famine is the supreme war council's poorly veiled threat to massacre German citizens indiscriminately if other methods fail to put down the strike. The threat, in forbidding public meetings or gatherings of crowds, was couched in the words:

"If necessary to resort to arms, no distinction will be made between strikers and others."

Several casualties occurred Thursday in Charlottenburg, where 100,000 strikers participated in a bread riot, according to the Amsterdam Tyd.

Mounted police, ordering the crowds to disperse, were fired upon. They charged the demonstrators with drawn swords. Organized street fighting resulted, the strikers resisting from behind improvised barricades. A number of strikers and policemen were wounded.

THOUSANDS OF TROOPS FROM CHINA FOR USE OF THE ALLIES

General Chiang Says 500,000 Are Ready to Sail at Any Time and Another Million Men Are Now in Training

THE SHIPPING PROBLEM

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—China has millions of men for the Allies, 500,000 ready to fight, 1 million under arms, 2,000,000 in reserve, and 4 hundred million people to draw on, General Chiang, of the Chinese Mission, stated to-day.

This almost limitless man power is at the disposal of the Allies. Beginning with the 5 hundred thousand who will be sent to the trenches the minute they are asked for, according to Chiang, who has just arrived for a conference with the military chiefs here, "our potential strength is unlimited. We have more than 4 hundred million to draw from. Our co-operation in France depends entirely upon the needs of our Allies. We are willing to send as many men as they ask," Chiang asserted.

Upon Japan depends to a great extent the part China will play on the battle fields of Europe this coming summer, Chinese officials declared. Japan has transport facilities sufficient to carry large numbers of fighting men from Shanghai to Canadian or Pacific ports, where the first lap of their twelve thousand mile journey ends.

SLEIGH RIDE WAS ENJOYED

The Epworth League of the George street Methodist church had their annual sleigh-ride last night, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all who attended. Three bus loads toured the city for an hour, after which the young people were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis, 640 Aylmer street, where dainty refreshments were served and the balance of the evening most enjoyably and profitably spent. Miss Buck was convenor of the entertainment.

FRANK JENNE Says:

February is the quiet winter month of the clothing trade, the rush of winter buying is over and the spring trade has not begun.

During February we have ample leisure to cater to the needs of particular people. I wish to mention especially the famous Semi-ready, made-to-your-special-measure, suits.

Choose any cloth, any style from those we show, and have a tailored suit in four days time. Get your spring suit before spring prices begin. "Come to me."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, FEB. 2, 1918

PETERBOROUGH FAVOURED.

Things are hardly ever so bad that they might not be worse. This applies to the coal and fuel situation in Peterborough, which, in this respect, has been comporatively favoured. Things may have been better managed by the municipal authorities, or our coal merchants have been more alert, more farseeing, and foreseeing, than in other places, for the fuel situation in Peterborough, bad as we think it is, is far less serious and distressing than in other places. Elsewhere in Ontario, schools and public institutions have been closed, and there is much acute domestic suffering. We have not yet had to resort to extreme measures here, and this is cause for congratulation.

But bad as is the situation in Canada in regard to fuel, it is much worse across the border; and the fact that the United States, the source of our fuel supply, has released a reasonable supply to Ontario, it seems at the expense of her own people, shows a neighbourliness and consideration that we should not soon forget. In New York city, according to the latest despatches, factories, stores and public institutions, have had to close, and even hospitals are suffering from lack of fuel.

Things in the way of fuel supplies are bad enough here, and we should at the same time be grateful and regretful that they are not nearly so bad as in other places; and we should be particularly recognizant that the United States have permitted a supply of coal to come to Canada, even when that country is sertrely suffering from lack of coal.

The war has brought the Anglo-Saxon civilizations closer together—made them in one sense one big family.

The blows of the threatened great German offensive seem to be taking the form of strikes at home.

FIRE PROTECTION.

While our city fathers are busy studying ways and means of ending fires, they should pay some attention to ways and means of preventing their beginnings.

The tremendous waste of property, destruction of business, loss of employment, and no little loss of life due to fires in urban centres in Canada, are all the more deplorable when the fact is taken into account that most of these fires, in their origin, are preventable—in a word, due to carelessness of construction or neglect of surrounding conditions or precautions. The Municipal World, whose business is to deal with and know a good deal about municipal problems and conditions, graphically summarizes the salient aspects of the fire problem in these words:

"Four thousand two hundred men are employed by Canadian municipalities in waiting for fires to occur and then attempting to extinguish them. The cost of this service exceeds $4,000,000 a year. Most of this energy would be better employed if devoted to removing fire-breeding conditions and to enforcing proper regulations to prevent the occurrence of fires."

Here we have fairly authoritative endorsation of the necessity of taking the most complete precautions possible for the prevention of fires. When one merchant's safety, or the safety of a neighbour from danger of fires, depends upon the character of adjoining buildings, or those of closely situated neighbours, it seems imperative that the precautions against fire should be the work or the concern of the city authorities. So far as the law gives a council power—and if the power is not far-reaching enough, it should be legislatively made sufficient—the council should assume large and even drastic authority over construction.

No city council that had ordinary common sense and ordinary sense of responsibility, would ever have permitted the construction of buildings in the business section, with fire-trap "contraptions" like the mansard roof, than which hardly anything could be more fiendishly designed to facilitate the spread of fire beyond the building of origin.

It is obvious that substantial fire walls between buildings, carried well above the roof levels, are the plainest elementary precaution required to be taken to prevent the spread and sweep of fires. In the recent fires, had there been proper fire walls, instead of the incendiary mansard roof, it is ten to one that the fire would have been confined to the place of origin, where by reason of concentration of fire fighting effort, greater success at extinction would have been possable, and indeed, probable.

By all means, let the council get its fire-fighting equipment in the best shape. But it should at the same time provide conditions of construction of buildings, and conditions of environment, that are not a challenge to the starting and spread of fire.

It is obvious that strict building by-laws should be enacted and strictly enforced; that there should be provision for closer and incorruptible inspection to see that prescribed plans and styles of building designed to promote safety, are strictly carried out.

The most rigid inspection of electric wiring—whose defectiveness was the cause of at least one recent destructive fire, should be insisted upon. In a word, the whole field of building construction or reconstruction should be gone over, and the most complete measures of precautions to prevent the origin and spread of "accidental" fires, adopted and carried out.

We are at the mercy of so many conditions that cannot be foreseen, and are largely unpreventable, that it becomes us to do all that is possible to remove preventable and contributory causes of fire origin and spread.

German peace, would mean continuation of making pieces of women and children in London air raids.

A CANADIAN HUN.

There is very properly a most consistent endeavour to help the farmer to greater production, even at the expense of military efficiency—by exempting farmers' sons. But there are farmers, or at least one farmer—it is hoped there are no others—who helps himself to other people's money. In the neighbouring county of Hastings, a farmer has been convicted and fined for watering the milk delivered to a cheese factory. The magistrate who tried the charge found that on one day the defendant sent 875 pounds of milk to a cheese factory in the township of Thurlow; and of this 875 pounds, 21.59 per cent., or 182 pounds, was composed of added water. A fine of $25 and costs was imposed.

Now its all right to help the farmer to greater production, but self-help to greater production by way of the pump, is not to be encouraged. At any time, at ordinary times, a farmer who stole money by such means, is to be severely condemned; but at a time of such stress as the present, when we are making such tremendous sacrifices to overcome a Hun dishonesty, watering milk as a form of robbery becomes a crime, and the farmer who commits it is, in principle, no better than a Hun—a discredit to honest farmers, and a disgrace to honest citizenship.

VEERING.

"Increased production, however, depends to a very large extent on the solution of the labour problem. The labour shortage is considerably greater than the government thought when they arranged last year for sending another 100,000 men to the front through the Military Service Act."

The above is an extract from a Unionist paper, the St. John Telegraph, which supported Sir Robert Borden in the recent election. It is typical of the tactics now being followed in a certain section of the Unionist press in the face of the grave labour shortage which the government is called upon to meet.

The Liberal press pointed out before the last election, that supplies and food were vital to the armies in Europe and that these could only be sent if adequate labour were available in Canada. The Government, however, failed to appreciate the gravity of the situation, and refused to take cognizance of the needs and demands of labour for production.

Now, however, the practical problem of raising a hundred thousand men without paralyzing Canada's efficiency as a reservoir of supplies has forced the Government to give serious attention to the policy advocated by the Liberal party for a general mobilization of our national resources in whatever direction may be most powerful to help the Empire. That is why the Unionist press are beginning to emphasize the labour gravity and the need of food. Imperceptibly, but surely, they are endeavouring to educate the Government's supporters to a policy parallel to that advocated by the Liberal party. That is why rumours are being circulated of sending only fifty thousand men overseas, and retaining the remainder for agricultural production. The government faces the necessity of modifying its policy in the direction of Liberalism, and already its press supporters are endeavouring to pave the way. —Quebec Telegraph.

A PRACTICAL PLAN FOR SOLVING CANADA'S RACIAL PROBLEM

As time goes on and the inter-provincial problem is more thoroughly canvassed, it begins to appear that the suggestion of our Morning Confrere, that our difficulties might be solved by the appointment of a government commission, is meeting with much adverse criticism in the press at the hands of both French and English, Liberal and Conservative, without distinction. We have given our endorsation to the plan of our contemporary, in a general way; with the sentiment which has prompted it we are heartily in accord; but the special reception with which it is meeting, and the practical barriers which are being suggested, would indicate that in the working out of its essential details much difficulty would be experienced. The idea of bringing the various provinces together under auspices which will permit the complete airing of grievances on all sides is well inspired. It is when officialdom and legalism in the form of a government commission intrudes itself that the obstacles loom up.

The trouble between French and English in Canada is a spiritual one. It is mental, traditional, cultural. And that is the holy ground upon which an official government commission cannot tread. The commission could receive instances of the oppression of minorities contrary to the rights guaranteed them under the constitution. But these would, after all appear more or less trivial and isolated. It is not in the violation of legal rights that the causes of dissension are found. They must be sought only in the recesses of the spirit; in the words of our confrere, "the grounds of controversy have not been so much material as sentimental."

We know that the apple of discord at the present moment is found in the arena of federal politics. We do not wish to mix any spirit of partyism with this problem of racial amity. But it is blinding oneself to the facts, if the influence of politics on the present situation is ignored. Here, too, the letter of the law may not have been broken, whatever may be said of the spirit of the law. But the government has conducted its policy on lines directly at variance with the traditions, mentality and culture of one-third of the population of Canada. It is in dealing with a matter so indefinable, subliminary impalpable and delicate as this, that a commission might prove but an awkward instrument.

If this is true, and if for reasons of this nature the suggestion of our confrere for a commission does not meet, in its entirety, with the approval of the people, there is still no reason why it cannot be accepted as a basis for discussion—which was its professed object—though it should be transformed in its details. In such a case the suggestion of the Telegraph—a plan put forward as early as last August—would be that the Government commission be modified to an unofficial convention, composed of the press and clergy of the various provinces, who could thoroughly discuss the merits of the situation and make their final recommendations to the Government in much the same manner as is now done by the Irish Convention. Such a gathering, owing to its informality, could delve beyond the letter of the law, and by arousing a spirit of goodwill and tolerance, might contribute much toward bringing about a more united Canada. This proposal is, we believe, worthy at least of serious consideration.—Quebec Telegraph.

MUSKRATS IN LEAD IN BIG FUR MARKET.

Over 400,000 Disposed of in New York Sale.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—Muskrat was easily the feature of the third day of the annual winter fur sale here. A local dealer paid the top price of 95 cents each for naturals and $1.55 for blacks. Over 400,000 muskrats were sold in all.

The best minks brought $12.70; for leopards $18.00, being the top price. Large domestic moles brought 58 cents each. Compared with the October sale of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation these advances were shown: Leopard 20 per cent., Mole 10 per cent., Northern Mink 60 cent., per cent., South-western Mink 25 per cent., natural muskrat 60 per cent., black muskrat 50 per cent.

Total of the three days' sale is about $2,000,000.

EVADED LIQUOR LAW.

Packing Cases Shipped to Fictitious Consignees in Toronto.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—One of the channels by which intoxicating liquors has been shipped into Toronto for some time past has been blocked through the instrumentality of Inspector George Page of the Canadian Northern Railway, by the arrest at Ottawa of John Gossip, express forwarding agent for the railway company.

The latter pleaded guilty in police court to shipping liquor to fictitious consignees in Toronto in packing cases. These cases when placed on the trains were opened and the liquor transferred to suit cases and grips and distributed in Toronto. Several messengers in the employ of the C.N.R. are said to be involved, and warrants have been issued for their arrest.

WARNING TO HOARDERS.

98 Pounds of Flour Is Limit for Householders to Have.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—Drastic measures against persons hoarding food are being considered by the Food Controller. Warning is issued that householders and others may find themselves in an unenviable predicament if spoiled flour is found on their premises.

The bakers have recommended that the Controller communicate with all retail dealers in flour in Canada, requiring from them the names and addresses of persons who have purchased more than a 98-pound bag of flour during the past month.

"There is," says the Food Controller, "absolutely no necessity or excuse for Canadians buying more flour than is required for current needs. The belief that the new standard flour is a poor quality is entirely unfounded. Few people will be able to tell the difference between bread made from flour heretofore in use. Hoarding is therefore unnecessary, unprofitable, and unpatriotic, and food hoarded may be exposed as a result of measures now under consideration."

EFFICIENT FOOD

Dr. Alexander Bryce, M.D., D.P.H. (Camb.), a famous authority in dietetics, has compiled a table showing the number of calories per ounce in different foods.

Calories are the units of food values. The number of calories per ounce contained in food proves its value.

This is what Dr. Bryce found and published:—

	(CALORIES PER OUNCE)
Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes	103.
Eggs (poached)	48.3
Macaroni au Gratin	44.5
Milk	20.6
Oatmeal (cooked)	18.
Potatoes (baked)	32.7

Not one of these staple foods contains one half the number of calories per ounce that Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes do — some of them are less than a fifth efficient in calories.

This is a real test of food values.

Put Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes on your daily menu—they are good to eat three times a day. Delicious, digestible, nourishing.

Sold only in the original red, white and green package.

FUEL SAVINGS "DON'TS"

J. O. B. Latour, Chief Engineer, General Accident Assurance Co. of Canada, Toronto, Ont,, says:

1. Don't fill the furnace with the intention that there will be no necessity for any additional fuel for the next two to four hours. This is quite a common practice with heating boilers, and with bituminous fuel results in very great waste.

2. Don't regulate the draft by closing the ash pit door, but regulate it with a damper in the smoke flue or pipe between the boiler and the chimney. This also applies to any kind of furnace.

3. Don't allow any cracks in the brick setting of the boilers, because cold air will enter through these cracks and absorb the heat that should have been transferred to the boiler.

4. Don't permit the use of grates of any kind which are in bad condition. This will permit the unconsumed fuel to fall through to the ash pit and be shovelled out as ashes or waste.

5.—Don't use a grate that is larger than will permit the burning of at least 12 lbs. of coal per sq. ft. of grate per hour.

6. Don't permit any pipes or boiler surfaces to remain uncovered, unless it is necessary to transmit the heat through the surface of that pipe to the room in which it is located.

7. Don't permit any joint in the boiler or any pipe connected thereto to leak.

8. Don't permit any valve to leak which is located on a pipe supplied by the boiler. This is a very common source of loss. All valves should be positively tight when closed.

9. Don't attempt to control the quantity of condensation to be collected from any pipe or other apparatus by hand control. There is a large quantity of good serviceable traps to collect these returns of condensation and they should be returned from these traps to the boiler.

10. Don't permit any surface on the boiler exposed to the furnace heat to become covered with soot or ashes. The tubes should be cleaned at the very least daily.

11. Don't use live steam for heating rooms, liquids, or other substance when there is exhaust steam from engines or pumps available If the exhaust steam is not of sufficient temperature to heat the room, the liquids or other substance to the required temperature, arrange your heating to be done in two stages; for instance. water could be heated to nearly 212 degrees by exhaust steam, then passed to another vessel to be heated to the desired temperature with live steam.

12. Don't feed a boiler with cold water when there is exhaust steam available to heat it. Every eleven degrees in temperature that feed water is raised by heating by exhaust steam there is a saving of 1 per cent. in fuel and in winter time especially feed water is very seldom any warmer than 42 degrees If this water is heated 212 degrees it will then effect a saving of 15 to 16 per cent.

13. Don't allow the main steam valves of any engine or pump to leak. This is a very common fault, due to the fact that the leak is not seen.

14. Don't allow the piston of any engine or pump to leak. This is also a very common defect permitted to go on day after day simply because the leak is not seen.

15. Don't take it for granted that pipes that lead to sewers, blow-off tanks, or other places of discharge, are tight. If the pipe is warm between the stop valve and the source of discharge it will generally pay to investigate a little closer, because it generally is a sure sign of leakage, with great waste.

With the compliments of the "Canadian Manufacturers' Association."

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Nehemiah, 4th chap., 13th verse: Therefore set I in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places I even set the people, after their families, with their swords, with their spears, and their bows.

Nehemiah posted the guards, animated and encouraged them. What are your enemies in comparison with God, especially in opposition to Him? He is great above them to control them, and will be terrible when He comes to reckon with them. The reigning fear of God is the best antidote against the ensnaring fear of man. He reminds them for whom they fight—all that are dear to you in this world; therefore, behave valiantly. This gave a happy disappointment to the enemy. The Jews returned every one to his work with the more cheerfulness because they saw danger is over let us return to our safety should encourage us to go on with vigour in our work—as soon as dange ris over let us return to our work and trust God another time. The builders were not so secure as to lay down their arms. Thus must we watch always against our spiritual enemies, and not expect that our warfare will be accomplished till our work is done. While one-half was at work the other half was under arms.

Dividing their time between the trowels and the spears they are said to work with one hand and to hold their weapons with the other. Thus must we work out our salvation with fear and trembling, for in every duty we may expect to meet with opposition, so we must fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. Every builder had a sword which he could carry without hindering his labour. The Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, which we ought to have always at hand, and never have to seek for it, both in our labours and in our conflicts as Christians. Every true Christian is both a labourer and a soldier.

Care was taken to give an alarm upon the first intimation of danger. When workmen, it was requisite they should be dispersed wherever there was work to do, but when soldiers it was requisite that they should be found in a body. Thus should the labourers in Christ's building be ready to unite against a common foe. The inhabitants of the villages were ordered to be ready to help. Nehemiah and his men kept close to their business. Thus ought we to be always on our guard against our spiritual enemies, not only as here, while it is light, but when it is dark, for they are the rulers of the darkness of this world. It was a sign that their hearts were upon their work when they were at all times ready for service. Satan fears to assault the vigilant Christian, but we should never forget that our God fights for us. Thus must we wait till the close of life before putting off our armour. Then we shall be welcomed to the rest and joy of our Lord.

Sanballat and his companions, not daring openly to attack the Jews, formed a scheme to draw Nehemiah away from his work, and to slay him. But their importunity neither induced him to yield nor to have any words about their wicked intentions. His care was that the work might not cease. He says nothing of his jealousies nor reproaches them for their treacherous designs; but gives them a good reason, and one of the true reasons, why he would not come.

Four times they attacked him with the same solicitations, and he returned the same answer. We must never suffer ourselves to be overcome by the greatest importunity to do anything sinful or imprudent; but when attacked with the same temptation must still firmly resist it.

When baffled in this design, they formed a more dangerous plan. Sanballat endeavours to impress Nehemiah with an apprehension that his undertaking to build the walls of Jerusalem was generally represented as aiming to make himself king and to shake off the Persian yoke. Sanballat pretends to inform Nehemiah as a friend, hoping by this means to take him off his business. This is written to him in an open letter, that the contents being known to the people might incite them to leave the work. But Nehemiah was aware of what they aimed at, and therefore not only denied that such things were true, but that they were reported; he was better known than to be thus suspected. We must never omit known duty for fear it should be misconstrued; but while we keep a good conscience let us trust God with our good name.

In the midst of his complaint of their malice, Nehemiah lifts up his heart to heaven in a short prayer. It is the great support of good people that in all straits and difficulties they have a good God to go to, from Whom by faith and prayer they may have grace to silence their fears, and strengthen their hands. When in our Christian work we are entering upon any difficult task, this is a good prayer to use: "O God, strengthen my hands, arm me with holy resolution to do our duty."

The enemies of Nehemiah now try to drive him into the temple for his own safety. They made use of a pretended prophet and prophetess to persuade him to quit his work and retire for his own safety. They pretended to have communion with God and to be interested in their country's welfare; but Nehemiah bravely put the temptation aside and firmly resolved not to yield. He dreaded offending God, and asks Him to reckon with his enemies for their base designs upon him. He proceeds with his work and finishes the wall of Jerusalem.

The wall was begun and finished in fifty-two days; yet we have reason to believe that they rested on the Sabbaths. It is supposed that Nehemiah returned to the Persian Court after all his work was done, and afterwards came back to Jerusalem with a commission. He placed his brother and Hananiah over the city in his absence. There were many in Jerusalem that feared God, but Nehemiah was prominent in God's service and excelled in virtue and godliness. He gave orders about the shutting of the gates and the guarding of the walls.

The walls enclosed the same ground as formerly, but few of the houses had been built. Nehemiah knew that the safety of a city under God depends more upon the inhabitants than upon the walls. He designed to bring the captives back to Jerusalem and build the city. In closing, observe what he says; he owns God supreme: My God put it into my heart. May we all be under Divine guidance as Nehemiah was.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

Held 30 Months In German Camp

ENGLISH TREATED BADLY.

Quarters Unprotected from Rain and So Cold That Sleep Was Impossible.

NEW YORK—Having been interned for thirty months in a German prison camp at Holzmunden until he was almost dead from starvation, Rubin Maurer, a Russian, arrived in this city several days ago with stories of the inhuman treatment of prisoners of war and interned civilians by Germans, and of the great shortage of food in the Central Empire.

Maurer, who lost a leg in an accident when a youth, is 41 years old, and lived in Germany from the time he was 9 months old. Unable to speak Russian he was taken for a spy at the beginning of hostilities and interned, together with his German wife and 10-year-old daughter, though the latter was subsequently released.

Several thousand French, Belgian, and English prisoners, as well as a good many allied civilians, were confined in the prison barracks at Holzmunden. Each barrack housed 126 persons, and a dozen pieces of pressed coal were allowed per day for a barrack.

"As a result," said Maurer, "the barracks were constantly cold and because of faulty construction the rain trickled in from the roof and the floor was covered with pools of water. Most of the prisoners became sick and rheumatism was a frequent complaint. Because of the cold we were forced to steal coal from the supply kept in the vicinity. Those who were caught were sentenced to spend five days in solitary confinement on bread and water.

"At the beginning we received about a pound of bread a day. Most of the bread consisted of potato flour, and was unpalatable. Twice a week we were supposed to get meat. Though entitled to ninety grams each we seldom got as much as that as the meat was appropriated by the German workers in the kitchens. The fish that we occasionally got was filled with worms, and we were unable to eat it.

"The English were treated worse than the other prisoners. They were given more work to do, and the officers and guards continually heaped curses on them with the frequent malediction: 'Gott strafe England.' Once a German sentry saw me offer a cigarette to a British soldier, and he raised his arm to strike me, but refrained when he saw my condition. Smoking was forbidden in the barracks, and I saw a guard lay open a Pole's arm from wrist to elbow with a bayonet because of an infraction of the rule.

"We were supposed to retire at 7 o'clock, but because of the intense cold we were unable to sleep and kept walking up and down most of the night to keep warm. The Spanish Consul at Hamburg, who was supposed to look after the welfare of the French and Russian prisoners, used to visit the camp once a month. When he arrived a bugle would sound and we were all supposed to retire to the barracks in order not to acquaint the Consul with the manner of treatment afforded us. I have frequently seen French prisoners refuse to heed the bugle and line up before the Consul with their food cans exhibiting to him the character of the food supplied by the Germans. For this the Frenchmen were placed under arrest for five days and promises were made that the condition would be remedied. A change in the character of the food would take place for a day or two, but afterward conditions would be the same as ever.

A RECORD OF SUCCESS

North American Life Had Best Year in Their History

The Policyholders of the North American Life who are virtually the shareholders, have every reason to be thoroughly satisfied with the results of the Company's operations last year as shown in the 37th Annual Report just come to hand. Policies issued and revived during the year 1917 amounted to $12,535,832.00 representing the largest sum ever written in a single year since the Company's inception. The total amount of Assurance now in Force has reached $65,213,023.00, a net increase during the year of $5,528,511.00.

The President, Mr. L. Goldman, in addressing the Annual Meeting of the Policyholders, pointed out the significant fact that during the past year over One and a Half Millions was paid to Policyholders, including $248,857.65 in Dividends alone, while only $6,000 was paid to Guarantors. At the same time the Company announces that the large sum of $310,967.66 has been apportioned for Dividends in 1918. This is indicative of the fact that in this Company the Policyholders' interests are paramount.

That the Company is fully living up to its motto, "Solid as the Continent," is evidenced by the further increase in Assets, bringing them to $17,268,471.46, while the Net Surplus held on the policyholders' account has reached the splendid sum of $2,774,854.38. The Statement shows a considerable increase in Bonds and Debentures held which is to be accounted for by the Company's liberal purchase of Government Bonds during the year. Every feature points to the progressive policy pursued along with that important factor, the solid character of the Company's Assets.

Appendicitis Operations Not Always Necessary

Internal Bathing Relieves the Cause.

Your physician will tell you that Appendicitis is an inflamed condition of the little sack called the Appendix at the lower right-hand corner of the Colon or large intestine. By cleansing this Colon with purified warm water by the "J. B. L. Cascade" this sack is cleansed and the inflammation subsides. Hundreds of operations have been avoided by using the warm water cure for Appendicitis. Mr. Jas. McLaughlan, 91 Evanston street, Winnipeg, writes:—

"I had spent over fifty dollars with doctors trying to cure Appendicitis. Finally the doctor said I must go to the hospital at once for an operation. Your advertisement interested me. I bought a "J. B. L. Cascade," which relieved me at once, and am now completely cured. Never felt better in my life; all pain and soreness gone, and I eat and sleep like a boy. I am grateful to Dr. Tyrrell for this wonderful health-giving invention."

95 per cent. of all human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the Colon. Internal Bathing with the "J. B. L. Cascade" keeps this large intestine as free from all waste and as clean as nature demands it should be for perfect health. Ask Warne Drug Co., Peterboro, for booklet called "Why Man 6 To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." It is free. They will also be pleased to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you.

Society Elopment Has Its Sequel in New Divorce Cases

Wife of Sir Clifford Sifton's Son Applies on Statutory Grounds—Fourteen Applications To Be Heard By the Senate—Divorce Reform Suggested

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—While the crop of divorces to be considered this year by the Senate Divorce Committee promises to be light—so far there are but fourteen applications—they will make up in interest by the prominence of some of those involved.

The greatest interest will centre in the application for a bill of divorce which Jean Donaldson Sifton seeks from Capt. Winfield Burrows Sifton, the second son of Sir Clifford Sifton. Their marriage several years ago created a sensation in society circles in New York and Ottawa. They eloped in an automobile from New York city and were married by the wayside.

Capt. Sifton enlisted when the war broke out and has been in France and England for some time. The present residence of both Capt. and Mrs. Sifton is given as London. The grounds for divorce are the statutory ones. Last year a case involving prominent people in society and military circles was heard when Major-Hamilton Gault sued for a divorce from his wife.

There are several other divorce applications of prominent people which promises to make the Senate Divorce Committee a popular place this coming session. Mary Clay Ewart, of Winnipeg, is suing for divorce from Alan Campbell Ewart, a well-known Winnipeg barrister.

An Ottawa case of interest is the application by Charles Kenneth Graham, a Hull barrister, belonging to one of the oldest families in the Ottawa district, from his wife, Margaret Catherine Jane Rose Graham, who was formerly a Miss Malloch, of Ottawa.

Divorce Reform.

Incidentally it would not be surprising if some ow the new Western members forced again in the House the question of Senate reform. Mr. W. B. Northrup, former member for West Hastings, who was the chief advocate of divorce reform in the last Parliament, was not elected last December, but it is intimated that despite his absence the question will not be allowed to drop.

The chief objection to the present system comes from the Western Provinces on the ground of the expense. A divorce brought by anyone from the West is a most costly process, as the expense of bringing witnesses runs into hundreds, if not thousands of dollars. In addition to the objection of the cost, which it is claimed makes it a rich man's luxury, objection is taken to the mode of the court. It is claimed that Senators are not a suitable body to hear cases and that they, as well as members of Parliament, are swayed often by lobbyists.

Uniformity Desired.

It is also claimed that there should be uniformity throughout the whole of Canada. In 1869, when Confederation was formed the three Maritime Provinces had divorce courts, of their own. They were allowed to retain these courts, and they still sit. British Columbia also had a divorce court and entered the union in 1871 on the understanding that its court would be retained. Ontario and Quebec not having divorce courts decided to have their cases reviewed by Parliament. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta also have no courts, and applications must be made to Parliament through the Senate Divorce Committee.

Opponents of any change in the system claim that divorce courts, with less expense, would increase greatly the number of cases. Statistics would seem to bear out this contention. Outside of Prince Edward Island which has an almost spotless record, in proportion to the population, there have been far more divorces granted by the divorce courts of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia than by the Dominion Parliament. Prince Edward Island has granted but one divorce from 1868 to the present time. This was in 1918.

Divorce Figures.

Since 1868 there have been granted by the Nova Scotia divorce court, 221 divorces. New Brunswick has granted 145 applications and British Columbia no less than 256. In recent years the crop of divorces in British Columbia has been growing. From 1909 to 1916 there were granted no less than 145. In addition in British Columbia there have been granted 13 judicial separations. Since Confederation the Dominion Parliament has authorized 298 divorces. Of these, 191 were to Ontario parties, 59 from Quebec; 21, Manitoba; 18, Alberta; 9, Saskatchewan, and 6 were granted before the formation of Saskatchewan and Alberta as Provinces.

Russia's Political Prisoners Condemn

"I will put it in one word, "Rasputin," he replied. "The complete overthrow of the old regime was necessary. The Czar was surrounded by women and children and mad men.

"I was the first openly to attack Rasputin in the Duma for corruption under the old regime. But, alas, my criticism and my warnings came too late."

He was likewise very pessimistic over the peace situation.

MEANS RUSSIA'S BETRAYAL.

"Peace with Germany now will mean betrayal of Russia," he declared. "It will mean a new war five or ten years hence. The Slavs and the Germans cannot rule side by side. One or the other must yield."

He expressed his "personal respect" for the German Kaiser, remarking, "the man is a devil, but he's a man in comparison with Czar Nicholai" "Russia," he concluded mournfully, is being split and ruined. Our power is lost."

He laughed bitterly as we left.

Darkness had come over Peter and Paul fortress as we stepped out into the dim prison church, where a lonely Sister knelt over the marble graves of former Czars. Her praises for their souls went up from the prison they built to perpetuate their power—the prison now by a strange caprice of fate, occupied mostly by those who fought the Czar, in the name of the people, but who are now themselves called enemies of the people.

TAX ON ROYAL REVENUE.

Grand Duke of Baden Refuses Suggestion of Deputies.

GENEVA, Feb. 1.—Seven deputies in the Landtag of the Duchy of Baden, representing all parties, called upon the Grand Duke of Baden and demanded that, owin gto the serious financial situation, the usual taxation should be applied to the royal revenues and domains, according to the Volkstimme of St. Gall. The reply was an unequivocal refusal. The matter will now be discussed in the parliament of Baden.

KEEP LITTLE ONES WELL IN WINTER

Winter is a dangerous season for the little ones. The days are so changeable—one bright, the next cold and stormy, that the mother is afraid to take the children out for the fresh air and exercise they need so much. In consequence they are often cooped up in overheated, badly ventilated rooms and are soon seized with colds or grippe. What is needed to keep the little ones well is Baby's Own Tablets. They will regulate the stomach and bowels and drive out colds, and by their use the baby will be able to get over the winter season in perfect safety. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cts. a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Announcing the new bigger Comfort bar

The Comfort Soap bar is now much larger. It's the same soap absolutely, but we are giving you a bigger bar for the same money. We do this because we are withdrawing all premiums as it is now impossible to get satisfactory premium goods owing to the war.

No Premiums -but more Soap

Dozens of factories from which we used to buy premiums are now making more necessary war supplies. Others again cannot ship, being across the ocean. The new premiums being offered us are away under Comfort Soap standards so when our present stock is exhausted we will not issue any more —certainly not until after the war.

But we can still buy the splendid materials that go into Comfort Soap, so we have decided to make the Comfort bar materially bigger, right away. There's where we can give you the same, old splendid-quality soap—only more of it.

We can't give you good Premiums but we can make it up to you in Soap.

All Comfort wrappers now out in the stores will be redeemed as heretofore but the wrapper on the new big Comfort bar will not be good for premiums.

You will meet the bigger Comfort bar any day now at your grocer's. Give it a friendly reception. It means more value in the wash tub. For a while yet you may be getting the old bar—it's just as valuable, the wrapper being still good for premiums.

Cheese Yielded $700 To Each Patron To Factories That Sold On Lindsay And Local Boards

The cheese sold on the Peterborough and Lindsay Boards last season reached the grand total of $750,066.27 cents, according to a reliable summary of the sales. Some of the facts pertaining to the dairy industry in these two counties during the past two years will probably prove of general interest. A statement of the output and value of the factories is as follows:

1917—3,552,259 lbs., worth $750,066.27.
1916—3,620,679 lbs. worth $668,947.40.

From these figures it will be noticed that although production declined last year 58,420 pounds, the actual financial returns increased $81,118.87.

Last year 37 factories that sold on the Peterborough and Lindsay Boards represented 1,875 patrons.

On that basis each patron received $700 from this branch of agriculture. The average price paid last year for cheese was .02½ cents higher than the average for 1916.

A sketchy review of the industry shows that the first cheese factory operated on the co-operative plan east of Toronto was established in the township of Sidney, Hastings County, on the road between Trenton and Belleville, through the efforts of the late Ketchum Graham, M.P.P., in the year 1866 or 1877. Thirty years later nearly 100 factories and to-day Eastern Ontario counts about 900.

Stimulated Production.

With the introduction of the cheese factory came the system of mixed farming and the very large increase of live stock of all kinds. This has resulted in increased soil fertility, the great underlying principle of successful agriculture. Proof of this is found in the older sections of cheese making, where farms are producing double and treble more than they were 50 years ago. Most of the hay, straw, coarse grains, roots, etc., also the by-products from cheese and butter making, whey and skim milk, are being bed on the farms and returned to the soil by manure. Concentrated and valuable food products are being sold in the form of cheese, butter, milk, meats, etc. Under this system of agriculture, this country has improved and grown prosperous.

The decision of such board shall, subject to appeal to the central appeal judge, be final therewith.

"On an appeal to the central appeal judge he may direct such further medical examination as may seem expedient."

FARMERS' REPRESENTATIVES ARE DONE AWAY WITH

New Order-in-Council Provides That Military Representatives Will Henceforth Be Known as Public Representatives and That They With the Registrars Shall Guard the National Interest in Connection With Production of Food Stuffs

The following order-in-Council has been passed:

Whereas, the Acting Minister of Justice, with the concurrence of the Minister of Militia and Defence, and the Minister of Agriculture, reports that for the better and more economical administration of the Military Service Act, it would be advantageous to combine the functions of registrars and deputy registrars appointed under the said Act with the functions performed by persons authorized by the Minister of Militia and Defence under the said Act to enter and prosecute appeals from the grant of exemptions by tribunals and those performed by representatives of the Department of Agriculture pursuant to the provisions of the Order-in-Council of the 3rd day of December, 1917, (P.C. 3349) and that for such purposes certain amendments and additions are required to the Military Service Regulations established by the Order-in-Council of the 19th October, 1917, (P.C. (2958).

Therefore, His Excellency the Governor-General in Council on recommendation of the Acting Minister of Justice with the concurrence of the Minister of Militia and Defence, and under and in virtue of the powers conferred by the Military Service Act, 1917, and the War Measures Act, 1914, or otherwise, is pleased to make the following Regulations and the same are hereby made and enacted accordingly:

1. Paragraph 11 of the Military Service Act is repealed and the following substituted therefore:—

11. Registrars shall be deemed to be authorized by the Minister of Militia and Defence to exercise the right of appeal conferred by Section 10, sub-section 1 of the Military Service Act, and to appoint persons to act as public representatives for each local or appeal tribunal.

2. The military representative shall hereafter be known as the "public representative" and the Military Service Regulations shall be read as amended accordingly.

3. It shall be the duty of registrars and public representatives to guard the national interest in connection with the production of food stuffs and otherwise and to cause appeals to be entered from the decision of any tribunal in arriving at which due weight has not been given to any national interest.

4. If, after an Order to Report for Duty has been issued to any man, it appears that the facts are such that if they had been known before such Order was issued, an appeal from the decision of the tribunal should have been lodged, the registrars shall report such facts to the General or other Officer Commanding the Military District, who shall cause enquiry to be made and shall advise the registrar of the result of such enquiry and whether or not leave of absence without pay has been granted to the man concerned.

CAN DEMOCRACY BE BEATEN?

Sir Edward Carson Sums Up the Present State of the War.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Sir Edward Carson, addressing the British Empire Producers Organization, said the present was a critical time, both for ourselves and our enmies. He believed the position had resolved itself into this: Would autocracy discipline for war show a greater endurance and courage than a league of democracies trained for peace? The real issue war: Could democracy when attacked defend itself? We all wanted peace, but the recent speeches of the Austro-German leaders had not offered an honourable peace. We were told we must give up Aden, Gibraltar, the Falklands, Hong Kong and Malta. "As long as this is the enemy dream," Sir Edward declared, "this country down to the greatest pacifist, will have nothing to do with it."

"ROBINSON CRUSOE" A DELIGHTFUL EXTRAVAGANZA

Old Favourites of "Aladdin" Win Fresh Laurels in Magnificent Production at the Grand—Will Be Repeated To-night.

MANY SONG HITS

Local theatre-goers, who, remembering the delightful performance of "Aladdin" last year, were looking forward with keen anticipation to the appearance of Mr. Stuart-Whyte's splendid company in the extravaganza "Robinson Crusoe," had their expectations more than realized at the Grand last evening. With a wealth of musical numbers, delightfully rendered, a rich mine of clean comedy and funny situations, a lavish scenic investiture, pretty costumes worn by pretty girls, clever dancing and entertaining specialities, "Robinson Crusoe" was charming from the opening chorus until the singing of the National Anthem by the company.

Last night's audience was delighted to find some of their old favourites of the Versatiles and of "Aladdin" in the cast. Miss Zara Clinton, graceful and beautiful as ever, was most pleasing as "Robinson Crusoe." Her singing has lost none of its appealing charm, and her songs last evening were most heartily enjoyed, especially her soldier favourite, "Take me Back to Dear Old Blighty." Mr. Hamilton Earle contributed a splendid offering of vocal numbers. Mr. Harry Hoyland, always amusing and entertaining, was at this best as Bill Aikins, providing many a hearty laugh. Mr. J. V. Barrett-Leonard, another old friend, was another heavy contributor to the success of the evening. Mr. Victor Dyer was successfully cast as the "Widow Crusoe," while the song numbers of Miss Madge Locke, Miss Anne Lochead and Miss Pauline Harvey were delightfully presented. Clever dancing numbers were given by the Van Vlissinger dancers.

There are eleven scenes in the play, the first being "Davy Jones' Locker under the Sea."

"Robinson Crusoe" will be presented at the Grand again to-night, and a record audience may be looked for.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

KAUFF ELIGIBLE FOR WAR.

Giant Outfielder Waives Exemption Before Draft Board.

POMEROY, Ohio, Jan. 31.— When called before the local draft board here to-day to answer his question aire, Benjamin Michael Kuff, centre-fielder of the Giants, waived all exemption claims and was placed in Class 1. Kauff stated to the official that he was ready for the call to arms at any time and would be glad to journey to France. He will take a physical examination soon, and if passed may be mustered into the service. One of Kauff's arms is shorter than the other and physicians have said he would not be accepted by a military board. Kauff made no claim for exemption on this score in his answers to the questionaire.

MILITARY SERVICE COUNCIL TO HAVE FULL SAY.

Ottawa, Feb. 1. — Carrying out what is explained to be a matter of office readjustment, an order in council has been passed giving the military Service Council practically the whole say in dealing with exemptions under the Military Service Act. Heretofore in the Appeal Tribunals representatives of the Militia Department have been present in an unofficial capacity. They are now to be there as representatives of the government and the public. To prevent duplication of authority, the whole question of exemption is to be handled by one branch, the Military Service Council, operating through the registrars.

THE "AUCTION BLOCK" COMING TO THE EMPIRE

A New and Thrilling Drama Portraying Some of the Sordid Ways of Present Day Parenthood and Girlhood

"The Auction Block" will grip and hold from the first moment to the last. The life action which as made Rex Beach's novels loved wherever books are known fills every reel; there is a "punch" in every scene. Among the more stirring moments are a fight in a New York gambling house raided by the police; the overturning of a great pot of molten steel in a Pittsburg mill and the engulfing of a score of workmen; the lavish banquet given by the steel millionaire at which the "souvenirs' for the young women are golden meshbags, and so on almost without number.

The story of Rex Beach's greatest picture, "The Auction Block," which is to be shown at the Empire Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, 6th and 7th February, is the life story of a beautiful girl, Lorelei Knight, who is raised by her parents for the specific purpose of being placed for sale to the highest bidder in the matrimonial market.

In due course of time Lorelei meets the dissolute son of a millionaire, and, in accordance with the family plan, marries him. It so happens, however, that the young man is not as wealthy as was at first supposed; and when Lorelei learns this and he finds that he has been duped, they go their separate ways.

Things go from bad to worse, the situation, as it develops, involving the brother, who has now become a blackmailer of the lowest order. All the elements conspire to compromise Lorelei and bring her to an awakening about the slough of despond into which she has fallen. With the awakening comes the desire to help her young husband, who now is also at the lowest depths of despair.

At last Lorelei can stand it no longer, and she leaves him. This is the one thing needed to bring him to his senses, and he sets himself to work for but one thing, to win her love. From this situation develops an ending that is as thrilling as it is eminently satisfactory, bringing the young couple together with a full understanding and appreciation of the path of rectitude.

A Suspect Of Indecent Assault Gave Detectives A Busy Five Minutes In A Bolt To Escape

The unexpected happened this morning when Angus McNaughton was being lead from the police station to Roy's Studio. As a consideration to him, he was not handcuffed. He started off a pace ahead of Detectives Newhall and Meagher, but had gone only a few yards when he bolted down Simcoe street like a whippet. He turned at Queen street with the Detectives recovering the ground they had lost at the outset. McNaughton raced east on Hunter street with Detective Meagher close behind him. He circled around the gas company's block and was returning up Simcoe street when he dashed into the arms and against the night stick of Detective Newhall, who had anticipated his route by continuing down Simcoe street, and planting himself in a convenient ambush. It was a short sharp chase, but an exciting one. Newhall pounced on to McNaughton, running at full speed west to Simcoe street. A sharp shaking and a persuasive application of the baton finished McNaughton's flight, and he walked off to face the camera, doubtless for an extensive enquiry among the police offices of the country. The Detectives took no further chances with him, and the appearance of liberty accorded him was denied him in the rest of the conspicuous trip.

A serious Charge.

McNaughton was charged in police court this morning with indecent assault, and was remanded until four o'clock this afternoon. A few nights ago a girl returning from Ashburnham was accosted by a stranger whose indecent suggestion caused her to scream. The man immediately fled. The police were notified and McNaughton was arrested as a suspect.

It is stated that McNaughton was recently at the Collegiate Institute ostensibly canvassing for subscriptions to Collier's war book of which he claimed to be an agent. It is understood that the girls were later cautioned against the approaches of a stranger, who it was feared was a "white slaver."

This year's estimates provide for an expenditure of $5,400, or $900 higher than last year.

Will Accept Offer.

A letter was read from Mr. E. H. O. Hall, stating that twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of debentures held by the Nicholls Park Trustees would fall due in June, and if the City wished to renew them the Board would take the debentures at six per cent., the City to pay the legal expenses. The committee decided to recommend that the offer be accepted.

A letter was read from the Ontario Association of the Blind, asking the Council to petition the Ontario Government to appoint a permanent commission for the care of the blind.

A. Longo was refused a refund of $25.00 for a pack pedlar's license which he did not use. Ald. Edgar objected to the practice of returning license fees, claiming that it interfered with the revenue received by the city, and which formed the basis for the estimates.

Tax Collector Green made an application for an increase in salary. The matter was laid over.

The usual grant of $75.00 will be made to the Peterborough Poultry Association.

"DESERTERS" IN UNIFORM.

They Hadn't Waited for the Draft Call, But Enlisted.

OTTAWA, Jan. 31. — Statistics of men drafted under the Military Service Act are now in course of preparation. Delay has been largely caused by errors in classification due to the heavy pressure under which the staffs of the registrars have been working. It has been found that in some hundreds of cases men actually in uniform have been reported as defaulters, and allowance for these has to be made. The men, knowing they would be drafted, had voluntarily enlisted and the fact of their enlistment has not been reported to the district registrar. In consequence they were listed as defaulters. Instructions have been issued calling for statistical returns.

VIENNA'S GRAIN WAREHOUSES ON FIRE.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The grain warehouses of the city of Vienna are afire and enormous damage has been caused, according to a Vienna despatch forwarded from Amsterdam by the Exchange Telegraph. Revolutionaries are suspected of having started the fires.

Vorwaerts says that the largest flour mill in Kaiser-Eberadorf, in the environs of Vienna, was burned down on Saturday. All the grain, flour and machinery were destroyed. The damage is considered irreparable, as the mill played an important part in provisioning Vienna.

Former Health Commissioner Says Nuxated Iron

Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician—Attributes His Own Great Physical Activity Today at Over 60 Years of Age Largely to His Personal Use of Nuxated Iron.

WHAT FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER KERR SAYS

"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feel that in Nuxated Iron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-giving, strength-building effect, and in the interests of the public welfare I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe that my own great physical activity is due largely to-day to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefit which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Wm. R. Kerr

Former Health Commissioner Kerr has given years of his life fighting for public health in his own and other cities. It was he who introduced Anti-toxin for Diphtheria in Chicago's Health Department. He purified the milk for the Consumers and thereby helped to save the lives of thousands of babies. He introduced the anti-spitting ordinance which has been copied all over the country and also took care of the sewers and garbage in the interest of public health. He is positive that the widespread use of Nuxated Iron would greatly lessen the worries and troubles of Health Commissioners in keeping up a high standard of public health.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former Health Commissioner Kerr with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists. —McDermid & Jury, Druggists, Peterboro.

FAILURE TO FLOAT LOANS WAS THE CAUSE

Dominion Permanent Loan Company Assets May Cover All the Liabilities

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—"I can tell you that we express the hope that everyone will get what is coming to them, although they must wait some time, if the liquidation is handled carefully," said one of the executive officers of the Dominion Permanent Loan Co. to-day.

Two of the principal assets of the Company are the British Columbia and Spokane Railway Co. and its extensive rights of way which it has allowed the C.P.R. to use. The Spokane Railway Co., it is said, is claiming from C.P.R. subsidies for use of these rights of way amounting to several hundred thousand dollars in all.

It is said that the Company's failure to float loans in both New York and London in connection with a railroad venture into which it entered previous to the outbreak of the war, war the cause for closing its doors yesterday. The opinion has been offered, however, that the assets of the company, including the value of railroad and claims against the C.P.R., would, if realized, be sufficient to cover practically all of its liabilities.

The approximate figures given out unofficially to-day of conditions in connection with the Dominion Permanent Loan Co., places the total liabilities at $4,650,000 and the assets at $5,000,000. The latter are largely on paper and some people here say that the wreck is complete.

METROPOLITAN STAFF MADE PRESENTATION TO MR. HASLAM TO-DAY

The Peterborough staff of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company presented Mr. W. A. Haslam with an address and an umbrella as a memento of his business and personal associations with them during his managership of the Peterborough district. The presentation was made by Mr. J. Malane and Mr. N. Tobin read the address as follows:

Peterborough, Feb. 1, 1918.

Dear Mr. Haslam,

It was with the deepest feelings of regret and sorrow that we, the members and staff of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Peterborough, learned of your near departure for the district at Windsor. During your regime as district agent (or manager, as the case may be) in this city, we have grown to admire and esteem you, both for your pleasing and amiable disposition towards us as co-workers with you in the field of insurance and for your abilities and talents as the guiding influence of the office. You have been an example to all of us, and to your cordial relations with us we believe that we owe, most of all, the standard of efficiency which characterises the work over which you have had charge.

It is no idle sentiment to say that in your leaving us we are losing a good friend. We can always look back with pleasure to the days when you were with us. However much that we regret your departure, we know and appreciate that it has only happened in the natural course of events—your efficiency and ability must find their reward.

We would have you know, sir, that in your leaving Peterborough you are taking with you the good wishes of every one of us. As a slight token of our regard, we beg to offer you this small gift. May you be long spared to use it, and many more of them.

Signed on behalf of the Peterborough staff of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company,

Neil Tobin,
W. E. Austin,
J. McClarren.

The staff were the guests of the new manager, Mr. Roberts, at luncheon at the Empress to-day.

WHERE IS RUSSIA'S LOST ARMY?

LOST—A Russian Army. Last seen somewhere in Asia Minor. Finder please return to nearest Government. No questions asked.

That may sound facetious, but it wouldn't be at all inappropriate just now. For in Armenia and the districts to the south of it an enormous Russian army, whose doings were blazoned across the front page of our newspapers day after day in 1915 and 1916, has vanished as completely as if one of the earthquakes common in the region had torn the ground asunder beneath its feet and swallowed it up, horse, arms and baggage.

Where are the great Russian forces with which Grand Duke Nicholas captured Erzerum, Trebizond and Erzingan nearly two years ago? Where are the Russians who forced their way through the Khanikin Pass and effected a junction with the British in Mesopotamia? Where are those tried soldiers who vanquished snow and ice when they stormed the Erzerum forts and burning heat when they swept into Hamadan and Kermanshah and across the Mesopotamian plains toward Bagdad?

Have they been beaten? Are they still arrayed against the Turks, menacing the safety of cities deep in the Ottoman dominions — Sivas, Diarbekr, Angora, even Constantinople? Have they disintegrated like the Russian armies facing the Teutons in Europe? Have they abandoned Trebizond and Erzerum to more Turkish misrule? These are questions which no newspaper reader can answer, because for months, the dispatches have been silent about the lost army and one guess is as good as another.

In exchange for the big front-page headlines of 1915 and 1916, describing the operation of Grand Duke Nicholas, General Judenich, General Baratoff and the rest of the Czar's leaders in Asia Minor, we have had during the last few months only the most meagre news items, chronicling isolated doings of the Russians, without mention of the plans of campaign of their commanders or anything else that might allow us to piece together the situation. The last mention of the Russian forces in Armenia was contained in a five-line despatch from Petrograd under date of Oct. 5, 1917, telling of the capture by them of a village fifty miles north of Mosul, one of the most important Turkish cities in Asiatic Turkey. At the time this despatch aroused hopes in the Allied countries of combined Russian and British operations against the Turks, since the British had followed up the capture of Bagdad by that of Ramadie, on the Euphrates, 60 miles northeast of Bagdad, and it was thought that the two armies might carry out a joint campaign with serious if not fatal effects to their adversaries. But since then oblivion has shrouded those Russians who got within 50 miles of Mosul. It has been even worse with their comrades operating around Hamadan and Kermanshah, a last fleeting mention of them in the news having been made in July, a full six months ago.

What a difference if one turns to the newspaper files of 1916! Then the Russian campaign against Turkey was at flood tide. It was surging forward on a front many miles in extent, driving the Turks in headlong flight before it. This irresistible advance culminated in the capture of Erzerum, the great Armenian stronghold of the Turks, which fell before the assaults of Grand Duke Nicholar's army on Feb. 15, 1916. To achieve this splendid triumph it was estimated that the Grand Duke must have employed at least 300,000 men, which makes the utter disappearance of this army from the news all the more remarkable.

At Erzerum 40,000 Turks and 1,000 guns were captured by the victorious Russians together by the victorious Russians together with huge quantities of munitions and supplies. A feature of the fighting there which thrilled readers all over the world was the storming of some of the forts by the victors at the point of the bayonet. Next to the Grand Duke the man singled out for the most praise was General Judenich, who had been in charge of the Russian forces in the Caucasus since the beginning of operations against the Turks early in the war, and had inflicted crushing defeats on his foes at Sarykamysh and Aardahan.

The Russians lost no time in following up their great victory at Erzerum. They pressed forward both in the inland sections of Aremsia and along the Black Seat coast. The operations in the latter region had as a consequence the next great spectacular feat of the army that is now lost, the capture of Trebizond, which fell to it on April 17, 1916. The occupation of the city came upon the heels of the capture of Rozeh, another Black Sea port, and of energetic operations along the Kara Dere River which drove the Turks back upon Trebizond in confusion. The Russian fleet cooperated in the fighting assisting in the accomplishment of hazardous landing operations and bombarding the coast vigorously. The news of the fall of Trebizond, a name full of the glamour of the East and recalling many famous exploits in ancient history, again thrilled the world, and served to put the Russian Army of Asia Minor well in the forefront of public interest.

Pressing onward from Erzerum and Trebizond, the Russians took Baiburt, Erzingan, Billis and Mush, spread over most of Armenia, and seriously threatened the Ottoman Empire. In fact, prophecies of dire disaster to Turkey were rife and the fall of Constantinople seemed by no means a futile dream, especially in view of the activity of the British Mesopotamian army and the Russians fighting their way from Persia toward Bagdad.

These Russian forces, after hard battles with the Turks, debouched from the Khanikin Pass and effected a junction with the British before the occupation of Bagdad by the latter. This junction greatly raised the hopes of the Allies and the capture of Bagdad by Sir Stanley Maude sent them to their zenith. It seemed as if the Turks, caught between the British and Russians to the southward and the Russian army advancing from Aremnia to the northeastward, were on the eve of being forced into a pocket and annihilated by the converging forces of their opponents.

These high hopes were doomed to disappointment. But news of lesser successes of the Russians working with the British in Mesopotamia served to keep Asia Minor in the public eye. As late as April, 1917, the Russians there were pressing the Turks hard, desnite the disintegrating influences already at work in Russia as a result of the revolution which had overthrown the Czar a month before. On April 5 the Russians re-captured Khanikin and seemed headed toward far greater achievements. And the Russian forces in Armenia as if to show that the revolution had not impaired their morale and ability to beat the Turks, captured the important Armenion city of Van and showed signs of effectively joining in the British-Russian campaign being waged to the south of them. Even the Black Sea littoral, long absent from the news, got a moment's flash of the limelight when a despatch chronicled the landing of a Russian force west of Trebizond, the capture by the Russian torpedo boat, from wich the men were landed, of 10 sailing ships laden with valuable cargoes, and the sinking of another Turkish sailing vessel by a Russian submarine.

Then, however, a veil fell. There came no more word of Russian operations in Armenia or south of it. Instead of the long-awaited news of the fall of Mosul, of the victorious advance of combined Russian and British forces toward Constantinople, nothing leaked through to satisfy an expectant world. From the Russian front in Europe came, first, news of the smashing advance of Korniloff against the Teutons last July, followed by tales of defeat and disruption and armistice, by disjointed stories of the rise and fall of Kerensky and Korniloff and Kaledine, of the fanatic acts and speeches of the Bolesheviki, of the emergencies of republic after republic from the chaos into which the old Russian Empire had fallen. Yet there was never a syllable about the lost Russian armies in Asia Minor. Once there was a report about a fight between Russians and Turks, but the despatch telling of it stated that the Russians involved were forces of one of the States that had suddenly sprung up in the Caucasus region. It gave no reason for supposing that their movements were in any way a resumption of the campaign which had added to military history such brilliant feats as the storming of Erzerum and Trebizond.

Where is Russia's lost army?

"What do you want with me?" asked the pale little soloist as an officer from the draft board tapped him on the shoulder. "We need you at the front. I have just been talking with a captain, and he says his regiment lacks a certain something to put them into a fighting mood."—Life.

Lake Shore Team and Petes Will Clash at Brock Street Rink in Second Round Junior O. H. A. Game With the Return Game in Oshawa on Thursday Night—Will Be Great Series.

O.H.A. Second Round.

Oshawa at Peterborough, Monday, Feb. 4. Peterborough at Oshawa, Thursday, Feb. 7.

A wire from Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A., received by the local club last evening, notified that the above are the junior O.H.A. second round fixtures for the Petes.

Oshawa will therefore play at Brock street rink on Monday night and the game will be the feature event of the hockey season. The Lakeshore team have had easy picking in their group, beating Port Hope, Cobourg and Whitby, and with most of last year's team in line, including Smith, the crack goalkeeper, and Venini, who played right wing against the 247th team in the intermediate series last year, will take a lot of beating. There is no love lost between the Petes and the Bradleyites, and fans can count on a red hot battle with something doing every moment of the way. Oshawa beat Peterborough twice last year, winning by one goal on each occasion and the games were worth going miles to see. Although the Petes have lost the services of several players since last year, this year's outfit is better balanced and if they get working together as they have been in practice during the past week, will give the visitors a busy evening.

The game is called for 8.15 o'clock. The Petes' line-up will be the same as that which won the last three games from Lindsay, as follows:

Goal—Murray.
Right defence—Girard.
Substitute—Williams.

PETERBORO' LOST CAREW CUP LAST NIGHT TO BRAMPTON

Tom Thauburn, of Brampton, went home last night with the Carew Cup which W. M. Lang had won a week ago from Hamilton Victorias. Thus the cup keeps travelling, just as was intended for it, but there were some hopes that Peterborough would have retained possession of it long enough to provide a few good games.

Thauburn's rink found the ice a little strange at the opening, but five shots on the third end was a jolting break into the counting column. At the ninth end Peterborough was down six with Brampton 12 to their credit. The Peterborough rink showed a little flash of their ordinary form by taking the next three ends for four shots, but Thauburn came back for five shots in the last three frames. In a sense it was a disappointing game.

The rinks were composed as follows:

Peterborough	Brampton
J. Skinner	J. S. Beck
R. G. Sturgeon	E. Downs
R. M. Waddell	J. Birss
W. M. Lang	T. Thauburn
Skip 11	Skip 17

Score by ends:
Peterborough—2200100102110l0—11
Brampton—0051031020003O2—17

Last night's scheduled games resulted as follows:

H. Hair	E. Walton
T. O. Donaldson	J. F. Convery
W. T. Hall	H. Evans
A. C. Kay	D. Davidson
Skip 9	Skip 11
J. H. Sherwood	G. Henderson

DAILY OCCURRENCE

Yes, that's Captain Deeping's wife. His boat went down with all on board."

"How sad!"

"Not at all! His boat's a submarine."

"ROAD TO VICTORY"

FROM BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE — There is a broad road which runs like a spinal column across the north of France, which the British private has nicknamed the "Road to Victory." His fondness for this road is perhaps due to the fact that it is broader, better paved, and more direct than most other roads, being one of those highways which Napoleon laid out many generations ago.

Over this "Road to Victory" there moves a never-ending procession of transports of the most varied character. Standing at a cross-roads, one sees first a group of four waggons; theirs is a pleasant load, for they carry rations, clean, wholesome yellow cheeses, sides of prime bacon, fresh white bread in sacks, chests of tea, sugar jam, tinned butter and bully-beef, sacks of potatoes and onions, sides of frozen beef and mutton.

Named From Dickens' Characters.

Behind the ration carts follow a string of twenty great hooded motor-lorries laden with lumber of various kinds. Each lorry in this group carries its name proudly on its side, the names all taken from Dickens' characters—Betsy Prig, Martin Chuzzlewit, Micawber, Oliver Twist, Mr. Bumble, Sally Gamp and others. Some are carrying "duckboards," which are little sections of skeleton sidewalk for foot traffic over the mud. Others are laden with "turkey trots," little wooden bridges for shell-holes. Still others have long bundles of brush-wood "fascines" for filling in hollow places in roads. Yet others have lengths of beech planking for corduroy roads.

Next in line behind the lorries is a battery of field guns painted in a strange motley of greens, browns and yellows. The horses are in the pink of condition, their coats agleam, their drivers tanned brick-red by exposure.

Long String of Pack Mules.

After the guns come long string of pack mules wearing brown canvas "carriers," from the pockets of which peep the gleaming cases of eighteen-pounder shells, or the squat yellow bodies of field howitzer ammunition. The mule is certainly doing his bit in this war. Plodding and patient, he works his ten or twelve hours a day back and forth between dump and gun position, mostly under shell-fire, always through roads muddy and wet and shell-torn.

So the long column moves onward under the beckoning hand of the military policeman at the cross roads. More lorries pass, filled with men all singing lustily. Then come two strange looking tractors hauling big howitzers; a labour battalion marching forward to work and carrying shovels instead of rifles; more mules, more lorries—an endless procession always going forward along this great road.

And the road itself, on which the traffic never ceases day or night, moves along, pushing further and further forward to the east.

John L. Sullivan Dropped Dead

(Special to the Toronto Star and the the Peterborough Examiner.)

ARLINGTON, Mass., Feb. 2.—John L. Sullivan, former heavyweight champion of the world, dropped dead in his home here to-day.

Sullivan, who was 59 years of age, had lived on a farm here for the last ten years. This morning he arose as usual, and planned another visit to Boston, but during the forenoon had an attack of heart trouble, from which he failed to rally. He died at noon.

OSHAWA BEAT BELLEVILLE TEAM

OSHAWA, Feb. 1.—Oshawa O.H.A. intermediates defeated Belleville here to-night by 10 to 7. Both teams were in fine condition and the game was full of vim from start to finish. This ties Oshawa with Belleville for group honours. The teams:

Belleville— Goal, Hulin; defence, Green and Hagerman; centre, Whalen; wings, Symons and Whalen.

Oshawa — Goal, Childs; defence, Roenig and Blanchard; centre, Rowden; wings, Etherington and Jacque.

Referee—Vair of Toronto.

Divorced Wife Cannot Inherit

Court Upholds Will in Which She is Not a Beneficiary to Estate of Peterborough Man

An interesting case in which a divorced wife attempted, and failed, to establish a claim to the estate of her former husband was concluded yesterday in Toronto, when Mr. Justice Middleton rendered his decision as to the effect of the will of the late William James Banks, of Peterborough, who died on August 2 last. On August 22, 1893, deceased obtained a life insurance policy for $1,000, payable to "Little May Banks, wife." By his will, probated shortly after his death, he ordered that one-third of the principal of the policy be paid to his son, one-third to his brother, and one-third to his sister. The right of the son to inherit was not disputed by the divorced wife, but she contested the right of the brother and sister on the grounds that they are not in the class of preferred beneficiaries. Some time after the policy was issued the wife left her husband and obtained a divorce in Chicago. She attempted to secure a share of the estate on the plea that the divorce is not valid. His Lordship says: "I do not think this plea is open to her. When she obtained the divorce she ceased to be in law the wife and so ceased to be within the preferred class of beneficiaries. The divorce alone would not defeat the wife's right, but the subsequent will, I think, is operative for the reason given."

"PRETTY PAPA"

"Pretty Papa," the musical comedy Deluxe, is a merry melodic melange of all that is cheeringly inviting. Alluringly attractive, fruitfully fascinating and altogether "It." There is not a single moment of the performance which is not fraught with interest and full of "Pep." The story is a most ingenious one, highly amusing and absolutely consistent. Summing it up in its entirety, it is a highly melodic musical comedy, redolent with metric and lyric gems. The big ensembles of male and female choristers are made up of all that is manly and beautiful, refreshingly beautiful and amply competent. The most critical of theatre-goers will find oodles of laughter, cataclysm of fun and oceans of all that is delightful and catchy.

The big cast is headed by Halton Powell, a most original and unctious comedian.

The big show will appear at The Grand next Tuesday, Feb. 5.

OVER THE TOP WITH THE PATS

water, that was a miserable day, we were cold, wet, hungry and thirsty, and shells were falling around like rain. As soon as it got dark I climbed out and got all the ammunition I could from fellows who had been killed. We expected to be relieved that night, but we had to wait until the next. It was a long way we had to go and we were all in so we ditched everything. All we could find of our company was fourteen, out of over a hundred. That night going out I was so dry I felt as if I could spit sparks. I picked up a water can and went to take a drink and got a mouth full of oil. We ran into gas and I was so hopelessly all in that I didn't care what happened to me. I put on my helmet and couldn't see, and fell into a shell hole, so I pulled off my helmet and took a chance on the gas, but before I went a hundred yards it had taken effect and my nose began to bleed, and I began to cough, and what little I had on my stomach came up. I had to lie down for a while anyway. I got back to the little bunk holes where we stayed all night. They were just like the pictures you see of Eskimo homes, only these were mud. My chum and I had one to ourselves. I laid down for a while but couldn't stay there. I hardly know what I did that night. Anyway the next day we moved back to that place I sent the picture of. We got reinforcements and went back, and although we didn't attack we had a harder time than the first.

Casualties Righer.

After that trip we left there altogether, and no one was so glad to get away as I was. All my other chums were either killed or wounded, we lost no prisoners. Now that it is all over I am glad that I was in it, but it makes me wish for something to stop the war on even any peace terms, when I think of so many fine fellows killed who would have had so much ahead of them, just for one little ridge. Bad and all as we want peace we will gladly stick it out. The Canadians have certainly made a name over here. We took places where other troops failed time after time, and we did it with just half the number of men. We have always taken what we go after, and more. We worry the Huns more than anyone else. He never gets any peace on our front. Up in a place like that a person can't sleep much, just doze a little. We had to sit cuddled up in as small a hole as possible, the only time we could stand up or get out of our hole was at night when it was dark. The second trip in my chum and I had a little hole just the width of our shoulders. He sat at one end and I at the other. We would get our tin hats as much over our faces as possible, and when a big shell would light very close we would both look up to see if the other was hurt, then in a couple of seconds a big shower of mud from the shell would nearly bury us. When a big shell lights just at the edge of the parapet it just feels as though your chest was being forced right through you.

Well, I think I had better close for now, with much love to all.

Your loving son,
HERB.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Mr. G. N. Gordon makes the following statement in reference to an article that appeared in last night's Review:

The Review in last night's issue, is yelling itself black in the face, because Mr. H. P. Lindsay did not receive a $6,000.00 policy of insurance, and the Review, with its usual malice and dishonesty, assumes to blame me for it because I am chairman of the Finance committee of the Board.

The Review says that Mr. McGrath, one of the trustees, and a member of the Finance committee, could not be seen by Colonel Miller. This is absolutely untrue and not in accordance with the facts. The Review says that Mr. Eastwood, a member of the committee, was favourable to the transfer. This is also absolutely untrue and not in accordance with the facts. The Review says I told Mr. Miller to give the business to Mr. Lindsay, which is absolutely untrue, and which the Review knew was untrue when it published the statement. What I said to Mr. Miller was, that if the other members of the committee were satisfied, I was willing that the insurance should go to Mr. Lindsay. This I repeated before the members of the Board, in the presence of Colonel Miller, and he did not deny it, and this statement was made to Colonel Miller in the presence of a member of my staff who was sitting at my desk at the time the statement was made to Colonel Miller.

A meeting was called by me, of the Finance committee, which is made up of T. B. McGrath, E. G. Patterson, Roland Denne, Vincent Eastwood and myself, and it was decided by a majority of the committee, that as a former chairman of the Finance committee did not obtain the committee's authority to place the insurance, that it had been improperly placed, with Mr. Lindsay. My own feeling is, that Mr. Lindsay, T. E. Bradburn, Thomas Marks, William Wright and others who are ratepayers in this city, and for years have not been able to break in on the insurance business of the Board, except to the smallest extent possible, are entitled to a fair proportion of the insurance, and that $90,000.00 odd, insurance to one concern in this city is too much and is out of proportion.

For a considerable length of time and since I have been on the Board and as the result of my fight, there is not one member of the Board entering into contracts with the Board, voting on the prices that the Board shall pay him and then voting payments to himself. In other words, no member of the School Board is insuring buildings nor selling anything to the schools, at a profit.

The trouble with the Review is, that in order not to spoil a good story, it has deliberately and wilfully stated what was not true, suppressed the truth and wilfully misrepresented the true state of facts.

When the report of the insurance investigation of the Board of Education came out, the Review deliberately and wilfully eliminated and cut out, the part of the Judge's finding, which severely criticized and condemned the action of a member of the Board, because the Review wished to shield this member of the Board and did not wish its subscribers to know the contents of the Judge's report.

When the Review gets over its soreness that happened to it on New Year's Day in the aldermanic election in the Centre Ward, it will probably be in a different frame of mind. The Review apparently thinks that these $5,000.00 men who could be of such tremendous service to the city, giving the benefit of their wonderful ability, will be appreciated some other day, but the Review is wrong.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

RECOMMENDS $500 DAMAGES FOR GIRL.

London, Ont., Feb. 1. — After being out for five hours, the jury in the case of Nash v. London Street Railway recommended judgment for $500 for plaintiff, Miss N. Nash, aged 24. She sued for $1,000 for personal injuries sustained by a fall from a street car, alleging negligence on the part of the conductor, Charles Brown.

"The conductor on this street car placed his hand upon my shoulder, seld me back, and called me 'Darling' and 'Sweetheart,' and when I resented he pushed me off the car," she testified.

As a result of the fall she sustained a broken arm, nervous shock, and a severe strain, and has not yet recovered her health.

Brown has since resigned, and is now a vaudeville dancer.

"PETERBOROUGH'S BESETTING SIN.

The above topic is announced for discussion at the evening service to-morrow at Murray street Baptist Church. We suppose that there are some temptations to which a community may yield more readily than others, and it can do us nothing but good that we should hear a careful estimate of both our strength and weakness. One thing is certain and that is that the message will be timely and true to the Gospel.

SPECIAL S. A. SERVICES.

Commissioner Richards and staff of 15 officers will conduct special services for young people between the ages of 13 and 25 in the W. O. W. A welcome meeting to all the officers, and delegates will take place at the Temple to-night at 8 o'clock.

BRITISH OFFENSIVE RESUMES

General Allenby is Advancing His Line in Palestine

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—British expeditionary forces in Palestine have again assumed the offensive, the official war reports stated to-day.

Gen. Allenby's line has been advanced to Anutieh, three miles north of Bires, on the Nabalus road, cables state.

British forces operating out of Jerusalem have advanced nearly 20 miles to the northward, and are starting an encircling movement, presumably intended to render Jericho untenable for the Turks.

MARRIED BUT STILL PLAYING JUNIOR HOCKEY

Oshawa Goal Keeper Who Will Be Here Monday Receives a Cut Glass Berry Bowl

The Oshawa Reformer says: At the usual lunch of the juniors, on Friday evening last, after the game, Bradley Bros. presented Dick Smith, the net gardian of the team, with a cut glass berry bowl. Dick has lately entered into the more strenuous game of home duties and the hope of his fellow team mates is that his playing in the greater game will prove his worth even more so than those of his hockey career. Dick replied in his own modest way, cuddled the bowl under his arm, and wended his way home to acquaint his better half of his gift.

Smith will be here to play goal with the Oshawa juniors on Monday night.

CASE ADJOURNED UNTIL WEDNESDAY

The case instituted by Mr. G. N. Gordon against Chief Thompson and Police Magistrate Dumble was argued this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke. Mr. Gordon is seeking to recover fourteen hundred dollars that was taken from a gang of alleged pickpockets in September last. This money has since been in the custody of Magistrate Dumble. The latter agreed to return a portion of the amount subject to certain conditions. The case was adjourned until Wednesday next. Magistrate Dumble favours the distribution of the money among those who claim to have lost money as a result of the activities of pickpockets.

RUSSIAN TRENCHES FALLING TO PIECES

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 2.—A war correspondent of the Dusseldorf Nachrichten reports that the portions of the Russian front which have been entirely evacuated are growing in extent. The trenches are falling to pieces. The posts which were used for wire entanglements are being burned as firewood. The disbanding of some military units is in progress south of the Pripet region.

Artillerymen are selling their horses, the correspondent says. Soldiers guarding the road to Lutsk no longer demand passports, but require the payment of a toll of 20 rubles for every vehicle.

DISGUISED TO EVADE DRAFT

Man Was Found Masquerading In Windsor in Woman's Garb.

WINDSOR, Feb. 1.—Waillim Fralick, who claims Detroit as his home, and who was arrested at Windsor ferry dock, has put aside feminine attire, in which he was masquerading, it is alleged, to avoid being drafted, for the more appropriate uniform of a Canadian soldier.

EDMONTON FIREMEN STRIKE

Object to Chief Who Was Not Previously on the Force.

EDMONTON, Feb. 2.—After striving for two and one-half hours yesterday afternoon to come to an amicable settlement regarding the appointment of R. G. Davidson to the position of Fire Chief, the special committee representing the city and the men failed to come to an agreement, and the men are now on strike. They object to a man being imported to fill the vacancy, claiming the appointment should be made from the ranks. Six new men have been sworn in at two of the fire halls and the new chief is in charge.

A sufficient number of men were obtained by the city Fire Department last evening to man the apparatus of three fire halls covering the business centre of Edmonton and on the south side. The Commissioners announce that a new force will be formed. About twenty men, all told, were on duty last night in place of the seventy-eight who are on strike. There has been no sign of any interference on the part of the strikers, who are very orderly. All the packing houses and big business concerns had special workmen on duty last night.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM COLLINS.

Galway, Jan. 31.—The sad death occurred on Wednesday, Jan. 23rd, at 7 p.m., at the Weston Hospital, Weston, Ont., when Mr. William Collins, aged 23 years, second youngest son of Mr. Michael Collins, was called to his last resting place. The deceased had been in poor health for some time, when in November last he entered the hospital, where he gradually grew weaker until the end came.

His remains were brought from Toronto to his sister's residence (Mrs. William Doherty, of Sommerville), from which place the funeral took place on Saturday, Jan. 26, to the Church of Immaculate Conception, where a requiem high mass was sung by Rev. Father Leonard, after which the remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery, Galway.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss, besides his sorrowing father, Mr. Michael Collins, two sisters, Mrs. W. Doherty, of Sommerville, and Mrs. W. D. Hickey, of Galway, and four brothers, Lorne, of Galway; James, Leonard, of Toronto, and also John, formerly of Lindsay and Peterborough, but now of Toronto.

MRS. WM. GRAHAM.

Mrs. Wm. S. Graham, Mount Pleasant, died at her residence on 12th January. She was born in Port Colborne. After her marriage in 1870 she resided in the Township of Emily, later removing to Mount Pleasant, where through her kindliness as a neighbour and lovable and religious disposition she won the respect and affection of the entire community, who to-day mourn a friend who was ever ready to lend a helping hand to anyone in trouble. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. Graham is mourned by her husband and five children: Richard of Mount Pleasant, Thomas on the homestead, Mrs. C. H. Shield of Peterborough, Mrs. J. M. Shield, Grandview, Man., and Mrs. T. G. Shield, Mount Pleasant.

The funeral took place on Wednesday, 16th January, to Shields Cemetery, Rev. W. H. Clarke, Cavan, conducting the services.

ROY HUTCHINSON.

A very sad death occurred this morning, 2nd February, of Roy Hutchinson, only son of Mr. Miles E. Hutchinson, of Fraserville, after an illness of two weeks, from spinal meningitis, aged 20 years. All that medical attendance and skilful nursing could accomplish was done to save him, but it was of no avail. Dr. Meir of Peterborough and Dr. Russell of Bailieboro attended him.

He was a bright, useful boy of Christian character, his father's help on the farm. He will be sadly missed by his sorrowing parents and relatives and neighbours in that community, where he was a general favourite and highly respected by all who knew him. He was a member of Fraserville Methodist Church and Sunday School. He leaves to mourn his loss, his parents and two younger sisters, Vina and Viola, to whom the deepest sympathy is extended in this sad bereavement.

He was a cousin of Mr. Harry Carver, 502 Charlotte Street, where he often visited, and where he will be also greatly missed.

Spry Is Wanted For Assault And Theft In Hamilton

Frank Spry, who was arrested at Lakefield last Saturday on a charge of stealing $25 during a social call at a Peterborough house, is wanted in Hamilton for assaulting an old woman, according to a telegram Chief Thomonson has received from Chief Whatley. The information added that Spry had enlisted in the 204th battalion, but was sent back from England and deserted some time ago.

MARRIAGE.

COCHRANE—ROSE.—The announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Mary Lucille Rose, to Mr. Wm. George Cochrane, of Peterborough, Ont., on Wednesday, the sixteenth of January, 1918, at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

Ice Is Thick On Chemong Lake

BRIDGENORTH, Feb. 1.—To-day, 19 degrees below zero.

Wood is scarce and dear, and coal is not to be got at any price.

The roads are in a bad condition with pitch-holes, but Commissioner Harry Milburn is doing his best to keep them repaired and fit for travel.

The Ladies' Missionary Society held a meeting in the church on 31st January, having sent out invitations. They had a good turnout, and realised quite a sum for the society.

Miss Edith Roan, of Omemee, has been on a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Touchburn.

Albert White and Sem Forsythe have cut a lot of ice, and have quite a few contracts to fill yet. The ice is from 22 to 28 inches thick.

Mr. James Jopling has been laid up with neuritis for some time, but is recovering now.

Mr. William Smith, the driver of the mail from Lakehurst to the city, had quite a time getting through after the storm, having to break the roads from Lakehurst to Ennismore. However, he got to the city, but was unable to return until the next day.

A number of the cottages in the park have a lot of snow on the roofs, and if it comes a thaw and the snow is not shovelled off, some of the roofs may break down.

It is understood that Dan Sullivan is returning to take charge of the Pavilion in the park. He made it a success last season, and it was a great convenience to the cottagers, and his return in the spring will be welcomed.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Jopling of the city were up to the village for a few days renewing acquaintances.

Owing to the bad roads and cold weather, the Normal students are not attending Miss Clink's School as regularly as formerly.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy, or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast.

Farm Bugbear Is Being Used As Way Of Dodging Service

Chief Justice Meredith Sitting at Guelph Deals With Food Production and Victory—No Pretext of Avoiding the Army So Generally Adopted as That of Posing as a Farmer Needed More For Farming Purposes Than For the Army.

"No pretext (of escaping military duty) afforded so much opportunity, or was adopted so generally, as that of posing as a farmer and a farmer needed for farming purposes than for army purposes."

Chief Justice R. M. Meredith, in granting J. A. Cockburn leave to appeal, in agricultural cases, etc., says he has learned "that much discontent has been caused by what has been called the leniency of some tribunals and the stringency of others."

"There seems to be an impression, rather widespread," he adds, "that the granting or refusing of exemption is a thing resting in the discretion of the tribunal, and that it is a thing which may be granted for almost trivial causes. Nothing could be more erroneous. Exemption can be granted only for the causes which Parliament has distinctly laid down, and should be granted only for the most urgent reasons.

"I should deem myself stupid beyond redemption if I should fail to realize these things; and something like a traitor to my country if, realizing them, I should lightly give exemption to such men.

"Surely, to the densest minds, the unwisdom of exempting even one of these men, whose place as a civilian can be replaced by men not so fit to fight, is palpable, and could not be too strongly condemned."

"From the vast number of exemptions granted, I cannot but feel that many of the tribunals must have failed to grasp the real meaning of the need of Class 1, Category A, men, and the great danger of thinning the ranks or delaying their coming; or really what it means to exempt such men—its far-reaching, harmful effect, and in all but a very few cases its needlessness."

Better Go to One Judge.

"I give leave to him (Cockburn, representative of agricultural interests) in so far as I have any power to do, to appeal in any and every case in which he thinks he has an interest, and in which he thinks that he has been aggrieved by my ruling.

"The sole reason for granting leave in these cases is to ensure, as much as possible, an even administration of the military legislation in question; to prevent, as far as possible, the inconsistency of two men in a field, the one being taken and the other left, solely because the case of the one happened to be tried by one judge, while that of the other happened to be tried by another judge—I know of no better way of preventing the reproach of uneven administration of the law than by sending all who desire to go to him to a single judge, who shall finally determine all their cases. He will have an opportunity of putting them all on a life footing. It is better that all should be treated alike wrongly than in patches of rightly and wrongly.

"In every case I have had a mind to the great importance of increasing the production of the necessaries of life, and, especially, such as are produced by the tillers of the soil in this essentially agricultural country.

Victory Comes First.

"But I have not excluded a full consideration of the paramount need to end the war in victory at the earliest moment possible, a result which can be achieved only by putting the greatest number possible of Class 1, Category A, men on the fighting line, as quickly as possible. The obvious logical conclusion in striving for that object must be:

"Send every man of that class to the ranks whenever it is possible to fill his place with a man who is not in that class, or with a capable woman or with machinery or horses or cattle or in any other way in which the result can be as great production, whether in cross or four-footed food, animals or otherwise, as if that man had remained as a tiller of the soil.

"The number of these young, able-bodied men who are farmers or who, indeed, even pretend to be as some did, solely for the purpose of avoiding doing a soldier's part, is insignificant in comparison with the number of those of the other military classes not to mention those who are not in any class, of which there is a great army of capable humanity under the minimum age."

The Chief Justice commends the temper in which the Military Service Act has been met in the tribunals over which he has presided, "giving grounds for the greater hope for a new Canadian army in which all can look hopefully for successes greater than any that have been yet won by Canadian arms."

Any Pretext For a Purpose.

"But there were some, an insignificant minority, able-bodied men who sought but the one thing, to escape from thus serving their country, and to escape upon any pretext or scheme that seemed to them to give some chance as escaping from that which they knew to be their duty.

"It must not be forgotten that the service is not forever, that, in all probability, all men can be back to the land again before a second crop is taken from it, and I am not aware of a single instance in which last season's crops here were not fully garnered.

"A bugbear is made for ulterior purposes, of the taking of the comparatively few fighting men of this draft from the farms; and, under cover of it, some escape who will never be seen at work upon a farm even though the war should last for years."

How Italians Beat Austro-Germans Back At The Brenda River

Italian, French and British Batteries Work Terrible Havoc—Big Guns Levelled the Enemy Trenches and Foe's Losses Were Heavy

Italian Army Headquarters, Feb. 2—The enemy made another powerful effort yesterday to redeem the situation west of the Brenta River where the Italians recently won a notable success, but was beaten back by the combined action of the infantry and artillery without reaching his objective of Monte Di Val Bella, where the Italians are maintaining their position.

The extent of the enemy losses in the fighting early this week is now known to be larger even than the first accounts indicated, the fuller details making this evident. An observer, who has arrived from the field of the fighting, reports having seen and talked with a number of the captured officers and men as they were brought back for interrogation. They were a miserable looking lot, he says, many of them wearing Italian uniforms taken during the invasion of the Friuile region.

All the prisoners agreed as to the furious nature of the fighting, and the exceptionally heavy losses caused by the concentration of the fire of the Italian, French and British batteries. The trenches were levelled and the links between the forward and rear lines swept away, thus stopping all communications and preventing the officers from securing co-ordination in the work of the artillery and the infantry. The few trenches remaining were littered with dead, and the survivors were found for the most part on their knees, hysterically crying or praying.

of action, or about 70 per cent. of its trisn forces had 5,000 men put out of action, or abot 70 per cent. of its fighting force. Brigades of the 9th and 6th Austrian divisions had casualties amounting to approximately 50 per cent.

Forty Hours Allied Fire.

But the most terrible loss was inflicted on the 160th Landstrum, which of several thousand men in line has only a few hundred left.

The magnitude of such losses was due to the triple artillery fire of the allies, maintained for forty consecutive hours, often cross-firing from two or three directions simultaneously. An unusual feature of this artillery action was the complete unity brought about among the Italian, French and British batteries. This was so marked that one of the chiefs of the artillery staff explained:

"At last we have realized unity of command, right in the face of the enemy fire."

As an illustration of the destructive nature of the triple artillery fire it may be recorded that an enemy battery with four monster 240-millimetre guns was destroyed completely. The enemy was using an old church as one of his principal ammunition depots, and when the church was blown up he was cut off from supplies of ammunition in that sector. In consequence all the enemy batteries around Forza and several other points remained silent.

Foe Lines Demoralized.

The whole action disclosed unusual demoralization and confusion in the enemy lines. While this was due chiefly to the artillery concentration, it also indicated that, owing to internal conditions, the enemy forces have fallen far below their former standard of efficiency.

While a convoy of prisoners was being taken to the rear an enemy airplane, flying low, sought to interrupt its progress. There were no anti-aircraft guns around, but the machine finally was brought down by a rifle. This was said to be a rare instance of the bringing down of an airplane by a rifle.

Interrogation of prisoners gave confirmation of reports that the Germans have moved troops from the Russian to the French front during the period of the armistice. This was accomplished indirectly by granting leave to the best troops on the Russian front. The places of these men were filled from the invalid class, and they were not taken back to that front.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"He has converted it unlawfully to his own use, and it has been swept away with his personal fortune. The man is on the very brink of a volcano—and he is desperate. If he could keep things going for six months longer with the deals that he has on hand, he might pull through with everything retrieved, but demand for an accounting now would be fatal.

"There was bad blood between his stepdaughter and himself and he knew that the first use she would make of her freedom and majority would be to demand her property. I have had his affairs thoroughly examined without his knowledge, and I am telling you indisputable facts. That's as strong a motive for murder as anyone would need."

"But why did he pick out the Glamorgan for such a thing? How did he entice her there and who did it for him, if he didn't do it himself? He could have dropped her into the next world from one of his aeroplanes by tampering with it before she went up, and nobody the wiser. Why should he make use of an apartment house full of tenants on a public street?"

"That will be made clear," Terhune assured him. "Where human conjecture and resource fail, science steps in. Science cannot make a mistake; no faulty human reasoning is back of its conclusions, but laws as incontrovertible as those which control the elements of life! Subjected to a scientific examination, he will betray himself inevitably."

"I've no doubt that science is rare and wonderful," McCarty admitted patiently. "But just for my own satisfaction, like, I would be glad if I knew where he spent Monday evening."

"With his friend, Warren J. Keeler," the detective responded with a touch of impatience. "They dined together at the Fitz-Morris, went to the summer show on the Hyperia roof, left early, stopped in Mr. Keeler's rooms for a drink, and Quimby went home. The question is settled. But I ran in to night, Mac, to ask you to a little party I'm giving to-morrow evening in my own rooms."

"A party Me? McCarty glanced up in amazement.

"Yes; I want to give you a practical demonstration of the workings of science. Quimby will be there, and all the others whom I think have any possible connection with this affair. I will only ask you to do as I tell you without question, take the tests with the others and keep your eyes open. I think you will find it interesting."

"I'll be there!" McCarty promised. "I don't want to miss anything, you can be sure of that. If this science can do all that you claim for it, sir, maybe there'll be some surprise for all of us!"

CHAPTER XII.

ANOTHER OF THEM.

Consumed as he was with excited anticipation of what the evening might bring forth, McCarty awoke in the morning with a fixed determination to prove or disprove on his own account the suspicion which had flashed to his mind at Dennis's unconscious suggestion.

The peculiarities of the case and the hopelessness of attempting to find a credible witness among these people who for widely dissimilar reasons were perjuring themselves wholesale, pointed to the establishment of negation as the quickest method of arriving at the truth.

Immediately after breakfast he betook himself to the fire house, hailed the indignant Dennis from his morning rest and dragged him protestingly forth.

"I would not care if half of New York was murdered in its bed so long as I got my rightful sleep in my own," he grumbled. "You are forever hauling me out and rushing me off on fool's errands with you when you were on the force but I thought to get some peace now. What is it you're after the day?"

"To prove that a man was where I think he was by roving that he was not where he said," replied McCarty promptly, if somewhat incoherently. "Mr. Quimby told Terhune that he went to dinner and a show with a friend of his, but I've reason to think he didn't. Come on."

At the Fitz-Morris he encountered at first a supercilious antagonism to his queries, but on displaying his shield resurrected for the occasion he and Dennis were soon in conference with the maitre d'hotel, who in turn summoned the waiter captain.

Yes, Mr. Warren J. Keeler was a frequent patron and well know there. He had dined in the Arcadian Room on Monday evening last with another gentleman. Mr. Stephen Quimby was not known there personally nor did they know the name of the gentleman who had accompanied Mr. Keeler. At McCarty's request the dinner check was put in his hands.

Inquiries at the Hyperia roof produced no result, since only the doorman and ticket taker could be interviewed at that hour.

Dennis still bemoaned his lost sleep and was for giving up the project and going back to the fire house but McCarty piloted him determinedly over to an imposing bachelor apartment building just off the avenue.

"We're going to see this Mr. Keeler," he announced. "Maybe I am on the wrong scent but I'll not let go until I am sure."

The few words which he scribbled on a card at the office procured them an invitation to come upstairs, and Dennis, considerably awed, followed from the ornate elevator down the wide, thickly carpeted hall to where an obsequious Japanese valet awaited them at an open door.

They found Mr. Keeler in the living room with the remains of his breakfast on a tray before him, and the morning newspapers scattered about. He was a stout florid man of about forty-five, with nouches beneath his bright twinkling eyes and an astonishing expanse of girth held in by the belt of his gaily embroidered house robe.

"You've come about that affair of last Monday night haven't you?" he asked at once. "Sit down, please. I've already been interviewed by one detective—Terhune his name is—you are from headquarters, I suppose."

McCarty ignored the last remark. "We'd just like a little corroboration from you as to time, Mr. Keeler. It's only a formality, of course, but we've got to file this with the report. You had dinner at the Fitz-Morris on Monday night?"

"With Mr. Quimby," returned Mr. Keeler firmly.

"Just so. What time did you get there, sir?"

"About seven or a little after. We left a little before nine and went to the Hyperia roof, but the performance there was not up to the standard and we got out before it was over, and came here to my rooms."

"Is this your dinner check from the Fitz-Morris?" McCarty produced the pink slip of paper and held it out.

Mr. Keeler glanced at it in some surprise.

"I think so. Yes; that was mine, but isn't this drawing it rather fine? I fail to see what concern that is of the authorities."

"We just wanted to be sure, sir. Now, if you'll tell me what time you came back here from the theatre——?"

"Around ten o'clock. We smoked and talked and had a drink or two, and about half past eleven Mr. Quimby went home."

"Thank you, sir. No offense, but I suppose you will swear to that, if necessary?"

"Of course, of course," Mr. Keeler replied hurriedly, as they rose. "If you want to know anything else just come around. Here take a cigar with you."

The urbane Jap showed them out, and Dennis appreciatively sniffed the sleek, opulently banded cigar which he held as gingerly as though he feared it would snap in two.

"We're in this much, even if you did draw another blank," he observed. "You'd better give it up, Mac; there's nothing to it. Quimby was in there, smoking one of these self-same beauties, no doubt, at the very minute——"

"Whist!" warned McCarty suddenly. The door of another apartment half way down the hall had opened, and a rosy-cheeked chambermaid emerged, trailing a carpet sweeper. She eyed him boldly and with sudden accord McCarty and Dennis smirked.

"That's a late riser you've got in there," the former remarked ingratiatingly, nodding in the direction of the door through which they had just passed.

"He is that!" she laughed good naturedly. "Sometimes I don't get in till the afternoon."

"I'll bet you didn't get in early last Tuesday," McCarty beamed at her.

"What's it to you if I did or not?" She tossed her head. "Who are you?"

"Us!" Dennis stepped forward before McCarty would reply, and flashed his own badge. "Fire examiners, my dear."

"We dropped in to see about that little fire on Monday night," added McCarty promptly.

"There was no fire——" began the maid, in amazement, but he interrupted her.

"Yes, there was a little one. Maybe he didn't want the news of it to get about in the house, so the Jap cleaned up the mess of it before you got in the next day."

"Then that clumsy Jap must have started it himself or else the young man!" remarked the maid indignantly. "Mr. Keeler himself is the most careful, tidy gentleman in the house."

"The young man?" repeated McCarty inquiringly, hiding Dennis's start of surprise.

"Mr. Keeler's nephew, from out of town," she explained. "He often comes, and he stayed over night Monday because I saw him myself the next day."

"Maybe he just dropped in like, in the morning," suggested McCarty.

The maid shrugged.

"Didn't I make up the two beds myself!" she retorted. "And wasn't they talking about the show the night before, and dinner at the Frits—something? But get along with you. Jollying a girl and keeping her from her work!"

Not a word did the two sleuths exchange until they were on the sidewalk and well toward the corner. Then Dennis drew a long breath.

"You never know your luck!" he proclaimed. "What do you think of it, Mac? There's another one lying! Where do you suppose your friend Quimby was, anyway, on Monday night?"

"If you ask me," responded McCarty modestly, "I think he was behind Mrs. Doremus's glass closet, busy making finger marks."

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is Al the face is clear."

A FINE RECORD.

One English Family Gives Many Sons.

In Harper's Magazine is printed an unusual group of letters written by youngsters on Admiralty Service on British merchant ships or warships. One of these gives a remarkable yet typical record of what one family has done.

"M. F. A. 103, O. T. Uneas,
September 22, 1916.

"The Uneas became oiler No. 2 and we loaded our cargo of fuel oil in the East and ended up in a region where shot and shell wandered around. After getting rid of our precious cargo we turned around and came east again for another full load, and this time all the way home. The wife keeping watch during the hours I had to sleep, and glad I was to have her sharp eyes in the submarine area, for the chief officer was old and past his work. Arrived safely in the old country, the wife left me at Falmouth, and then away under sealed orders. Ten days or so before I could get word to Mrs. C.; of course silly women folk imagined subs had got me. We wandered down to River Tyne and dry-docked there; unfortunately the Chinese were restless, so had to stay aboard with only two days' leave, first since outbreak of war. I reported to Admiralty, being an R. N. R. officer, but was told (as usual) to continue on my ship. I'd dearly loved to have been told to proceed to a naval depot, for it is not all honey to be away on your lonesome, knowing that if attacked one mistake ends you. Now about my brothers. At the evacuation of Gallipoli one of them received orders to proceed with five hundred men to Anzac to destroy stores. He arrived there after the guns had been withdrawn and had a merry time. Turks—no opposition—shelled them night and day; however, the boy did his work and left Anzac with not very heavy casualties. After two days' rest, same job at Helles, if you please; bit thick, eh! Had a beastly time at Helles, a big gale came on and they could not work, only sit in the dugouts being shelled all the time. Finally finished the job and he brought away all but ten of his men. He was mentioned in orders of the day, congratulated and promoted. Next brother C. came home from India, joined up, won his commission, and is now in France. Before leaving he was married; how, is rather amusing—he wires his fiance at ten to be ready that same day at two. Bride goes to London for special license; finally my brother arrives, hot, dusty, breathless, five minutes late. After the event the two innocents find they have no notion of where to spend the six-day honeymoon. Imagine fifty excited relations of all ages, each propounding his or her own view of the subject and accompanying them to the station. Finally, amid much noise, the spot is selected for them and they have to travel down in the crowded guard's van. C. trying his best to look dignified as becomes a lieutenant in H. M.'s army. Next brother left the sea, went to France as a private in Public Schools Batt., refused a commission before going out, saw service in the trenches, and was marched out and told his duty was to take a commission. Next brother is in the A. S. C. and saw the Uneas in harbor at Port Said, but could not get off to see me. None of us have seen each other since war began. Now if you are not fed up with me and my brothers, you ought to be. To finish up with, the dear old mater and pater still at home, longing and yet dreading to see the post and newspapers come."

NERVOUS HEADACHE PAINS IN BACK

Could Scarcely Get About the House—Doctors Did Not Seem to Help Me, But I Found a Cure Which I Can Recommend to Others.

Mrs. H. Crary, 515 Cedar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes.

"I was suffering from a run-down condition of the system, nervous debility and sleeplessness. I lost a good many nights' sleep, and some nights after going to sleep, would wake up with a start, and then lie awake for hours. I also had frequent headaches, and pains through my back. I got so bad that I could hardly do any work. I had taken doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to help me. Through reading in the newspapers of the help others had derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started taking this medicine. The first box helped me, so I continued, taking about five or six boxes. I found that I was a great deal better, able to sleep well, and do my work with out any trouble. My headaches and nervousness are gone. My mother lives with me, and she has also found great benefit from the use of the Nerve Food. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervous trouble of any kind."

When the nerves give out everything goes wrong. The heart's action is weakened, the stomach fails to digest the food, headaches result, you cannot rest or sleep properly, and you get run-down and discouraged.

There is only one way to get out of this condition, and that is by feeding the nerves and thereby nourishing them back to health. The most successful treatment used for this purpose is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This fact has been proven in so many thousands of cases all about you that it seems as though everybody should know it by this time.

Ask your friends and neighbours about this great food cure, and put it to the test in your own case. You will then understand why so many people are enthusiastic about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd. Toronto. The genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the label.

Fatal Family Friction.

A few sarcastic words from the father, a sharp retort from the mother, that was all. But was it all? What about the effect upon Johnnie and Susie, sitting there quietly at their evening lessons? And did neither parent notice that Thomas slipped out of the house at the first intimation that there was to be a quarrel between his father and mother? For quarrel it really was, although brief and clothed in the language of educated, respectable persons; and long after these harsh and unkind words had been spoken the atmosphere of the family living-room remained charged with an emotional disturbance in which no one could concentrate his mind upon his reading or study.

Family friction is always fatal to happiness, says Mary A. Laselle in Mother's Magazine, and when there are children in the home it is almost sure to work irreparable harm upon their minds and souls.

One of the most powerful causes of the exodus of young people from their homes at an age when they are not fitted to enter upon the work of life is friction in the family. Young people are by nature loyal to their parents and it is almost never that a young person will give as a reason for his leaving home the fact that his father and mother quarrel or nag at each other or do not agree upon certain points.

Friction in the home creates an intangible, impalpable atmosphere in which the sensitive child chokes and pants for the free air of happiness, or is warped and stunted mentally and morally.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend it's preparation too highly."

SELF DEFENSE

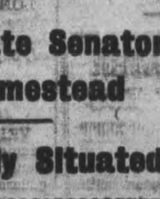
DEFEAT BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WITH ANURIC.

Many people in Canada have suffered from rheumatism and kidney trouble and have found Anuric to be the most successful remedy to overcome these painful and dangerous ailments.

The lucky people are those who have heeded Nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that new discovery of Dr. Pierce's called "Anuric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions you should take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of An-u-ric, as are many of your neighbors.

Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont., 30c for trial pkg.



St. Catharines, Ont.—For several years I suffered with gravel and with uric acid, causing rheumatic pains. Nothing ever helped me until I commenced to take 'Anuric,' and the first thing I noticed was that the gravel had disappeared and has never made a reappearance. My general health has improved and I have a better nerve condition and my eyesight seems better, too. I used to have such dizzy spells at times I thought I would faint, but these no longer trouble me. My only regret is that I did not know of Anuric before."—Mrs. H. Marjoram, 124 Albert St.

Flyers Uphold Lofty Standards

THERE is one branch of the military service in which even the Hun has maintained traditions of warlike chivalry. That is the air service. In the air the Hun fights fair and violates only one rule. This, however, is an important one, and is the rule that aeroplanes shall not be disguised. Each must show by a painted sign to what army it belongs. The Allies' sign is a red, white, and blue bull's-eye; the Germans' is a Maltese cross. When the German began to violate the unwritten law of the air he used to paint his small Maltese cross within the bull's-eye, thus keeping up a semblance of fairness, but this has been abandoned now, and German flying men go daily forth to fight in machines that cannot be distinguished from those of the French or the British by the gunners. It is only when they open fire with their machine-guns that their identity becomes known. However, apart from this the German airman is said to play the game.

In any other branch of the service such camouflage would pass without notice, and would, indeed, be considered quite justifiable. But high standards are adhered to by the flying men. They are the very chivalry of the war, the samurai of the armies. No man is ever drafted into the flying service. No one ever becomes an aviator by compulsion. All are volunteers, and the tests they must pass are the most severe that can be devised. It is taken for granted that every soldier is brave; it is taken for granted that every airman is without fear. But this is not enough. Daring is also taken for granted in an airman, but to succeed he must be more than brave and daring. He must have the gift of acting instantaneously in the face of the most appalling danger, and he must also act correctly. It has been found that young men have this faculty more generally than their elders. The elder man may be fearless and have unlimited daring, but as a rule he is guided by his sober second thought. In the air there is no time for a second thought. It is said that as a rule the boy of 19 makes a better aviator than the youth of 22, and he better again than the young man of 25. It is not to be supposed, of course, that as a man grows older as an aviator he becomes less effective. Experience counts here as elsewhere, if the habit of instantaneous thought and action has been acquired.

Another reason why flyers who have not reached maturity make as good flyers as older men is that physical strength is not required, nor powers of endurance. It is not necessary even to have a quick hand. The aeroplane is controlled by gentle touches. Guynemer, the most famous of the French aces, looked like a girl, and there are other great flyers whom a month in the trenches would utterly break down. It is the opinion of Lieut. Bennett A. Molter, an American who has flown in the French army, and who gives his views on the subject to the New York Herald, that the most trying experience of the aviator is to fly amid bursting shells. This has a nerve-racking effect which sometimes wears good men down something akin to shell-shock. When a man's nerves are affected he is of no further use in the air until he has had a long rest far from the front.

He contends that the aviator's lot is not, after all, so dangerous as many suppose. Flying itself, he contends, is almost safe. Of course, any mechanism is apt to get out of repair, but if there are no guns below it is possible for an injured machine to be safely landed. Nowadays in the construction of the planes considerable attention is paid to a design that will help to break a fall for the pilot, even if the machine collapses around him. In the older type the motor and propeller were behind the pilot, and if the machine crashed to the earth nose first the weight behind often fell forward on the unfortunate aviator, crushing his life out. The modern machines are tractors, with the engine and propeller in front, and when a machine gets out of hand it is the engine and propeller that first strike the ground. Flying at a great height is often safer than flying a few hundred feet over the ground, for if a machine becomes unmanageable, the pilot has more time to get it righted. He mentions the case of a pilot who was flying at 17,000 feet, was wounded, fell 10,000 feet, and the rush of air restored him to consciousness and enabled him to make a safe landing.

The danger from anti-aircraft guns is exaggerated. Very few machines or pilots are brought down by shrapnel. Riddling the plane with bullets, so long as the pilot, the engine, the gas tank, or the propeller are not hit, makes very little difference. Machines seldom come in without a few holes in the planes; often half the wires and braces will be scratched. In fact, it is taken for granted that every time a machine goes out over the enemy's lines it will have been hit, and on this account it is always examined after each trip. When a flyer is not in the air he has far more liberty than an officer in any other branch of the service. He can rove behind the lines on his own machine or drive a car if he desires to do so. A flyer remains an individual to a greater extent than an ordinary army or naval officer, and this, perhaps, is one of the reasons that the air service makes such a strong appeal to so many high-spirited young men.

His Business.

Robert Louis Stevenson, who is best known to children through his "Child's Garden of Verse," was always fond of animals, and very kind to them, and one time he made a very neat, little retort to a man who was beating his dog. When Stevenson interfered, the man asked, grufly, "Well, what business is it of yours? He ain't your dog." "No, but he's God's dog," Stevenson declared, stoutly, "and I'm here to protect him!" And he did.

Blessings.

There is a blessing on limitation—a blessing proper to the time in which we have to learn. Our present blindness may be only the condition of full sight beyond. So the dragon-fly must spend blind days beneath the water before it can mature bright wings for the sunlit air. Our not-seeing is for education. We do not, if we are wise trouble the infant class with the higher problems of the school.—Exchange

Quick to Catch On.

Edward had an uncle who owned a grocery and market. On Saturdays it was Edward's delight to go there to help. On this particular day a neighbor chanced in. Finding Edward there, she thought she would find out how much the little fellow knew about business. Seriously she said, "Ed, have you chickens today?" The youngster's reply was: "Yep, we have all kinds, alive, dead, dressed and undressed."

Question of Certainty.

"Quite a number of persons have asked me of late if my niece is going to marry a certain young man," admitted the Old Codger. "I have been obliged to tell them that she is and she isn't. You see, while she is certain that she is going to marry him, he will be an uncertain young man until after it has happened to him."

Maintaining Order in China.

In China every member of a family is responsible for order in that family and every inhabitant of a city is jointly responsible with every other citizen for its tranquility. If a younger son in a family should commit a crime, the older son is likely to be taken into custody for the offense and, perhaps punished.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

TOYS INDICATE CRUELTY.

Models of Ruined Cities Given to Hun Children.

Exultation over the ravages of the Teuton armies in France and Belgium entered largely into the German children's Christmas this year, as shown by numerous toys from Germany which have fallen into the hands of the French. Samples of leaden models of cities destroyed by German troops were recently seen in Paris by a correspondent of the Associated Press in the Library and Museum of War, founded under the auspices of the French Ministry of Public Instruction and the Fine Arts. The models showed in detail the heaps of brick and mortar and stones which were all that remained in hundreds of towns of Northern France and Belgium, faithfully reproduced for the delight of Germany's rising generation.

In addition to these objects there have been gathered picture books filled with illustrations of military operations, in which the German Emperor's troops always have the upper hand, and their enemies are invariably annihilated. The Library and Museum of War is now assuming such proportions that a large permanent institution will be necessary to house it. The beginning of the collection was furnished by Henri and Madame Leblanc of Paris, who had brought together relics from the battlefields and various war fronts.

The new institution has been placed under the care of Camille Bloch, General Inspector of the French National Libraries and Archives, and he has announced his intention to make it international by appealing to all the allied powers to furnish him with documents and exhibits dealing with the war.

The collection is to contain trench journals, works of propaganda, specimens of paper war money, medals, parliamentary documents, military insignia, ration cards, war stamps, and, in fact, everything that has a bearing on the war.

The French Government has asked the Chamber of Commerce for a $50,000 appropriation, and various private persons have promised gifts for the furtherance of the work, which it is considered appropriate should have its seat in the country that has seen most of the fighting.

Among the exhibits are the medals struck by order of the German Emperor in honor of the sinking of the Lusitania and the Susser.

Picturesque Quarry.

A limestone quarry which is about a mile long, picturesque in appearance and dangerous to work in is located near Rockland, Me. There 300 laborers, chiefly foreigners, toil in chasms having perpendicular sides 500 feet high and no way of entrance or egress except by means of the derricks which hoist and lower about a dozen men at a time. Approximately 1,000,000 barrels of lime are prepared in the vicinity of Rockland annually.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Deporting a Nation.

Only a few years ago, comparatively, the great King Sargon was held by critics to be a biblical myth, a monarch who never ruled Assyria, but excavations in that ancient land confounded the alleged historical experts. And now comes along no less an authority than John Dyneley Prince, former statesman of New Jersey, master of some twenty ancient and modern tongues, and head of a department in Columbia University, calling attention to the fact that Sargon first set the style of deporting a whole nation that is being partly followed by the Kaiser in Belgium.

It was some 2,600 years ago that Sargon carried the ten tribes of Israel out of the promised land and filled up their country with Arabs and tribes from northern Asia Minor, and he did such a good job that the Jews never came back. History, however, does not always repeat itself, as witness the return from captivity of the Jews released from Babylonia through Cyrus the Persian. Dr. Prince refers to the Emperor of Germany as a modern Sargon, but it may be that developments in Belgium will prove that the deportation is only for a season and that the Kaiser will be prevented from going to the Assyrian's limit.

A Strange Death.

Soldiers are found dead on the battlefield, with no mark of injury. Some are lying with arms outstretched as in running; others are grasping their guns as though about to fire—all are in exactly the positions in which they were at the moment of death.

These mysterious deaths do not occur as a result of nervous shock; else the bodies would be relaxed and natural. They are victims of "the bends" or "caisson disease" caused by sudden release from great air-pressure.

When a workman emerges from a high-pressure air chamber, his blood fills with small bubbles, like those of champagne when first uncorked. If the bubbles are large enough to choke the circulation the man dies. On the battlefield, such occurrences are the result of intense explosion waves. The blood holds in solution a considerable amount of air and carbon dioxide, the quantities being greater when the pressure is high.

Upon lowering the pressure, the gases separate out as bubbles. In the case of soda water, the bubbles can escape, but in a man they are caught in the capillaries. All muscular action is arrested with lightning-like rapidity, thus preserving the attitude held by the victim before the fatal attack.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haines, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

Simple Styles For Girls in Their Teens

Interesting Sashes and Girdles

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The "jeune fille" is playing her part as well these days as her older sister. She, too, has her charities and war economics, and she, too, has a most difficult question to decide for herself. This question confronts her on every side—for or against new clothes and other things that she would not hesitate to buy in normal times. Really it is most puzzling, on the one hand she hears arguments that convince her how unpatriotic she is to even think of new frocks and furbelows when the times are so dark and grievous. Indeed, new frocks are a disgrace; she must wear the oldest things she has, and the frumpier she is—the better! On the other hand, she hears sad tales of unfortunates thrown out of work, and starving, because there is such a sudden stop put to all buying, extravagant and otherwise. So, she decides to do her bit, and buys new things, in moderation. Who can tell how right or wrong she is.

Sailor Dress of Blue Serge.

For Miss Out-of-Doors.

For the girl who is athletic, whose strenuous life includes walks out of doors, skating and perhaps gymnasium, the simple dress, devoid of trimming, is best. The always-favoured sailor suit is the best model to choose, change it as you will. The one illustrated here is true to type, there is the wide sailor collar, the braid on sleeve and collar, but the details may be as different as you please. The yoke on the waist and the skirt may be omitted. This dress saves material, for the skirt is gored instead of being pleated.

When Trimming Takes French Leave

The girl in her early teens is hard on her clothes, and usually dislikes to think of them at all. Later on, of course, she more than makes up for lost time! The other day I saw a charming little model, dark green crepe de Chine, unrelieved by any trimming. The collar was a shallow square, giving the straight-across effect without being so in reality, for for neck outline was rounded slightly. At the waistline tiny tucks, an eighth of an inch wide, perhaps, ran up and down, four inches apart and four inches high, giving the necessary fulness to both the waist and the skirt where the tucks ended. Then other tucks ran around the waist, and the result was a plaid belt of tucks! The three-quarter sleeves were finished off in the same way, and at the lower edge the skirt was drawn in likewise, not enough for one to say "hooble," but enough to give the fashionable narrow effect to the skirt. It was carefully explained to me that this was a French model, though so essentially appropriate for the American maid.

Fashion's Sash and Girdle.

The shops are full of them, these aids to modish silhouettes. Perhaps it is the influence of the East, where wondrous widths of silk are draped around the waists of the men and women. Anyway, they are here, in all their loveliness. Roman striped silk ribbon, with fringe six inches long, adds a distinctive touch to the sombre-hued dress of crepe de Chine or Georgette crepe. One interesting girdle was of suede cloth, five inches wide, stiffened to hold its shape, passing around the waist, it crossed in the front, and slipped through wide slashes on either side, where huge buttons and long silken tassels gave the finishing touches.

One Original Lady.

Maude Radford Warren, the well known writer, has written an article on what women in England are doing, and she says:

In England and in France, I met women of all classes, giving all there was of them to their country. The poor woman, who thought she was working as hard as she could, has been taught by the war that she can get more out of herself. The career of the great lady is no longer society but the business of war, and she asks more of herself than she ever used to ask of her maids. The first great lady I saw at work was Lady Henry Grosvenor. I found her, not in either of the beautiful homes that were hers before the war but in Queen Mary's Hostel, a barracks-like building which is a boarding house for women munition workers at Woolwich. Her sitting-room, heated by an ugly little gas stove, was less than commonplace. The only objects which gave it distinction were two pieces of old mahogany and the photographs of two handsome young men in uniform. The handsome, vivid woman in black who came forward to meet me is not only a social power in her own right but is connected with many powerful families in England. She is the aunt of the Duke of Westminster, the sister-in-law of the Duchess of Teck, and the cousin of so many nobilities that only an East End woman of the poorer classes, always keen on titles, could possibly reckon them all.

Three years ago Lady Henry Grosvenor was leading the usual leisurely life of her class, differing from her friends chiefly in the fact that she was a collector of antique furniture and art objects, and gave a good deal of time to the study of her hobby. Now she lives in a cheap building with munition girls, eats the same kind of food they do and works even longer hours. She is in charge of the Y. M. C. A. canteens in Woolwich Arsenal and in the Vicars factory at Crayford, and also supervises two hostels for women and one for boys. She buys food by the ton, employs thousands of workers, and feeds, daily, tens of thousands. And she does it so skilfully there is no waste and no confusion."

OPERATOR FOOLED ENEMY.

Wireless Drama of the Sea Told by Englishman.

A dramatic incident of the sea, in which a young wireless operator fooled the enemy, was related in the Admiralty Prize Court, when the Crown was asked to condemn the SS. Edna on the ground of unneutral service and enemy ownership.

The Attorney-General Sir F. E. Smith described the kaleidoscopic history of a ship which flew two flags. The plucky operator was "one Smith, an Englishman," who had since received a commission in the R. N. A. S.

Frederick Jebson, a German, said Sir Frederick, was a prominent man in San Francisco shipping circles. He chartered the vessel, and was believed to have perished afterwards in a German submarine. The ship was built at Bergen in 1903, and in those days sailed the seas as the Jason. Jebson used the ship for his Mexican business. He had been in the German navy and was in the naval reserve.

Jebson purchased the ship, the ownership of which was vested in the Lloyd Mexicaine Societe Anonyme, in which he held the bulk of the shares. Finally he managed to get back to Germany disguised as a Scandinavian seaman.

The Edna took on board wireless and gun-sight apparatus, and tried to communicate to the German cruiser Leipzig the sailing of British ships—an attempt which was frustrated by the resourcefulness, ingenuity, and courage of Smith.

In an affidavit read by the Attorney-General, Guy Duncan Smith, the wireless operator, said that he was on the boat when war broke out. He awoke one night, at midnight, and heard the steamer Aztec announce that war had been declared between Russia and Germany.

At this time the ship had "Hamburg" painted on the stern. After the announcement that war had broken out, "Hamburg" was removed from the vessel and "La Paz" was painted in, while the Mexican flag was run up.

Before leaving San Francisco, he had heard that the coal taken on board was intended for the Leipzig. Information was sent to the British Consul, and the authorities at San Francisco demanded that the coal should not be delivered to the cruiser.

A German wireless operator was taken on board, and Smith was told that if he refused to do his duty the German would take his place. The German operator, however, did not understand the Marconi system, and Smith shortened the length of the sound waves, and though he appeared to be sending out calls for the Leipzig, no ship could pick up the message.

The German operator spent three nights and three days trying to call up the Leipzig. Smith returned later and then occasionally called up the German cruiser, putting the wireless right in order to delay suspicions, but the wireless was always out of gear when the German operator tried to use it. At La Paz Smith forwarded a message to the admiral on the U.S.A. cruiser California.

Some of the officers threatened to shoot Smith and throw him overboard if he did not send a code message to the German cruiser, and he then pretended to send it.

The only thing that Smith sent to the Leipzig was an enquiry as to where she was, which brought forth a reply that she was hanging around waiting for the Edna. Finally the latter was commandeered by the Mexican Government, who put an officer on board, and Smith said that "after that things were more comfortable."—London Chronicle.

Ship That Took Shore Leave.

About 12 years ago an English steamer which ran between Latin America and England was picked up by a tidal wave and washed far inland on the coast of Central America. There it was deposited upright in good condition, but stranded over a mile from the water.

The owners collected their insurance and Lloyds proceeded to advertise the hull for sale. Some Central Americans took the boat at a low figure and used the engines as a power station, working the ship for nine years in this way with considerable profit.

When the war came and boats rose in value to unheard of figures, a number of Americans bought an option on the boat and gambled in getting it back to the ocean. Using the ship's own power, they dug a channel ahead of the boat and finally got it afloat. A little calking and a crew enabled the vessel to reach San Francisco, where it was held up for a while pending an investigation of its papers, long since out of registry.

When the Americans had rehabilitated the ship, they were offered $1,500,000 for it, but declined that sum to take a higher figure. Such was the value of a ship which enjoyed shore leave for nine years.—Wall Street Journal.

Suspended Walls.

One of the queerest structures in the world is an electric-station building at Cristobal, in the Panama Canal zone. The roof is supported by powerful central columns and the side walls bear no weight whatsoever but are suspended from the eaves by means of cantilever beams. On one side of the building the wall is made fast to the foundation with anchor bolts. This unique construction was adopted to prevent the building from settling at a dangerous angle should an earthquake tremor shift the foundation.—Popular Science.

Tea Leaves for Munitions.

Instructions have been sent to all army and navy canteen to save all used tea leaves, which are to be carefully kept in muslin bags and forwarded to central depots. The old leaves are not to be used again in making beverages, but are needed in connection with munition making.

TORONTO WOMAN GAINS 22 POUNDS

"I Cannot Find Words to Express My Gratitude She Declares

"I can hardly find words to express the gratitude really feel over my wonderful increase in weight, health and strength," said Mrs. Evelyn Buffee, recently, in one of the most interesting and remarkable statements yet published in connection with Tanlac in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Buffee reside at 295 St. Hellen Avenue, Toronto, and are well known and respected in their community.

"I have not only gained twenty-two pounds," she continued, "but my health is better than it has been in years, and now I know for myself how wonderful Tanlac is. For six years my stomach had been so out of order that I couldn't digest my food properly and nothing agreed with me. I seemed to be full of gas all the time which bloated me up badly, causing intense pains in my stomach and sides. I was also subject to spells of sick headaches. I was often unable to retain anything I had eaten and I was so sick, weak and dizzy at times I just had to give up my work completely and take to my bed. My nerves were so shattered that I was right shaky and I couldn't get any sound sleep at night. I was very bilious all the time and my whole system seemed to be out of sha-e. I lost weight and became so rundown that I just felt worn-out, tired and miserable nearly all the time, and none of the many medicines I tried did me one bit of good.

"It's just awful to be in such a fix so long and many a time, before I got Tanlac, I have wondered if there was anything made that could help me. So my joy can be imagined when after taking Tanlac a few days I commenced to feel better. When I found it was helping me I, of course, kept on taking it, and gradually improved until now my stomach never bothers me any more. It just seemed when my stomach began to get right my bad feelings began to leave me and I commenced to gain in weight and strength. I haven't had one of those awful headaches since I began taking Tanlac. My nerves are perfectly calm, I sleep like a child and the change in my condition is nothing less than wonderful. I certainly do think Tanlac is the best medicine made and deserves the highest praise."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

Wood Alcohol.

The deadly wood alcohol is about as useful an agent as any that results from the distillation process. Manufacturers of films, of shellac and of celluloid require large quantities. Compounds used in medicine and surgery even have it in their make up. There is an anaesthetic made from it, and it is of consequence in formaldehyde manufacture, the uses for which are of wide scope. The huge annual loss from grain smuts, estimated at from ten to twenty million dollars, is readily controlled by soaking the seed in this material. Grain alcohol is not produced in this manner, but as it is used in large quantities in munition plants it may as well be mentioned here, especially as the sawdust piles of the mills when spruce and pine are sawn ought to be supplying a good deal of this that is at present derived from molasses. The unnecessary use of anything sweet for such a purpose goes against the grain of a people who are denying themselves sugar. One ton of sawdust is capable of yielding from twenty to twenty-five gallons of wood alcohol. This alcohol is also important in making ether, and ether, aside from its value in surgery, when combined with alcohol again, is required in the making of nitro-cellulose. This country used last year forty million gallons of denatured alcohol industrially. It would be interesting to know how many tons of spruce and pine sawdust were thrown into the incinerators of the mills merely to get it out of the way.

Mesopotamia Stories.

Canon Parfit, of Jerusalem, who described himself as "Vicar of Mesopotamia and Rural Dean of the Garden of Eden," recently told a few Eastern tales in London.

He said that when he first saw his "charge" the scenery did not impress him. The people were poverty-stricken and begged for "baksheesh," the children were "brilliantly clad in olive oil and the sweetest of smiles."

A soldier, referring to scorpions and mosquitoes, said: "Everything in the Garden's lovely (I don't think!) It wouldn't take a flaming sword to drive me out of it!"

At Bagdad, the pontoon bridge having been washed away, the Sultan determined to build a new one, so he set about raising the money. The people were whipped and blackmailed into parting with £40,000. The bridge cost £4,000, the tax-gatherer pocketed the rest.

Nitric Acid From the Air.

French chemists have given very close study to the Serpek method of manufacture of nitric acid from the air. In this process bauxite is used. If this process can be worked out on a satisfactory basis it will connect the nitrate industry with the very important aluminum industry.

The Real Reason.

An Illinois woman wanted a divorce because her husband snored and talked in his sleep. He's probably one of those exasperating husbands who talks in his sleep just enough to arouse her curiosity, but not enough to tell her where he has been Arithmetical Puzzle.

"How old is your sister?" a woman was asked. "Two-thirds of her age," was the answer, "is just twelfths of mine, and I am nine years older than she." What was the age of each?

An Embargo On Margarine From The States

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Embargoes and rumous of embargoes have been numerous during the week. Two that definitely materialized applied on shipments of beans of all kinds and margarine from the United States into Canada. Lima beans that were in transit to Canada were stopped by the United States Government and commandeered. Some Michigan white beans had been sold to arrive but these will not now be permitted to come forward. After a short but merry whirl in the Canadian market, margarine from the United States manufacturers is again under the ban. Further sales have been stopped by the United States Food Controller. Intimations were made that since Canada is an exporter of butter she is not very badly in need of margarine.

Canadian flour mills made the shift to the new grade of flour on Monday of this week and deliveries were made to their customers by some of the mills early in the week. There has been a very active demand for the old grade of flour, mills having orders for more than they could fill in the specified milling time. Price for new grade has been fixed for Eastern Canada at $11.10 per barrel carload basis for Manitoba, and $10.60 for Ontario winter wheat flour.

Advances Reported.

Advances have been numerous in grocery commodities during the week and include peanut butter, jelly powders, popcorn, birdseed, glass washboards, tobaccos, soap powders, cleanser, lye, baking powder, vaseline, potato flour.

As a result of the embargo on margarine a firmer trend characterizes the market for dairy butter. Storage creamery butter and storage eggs were higher in price. Stocks of cottonseed oil coming into Canada have not been plentiful and shortening supplies are still within narrow compass.

Embargo on shipment of sugar into Canada is still in effect but refiners still anticipate it cannot be long sustained. Peanuts and shelled walnuts were in firm market with advances recorded. By reason of the embargo on canned goods coming into the Canadian market from the United States the Canadian market for canned corn and tomatoes shows additional firmness during the week. Business has been seasonably good but shows a slight diminution in some quarters over the previous week.

Hardware And Metal Market

Of more than passing interest in the hardware markets this week was the decline in the price of wire nails and wire. Such a turn in the market came as somewhat of a surprise in some quarters. Reason for the decline is due to the accumulation of heavy stocks of wire rods at seaboard shipping points for which transport space could not be secured. These stocks were thrown on the market and prices went down accordingly. Manufacturers of nails were able to place their order for rods at a price that would permit of a reduction in nails and wire. Since these stocks of wire rods have been disposed of there has been a firmer trend to the market and advances of $5 per ton in the basic materials for nails and wire have been recorded.

One of the most drastic changes to be recorded during the week was that on paint products. In addition to advances in prices of all paints and varnishes it has been decided to eliminate certain sizes and to cut down the range of colours now being manufactured by Canadian paint manufacturers. Differentials on paint and varnish cans have also been altered.

Advances have again been numerous, and include price change in the upward direction on tool boxes, snubbers, wooden taps, jelly glasses, chamois skins, heater wicks, rifles, shotguns, skates, electric irons, toasters, post hole augers, grain cleaners, drag scrapers, vises and anvils, barrel churns, batteries and flashlights, Paris plaster, fuel oil, oil heaters, handles, grindstones, shears, clothes line reels, barn door hangers, saws, scythe stones, seine twine.

Business is reported seasonably good. Transportation difficulties have greatly hampered business, both in the shipment of goods to customers and in the movements of travellers for wholesale houses.—Hardware and Metal.

THE GERMAN STRIKE VIRTUALLY OVER

BOHEMIAN MUNITION DEPOT EXPLODES

GERMAN STRIKES APPEAR TO HAVE ENDED TO-DAY

Leaders of the Strikers Have Advised That Work Be Resumed---Munition Depot Near Prague Explodes With the Loss of Many Lives---British Troops Carry Out a Successful. Raid.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 4.—With the exception of a new movement at Jena reported by the Tageblatt of Berlin, the German strikes appear virtually to have ended. Leaders of the strikers advised that work be resumed to-day.

German newspapers record no disturbances in Berlin on Saturday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 4.—The only discordant notes heard in editorial judgment of the morning newspapers on the results of the meeting at Versailles of the Supreme War Council, come from the Daily News and Daily Chronicle, which declare that the report of the conference will be received with very tempered satisfaction. The Times and others seem satisfied.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 4.—"Yesterday naval aircraft carried out a bombing raid on the enemy airdrome at Houttave (Belgium)," the Admiralty reports. "Many bombs were dropped on the objective."

"During the day, in the course of aerial fighting, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and two were driven down out of control. Two of our machines failed to return."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 4.— "Early last night a party of our troops raided the enemy's trenches east of Hargicourt," says to-day's official announcement. "The hostile artillery was active during the night in the neighbourhood of Lens and northeast of Gavrelle.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, February 4.—The explosion of another munitions depot near Prague, capital of Bohemia, involving the loss of many lives, is reported in despatches from that city to Zurich, as forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph Company. According to some accounts, the depot was blown up intentionally.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, February 4.—After violent artillery preparation the Germans last night attempted to make a raid in the sector west of Fresnes northeast of Coucy Chateau, to-day's official statement reads. They were repulsed easily by the French. The artillery was active on the right bank of the Meuse. In the period between January 21 and 31, inclusive, nine German airplanes were brought down in aerial combats by French pilots, and four by the French anti-aircraft fire. In the same period fifteen German air-plants, badly damaged, were compelled to descend behind the enemy lines.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, February 4.—Warning the nation not to let reports of strikes and other internal disturbances in Germany slacken its war preparations, Secretary of War Baker in his weekly military reviews to-day also makes official announcement that for the first time it is fully believed Allies have preponderance of men and guns on the western front, despite the fact that the German line has been strenghened by troops from the Russian field. Secretary Baker declared reports of numerical superiority have been spread by the enemy himself.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, February 4.—Dock and factory workers at Trieste, an Austrian naval base, who walked out last week only to return within a few hours, have struck again, it was reported here to-day.

Several corps of German soldiers on leave are said to have been among those fomenting the strikes in Germany. They have been recalled to the front.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, February 4.—It is stated here on good authority, that the Government is contemplating establishing a central board to operate all Canadian railways on similar lines to the board, which is in existence in Great Britain.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., February 4.—The executive council of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada has decided that delegates from Canada will not attend the Allied Labour Conference to be held in England this month. The feeling is that of the British Labour party can take care of the interests of Canada at that conference. When the next conference is called by the British Labour party, which is to include representatives from all belligerent countries, and which is being prepared for, the delegates elected at the last convention of the Congress will attend. The Trades Congress is in close touch with the situation in Great Britain.

Want More Information In Reports

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 4.— That legislation will likely be introduced by the Ontario government for more information in the reports that are given the government by loan companies is likely to be one of the results of the Dominion Permanent Loan crash, according to information furnished by a prominent member of the government.

At the present time there is no government inspection of loan companies, and according to government officials an inspection would be impracticable. It is claimed that the inspection of the loan companies' books would entail an enormous amount of help and even then it is said that the company's officials could, if they so desired, dupe the government's inspectors. At the present time a return is made to the government signed by the president and secretary of the company and this report is also accepted by the directors of the companies. It is believed that the legislation which the government is contemplating will force the companies in their returns to show how they are investing their money, particularly with reference to mortgages on real estate. One thing at least is certain, and that is the recent failure will cause the government to make certain changes in the oan Companies' Act.

A WELCOME FALLING OFF IN CASUALTIES

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Feb. 4.—British casualties reported during the week ended to-day totalled 6,354, divided as follows:

Killed or died of wounds—Officers, 511; men, 1,325.

Wounded or missing—Officers, 173; men, 4,805.

The low mark for many months past is reached by last week's casualties. They compare with 8,588 the previous week.

BIG MAJORITY OF R. F. C. VOTES HAVE BEEN DISCARDED

Flying Men Who Cast Their Ballot in Canadian Election Will Lose Their Vote as a Result of a Special Provision in Military Voters' Act

90 PER CENT. REJECTED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.— It is estimated that the ballots of about 90 per cent. of the thousand odd Royal Flying Corps men which were polled in the various parts of the United States have been rejected here as a result of a special provision of the Soldiers' Voters' Act, and of the method in filling in of the certificates on the ballot envelope. It was provided in the Act that to vote in the Canadian election, Royal Flying Corps men must have been enlisted in Canada. In addition to this no man who was not a British subject had a vote in the first place. The great majority of the men who voted in the flying camps of the United States admitted that they had not been enlisted in Canada, but nevertheless polled their ballots for Ontario seats. Others again who admitted that they had enlisted in Canada, slipped all the questions regarding residence. As a consequence, the great majority of the flying men who voted in the United States lost their votes.

Nineteen Degrees Below Zero Last Night

Was 15 Degrees Below at Noon-day Temperature Equalled Once in 25 Years

While the weather conditions on Sunday were more moderate, the thermometer rising to 25 degrees, another cold spell has come on the scene. Lowest last night 19 degrees below zero; at noon 15 degrees below. This middle-of-the-day temperature is exceptional, and has only been exceeded once, and equalled once, in about 25 years. On Feb. 4, 1908, we had it 15 below at noon, and on Feb. 2, 1906, it was the same as to-day. This cold wave is apparently the one that has been over the entire Northwest for some days, and now passing east.—W.P.

MONTE BLANC WAS TO BLAME

Dysdale Commission Has Found That Captain Lemedoc and Pilot MacKay Were Responsible For the Halifax Disaster

BOTH ARE ARRESTED

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 4.—That Captain Lemedoc and Pilot MacKay, of the French munitions ship, Mont Blanc, were responsible for the collision and consequent explosion that killed more than a thousand people and destroyed a large part of Halifax, was the judgment of the Drysdale Commission, which investigated the disastrous crash of the Mont Blanc and the Belgian Relief ship Imo. The judgment says the Mont Blanc violated the rules of the road.

Following this judgment, Captain Lemedoc and Pilot MacKay were arrested to-day for manslaughter.

The Commission recommends that Pilot MacKay's license should be cancelled and that evidence regarding him should be referred to Crown authorities with a view to his being criminally prosecuted. The Commission also recommends to the French authorities the cancellation of the license of Captain Lamedoc and "that he be dealt with according to the law of his country."

The Commission stated that "it appears that the Halifax pilotage authorities have been permitting Pilot MacKay to pilot ships since the investigation commenced and since the collision," and announces that it (the Commission) considers the pilotage authorities deserving of censure.

The pilot and master of the Mont Blanc are further found guilty of neglect of public safety in failing to take proper steps to warn the inhabitants of the city of a probable explosion.

Captain Wyatt, chief examination officer, is found guilty of neglect in performing his duty as chief examination officer in not taking proper steps to ensure the regulations being carried out, and especially in not keeping himself fully acquainted with the movements and intended movements of the vessels in the harbour.

The specific charge in the warrant for the arrest of Capt. Lamedoc and Pilot MacKay of the ill-fated Mont Blanc is in connection with the death of Pilot William Hayes, who was on the Imo when the accident occurred. Both defendants are charged also with neglecting to warn the citizens of Halifax of the impending explosion.

This afternoon Captain Lamedoc was admitted to bail in $10,000, and Pilot MacKay in $6,000. They will appear before the Magistrate again to-morrow.

Hold Services In Sunday School

St. Paul's Church's Commendable Effort To Save Fuel

In order to conserve the fuel as much as possible the congregation of St. Paul's Church have decided to hold the Sunday services for the next few Sundays in the Sunday School room, instead of in the church. The latter will be closed for the present. All the week night services of St. Paul's have been cancelled at least as far as the church building is concerned. The choir meets at the homes of the members, the Red Cross Society sews in the Red Cross room at the Library, and other Church societies have found accommodation at the homes of members. Once in three weeks a union prayer meeting is held in the Sunday School.

THREE CALLS FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT

The Fire Department had two calls on Sunday, at 6.15 to 133 Romaine Street, the residence of Mr. Williams, and later to the residence of C. Stormer, 370½ Burnham Street. No damage was done in either case. The department was also called this morning at 10.30 to 471 Elm Street to a chimney fire. No damage was done.

More War Is Only Reply Of Allies To The Enemy

Decision of the Entente Reached at Meetings of the Supreme War Council—No Approximation in Teuton Speeches to Moderate Conditions of Allies.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Supreme War Council, which met at Versailles, finds no approximation in the German Chancellor's and the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister's speeches to the terms of the Entente allies, and has decided to continue the vigorous prosecution of the war until peace can be obtained "based on the principles of freedom, justice and respect for international law."

This official announcement was made here to-night A summary of the official report of the Versailles War Council says:

"The Council was unable to find in von Hertling's and Czernin's recent utterances any real approximation to the moderate conditions laid down by the allied Governments. Under the circumstances the Council decided that the only task before them to meet was the vigorous and effective prosecution of the war until the pressure of that effort produced a change of temper in the enemy Governments, justifying the hope of the conclusion of a peace based on the principles of freedom, justice and respect for international law.

"The Council arrived at a complete unanimity of policy on measures for the prosecution of the war."

ALLIES ARE UNITED.

"The allies are united in heart and will, not by any hidden designs, but by their open resolve to defend civilization against an unscrupulous and brutal attempt at domination. This unanimity is confirmed by a unanimity no less complete both as regards the military policy to be pursued, and as regards measures needed for its execution which will enable them to meet the violence of the enemy's onset with firm and quiet confidence, with the utmost energy and with the knowledge that neither their strength nor their steadfastness can be shaken.

"The splendid soldiers of our free democracies have won their place in history by their immeasurable valor, and their magnificent heroism, and the no less noble endurance with which our civilan populations are bearing their daily burden of trial, and suffering restitv to the strength of those principles of freedom which will crown the military success of the allies with the glory of a great moral triumph."

Premier Clemenceau presided at the sittings of the Council, which have been concluded

Lloyd George and Lord Milner attended the Conference for Britain. The Italian Premier and the Chiefs of Staffs of all the armies were present during the gathering.

15c. AN HOUR FOR GIRL FARM HELPERS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., February 4.—Fruit growers in Niagara Township consider fifteen cents an hour sufficient wages for girls working on farms this year. A meeting of local fruit growers was held in the Laura Secord Hall at Queenstown to discuss the wage scale for the female help during 1918. C. H. Fisher, who had as delegate attended the Y.W.C.A. Conference in Toronto, and there met representatives of the college girls, reported that they demanded a minimum guarantee of $9.00 a week, they to pay their own board. The meeting considered this too high as a minimum, and passed a resolution favouring $6.00 a week to August 15th, and $8.00 for the balance of the season. The young women will be paid fifteen cents an hour.

DECORATION AND PROMOTION FOR WELL KNOWN LOCAL BOY

Herb O'Heron Former Sergeant of 93rd Battalion Machine Gun Section Wins the Military Medal and Is Promoted to Sergeant-Major

IS WITH 4th CANADIANS

Another name has been added to the long list of Peterborough soldiers who have won decorations for gallant service in the field. The latest is that of Sergt.-Major Herb O'Heron, former sergeant of the machine gun section of the 93rd Battalion son of Mr. Maurice O'Heron of Auburn. Sergt.-Major O'Heron has been awarded the Military Medal for barvery in action and has also been promoted to Sergeant-Major's rank as a result of his good work. His host of friends in the city will be delighted to hear of his promotion and decoration.

Sergt.-Major O'Heron enlisted as a private in the 93rd Battalion in the autumn of 1915. He was soon promoted to the rank of sergeant in the machine gun section and held that position until the battalion broke up in England. Then he went to France with a draft to the 4th Canadian Battalion and has been "carrying on" with that unit ever since.

Ernest McNaughton was formally arraigned before Magistrate Dumble in the police court on Saturday afternoon and through his solicitor, Mr. R. R. Hall, declined to plead or elect. He was remanded until Thursday next. The accused who on Saturday morning made an attempt to get away from the detectives who were taking him to Roy's studio, is charged with indecent assault.

NEEDS CAREFUL HANDLING TO AVERT STRIKE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—A tense situation has arisen in connection with the maintenance of way employees on the C.P.R. system. Careful handling of the whole situation will be necessary to save a strike in Canada from coast to coast. The maintenance-of-way men have long ago requested improved conditions. Their leaders state that men are working on the track for as low as $1.05 a day for 10 hours. A Board of Conciliation and Investigation has inquired into the matter. It is understood here that six of the big railway brotherhoods have the troubles of the maintenance-of-way men under consideration. It is also stated that the brotherhoods are so incensed at the conditions under which Canadians and Britishers are working on tracks that an ultimatum from the six organizations is talked of.

It is stated the matter is so serious that Sir George Bury has been called to Ottawa so that the representatives of the Government may go into the whole situation. The men claim that the agitation for Chinese labour is to offset their demands for better conditions.

GERMANY HAS A HUGE ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Huns Have Concentrated Between 180 and 190 Divisions in Preparation For Their Expected Spring Offensive

NOT MANY IN EAST

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Feb. 4.— The Germans to date have concentrated between 180 and 190 divisions (2,700,000 and 2,850,000 men) on the western front, in preparation for their expected spring offensive.

Since the Allies' drive last April, the maximum of German concentration on the western front consisted of only 155 divisions until the Russian armistice permitted an increase to the present strength.

One hundred and fifteen divisions already are on the lines, the remaining 65 or 75 are held in reserve, presumably for the purpose of rushing into a surprise offensive or checking the Allies should the Germans leave to them the iniative of the spring offensive. The Germans still have sixty divisions on the Russian front, consisting of worn out, decimated units, from which the best soldiers have been transferred to the western theatre.

Interment Took Place Yesterday —T. A. S. Attended in a Body

The funeral of the late Alfred Lehane took place Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence 240 Simcoe street. Interment took place in St. Peter's cemetery, the Libera being sung at St. Peter's Cathedral by Rev. Father Maguire, a cousin of the deceased.

The St. Peter's T.A.S., of which the late Mr. Lehane was a staunch member, attended the funral in a body, as did also the men of the Peterborough Lock Co., where deceased was an esteemed employee.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. F. McCarthy, Bruce Law, Jas. J. Doris, Ed. H. Hickey, J. E. Sullivan and Edw. LaPlante.

Requiem High Mass was celebrated this morning at the request of the Knights of Columbus for the repose of the soul of their departed brother.

To-morrow morning at 8 o'clock a Requiem Mass will be celebrated at the request of his former fellow employees of the Peterborough Lock Co.

Much sympathy is extended to his bereaved wife who is the only immediate relative in this city, and also to his mother and sister, who formerly resided here, but are now living in Los Angeles, Cal.

A BUSINESS EQUIPMENT.

The request received by Mr. Hall, secretary of the Board of Trade, from the Ontario Department of Education, asking him to sound local manufacturers as to the merits of a proposal to make Spanish an optional subject in the High school course, is encouraging. It shows that the department is desirous of moving in the direction of making our school training more practical.

By all means make Spanish an optional subject in the High schools—if not, make it obligatory, as French might well be made.

Trade is conducted by means of communications and language is used in communications and language is used in communication. It is, therefore, a great advantage for the manufacturer or trader to use the language of a foreign country with which he desires to open new business, or do business. Great Britain is moving heaven and earth to expand her trade after the war, and Canada must do the same. We are getting to be a big manufacturing country, and our small population will not absorb all we can produce. We must break into foreign markets.

A promising field of expansion is South America, where Spanish is almost the universal language. A practical knowledge of this language will be an immense help.

Not only make Spanish an optional subject in the Collegiate Institute, but make French an obligatory subject. One of our greatest provinces has French for the vernacular, as well as business medium, of communication. We want to do business with Quebec and, as French will continue to be used for all time, Ontario business men of the future should, in their school days, be taught a practical knowledge—not a smattering.

This is a practical world, and to fit ourselves for filling our best place in it our education should be made more practical—children should be taught thoroughly in those subjects whose use will make them best qualified to fill their fuller place in the world.

We teach so much—try to cover so many subjects, especially in our public school course, that it is impossible for any child to carry out of his school life into the world more than a smattering of the infinite list of subjects attempted. Consequently, education is only skin deep — only a veneer. Little if anything is thoroughly taught or thoroughly learned. The remedy is to teach fewer subjects, and these of the most practical. We often laugh at the old time educational standard, the three R's—Reading, Riting, Rithmetic; but it is a little doubting if a child thoroughly grounded in these subjects during his eleven years of school life is not better equipped to face the world, than the child that spends his school life struggling under the burden of an absurdly overloaded curriculum, of abstruse lower subjects, but more ornamental than useful, more literary than practical.

The heretofore unfailing January thaw has only a few more hours to save its reputation.

ANOTHER POINT IN OUR FAVOUR.

It is remarked with gratitude that, bad as the coal and fuel situation is in Peterborough, it is much better than in other places. Another point in which Peterborough is favoured is her independent and, so far, adequate supply of electric power. Sir Henry Drayton, Power Controller, and Sir Adam Beck, Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, our two biggest electric big wigs, have issued another decree in restriction of the use of electric current supplied from the Niagara Falls centre of development. After February 5th, all shop window lighting, and all exterior and entrance lighting, are to be discontinued. This is literally a "dark lookout" for the streets of the towns and cities and homes of Western Ontario. Fortunately the "white way" embargo will be only temporary. Sir Adam Beck promises 79,000 additional horse power by the early autumn.

Of course the order for shutting off illumination doesn't affect Peterborough. Fortunately we have a fairly plentiful supply of electric current for lighting and industrial purposes, and there does not seem to be any present reason for worry. At least we think that is the position we are in, since we have so far suffered no inconvenience, nor has any been forecast. We don't know just where we stand in reference to the definite amount of power we are guaranteed by the Hydro-electric Commission, but for the present we have enough.

The Kaiser cannot be in doubt of the war aims of the allies—they are his dynastic funeral.

AMALGAMATION.

The Brockville Recorder and the Brockville Times have amalgamated, and the first number of "The Recorder and Times" was issued on Friday. Amalgamated is the expression employed, but absorption by the Recorder seems to be the fact, though "News-print Pringle and the paper combine" seem to have had a finger in the pie. One of the reasons given for the union of the two journals is the high price of print-paper, though it is hoped the newspaper will retain the combined circulation and use as much paper as ever. The newspaper will likely have a prosperous career. The Recorder has been issued for fifty years and become a local institution, and will in its new form maintain the journalistic momentum it has gained. It will still be Liberal in its policy though nd doubt, extreme partisanship will be largely dominated or modified by the Conservative annex acting as a balance wheel. The new journal will take the place of two heretofore rather strong partisan journals, and with advantage, to its future, the living down of extreme political sentiment will make for greater success.

The day of extreme partisanship in journalism is virtually past, though here and there there are a few journals, which will not continue to survive as prospecous and influential newspapers unless they mend their ways. Perhaps the fact that the late Times was extremely partisan and also inclined to harbour and promulgate racial and religious antipathies, may not altogether be ignored as an influence in its resort to amulgamation. The new national spirit of harmony, called out by the war, brings, or should bring, Liberals and Conservatives together in new associations—not as bitter party rivals, but as rivals in seeing which party can be the most effective in promoting the national well-being and meeting the duties of citizenship in a way to promote harmony of national sentiment, and patriotic service in building up a great civilization in Canada. Amalgamaton in more things than newspapers could be advantageously adopted in Canada.

The Brantford Parks Commission has taken over all the trees in the city to help fight the tussock moth. Why can't Peterborough have a park commission? It won't cost anything and would prevent a lot of philistinism.

ALDERMEN AND OUR TREES

It is an encouraging and a novel thing to have aldermen take an interest in the preservation of the beauty of our street trees. What is needed most to create a public interest in civic beauty is the example of the shorties. I very few of them are a little about the proposition of our street trees or the intensity of our boulevards as public beauty spots, the citizens will be more inclined to care also.

The aldermen were justified in condemning the arboreal atrocities of the Hydro Electric Commission workmen, though it is probable that eliminations will not take place. The chairman of the Utilities Commission, Mr. Matthews, had his attention called to the matter by the Examiner, and he gave assurances that the mutilation of trees should not continue, as had been the case with the street the aldermen mentioned, or other streets. The chairman is a man of his word, a gentleman of culture and taste and public spirit, and we may be sure that mutilation of street trees by Utilities workmen will be avoided in the future. This can be done by having the necessary removal of tree growth supervised by somebody that knows—and cares. No workman of any organization, nor anybody else, should be turned loose to work havoc on our street trees at will.

But the aldermen should qualify themselves for condemnation of tree mutilation by refraining from it themselves. Nobody has been more hostile, in practice, to the street tree interests of the city, than the city council. The council seems to have always given ready assent to anybody—with a vote, perhaps—who wanted to lay low a street tree growing in the public interest, and the property of the public, for the sake of accommodating some petty private interest.

The city authorities, too, in the past few years, have destroyed many magnificent street trees, apparently without any better excuse than some of them may have interfered with the distribution of the light of a street lamp. A street lamp can be placed or shifted in an hour; but a tree with the growth of a century in its huge trunk, and its splendid spread of umbrageous beauty and distinction, is the work of three or four generations of men.

The city has set apart $200 for tree trimming; but if some one, like the tree butchers of the past, are set to work to spend the money, it had better be kept in the treasury. Nobody has been, as yet, trusted with the trimming of street trees who knew, or even cared, how the work should be done.

In spending the $200 for treating our street trees, mutilation and injury should not be the result.

Cultured care and seasoned judgment should be applied to our street trees. Neglect has injured or killed many trees which need removing, and as Mr. Adams, town planner, said, and as others have said, in many places trees are growing too close together, and there is need of judicious thinning.

It's a heart-breaking thing to a man of taste to cut down a growing thriving tree; but where they have grown too close together, some must be removed in the interests of the proper growth of others. To do this properly, preliminary preparation is needed. Have somebody with sound tree judgment and real tree interest select this year the tree for removal. Then trim this tree severely to the top, leaving the top so as to avoid break in the line of foliage. When the trees on either side grow towards each other to fill the space occupied by the removed branches, cut down the intervening tree as decided upon, and there will be little or less unsightly break in the continuity of foliage.

Hon. Arthur Henderson, M.P., Labour member of the British government, says that Canada, by the adoption of prohibition, has "given a mighty moral lead to the Empire."

THE ROAD TO VICTORY.

Stream of Transports on Ancient Highway.

There is a broad road which runs like a spiral column across the north of France, which the British private has nicknamed the "Road to Victory." His fondness for this road is perhaps due to the fact that it is broader, better paved, and more direct than most other roads, being one of those highways which Napoleon laid out many generations ago.

Over this "Road to Victory" there moves a never-ending procession of transport of the most varied character. Standing at a cross-roads, one sees first a group of four wagons; theirs is a pleasant load, for they carry rations—clean, wholesome yellow cheeses, sides of prime bacon, fresh white bread in sacks, chests of tea, sugar, jam, tinned butter and bully-beef, sacks of potatoes and onions, sides of frozen beef and mutton.

Behind the ration carts follow a string of twenty great hooded motor-lorries laden with lumber of various kinds. Each lorry in this group carries its name proudly on its side, the names all taken from Dickens' characters—Betsy Prig, Martin Chuzzlewit, Micawbar, Oliver Twist, Mr. Bumble, Sairey Gamp, and others. Some are carrying "duckboards," which are little sections of skeleton sidewalk for foot traffic over the mud. Others are laden with "turkey trots," little wooden bridges for shell-holes. Still others have long bundles of brushwood "fascines" for filling in hollow places in roads. Yet others have lengths of bench planking for corduroy roads.

Next in line behind the lorries is a battery of field guns painted in a strange motley of greens, browns, and yellow. The horses are in pink of condition, their coats agleam, their drivers tanned brick-red by exposure.

After the guns come long strings of pack mules wearing brown canvas "carriers," from the pockets of which peep the gleaming cases of eighteen-pounder shells, or the squat yellow bodies of field howitzer ammunition. The mule is certainly doing his bit in this war. Plodding and patient, he works his ten or twelve hours a day back and forth between dump and gun position, mostly under shellfire, always through roads muddy and wet and shell-torn.

So the long column moves onward under the beckoning hand of the military policeman at the cross roads. More lorries pass, filled with men all singing lustily. Then come two strange looking tractors hauling big howitzers; a labor battalion marching forward to work and carrying shovels instead of rifles; more mules; more lorries—endless procession, always going forward along this great road.

And the road itself, on which the traffic never ceases day or night, moves always, pushing further and further forward to the east.

AERIAL TANKS.

Armored Machines to Do Work of Land Battleships.

The construction of aerial tanks, or, to use the technical term, armored aeroplanes, that will accompany the infantry in the air just as the tanks go forward on the ground, is being considered by the French aviation authorities. The Germans have been using aeroplanes of this type, recognizing the value of this aid to an attack by infantry.

These machines, being necessarily of considerable weight, cannot fly very fast and are useless for scouting or fighting in the air with enemy planes. But the effect on the morale of troops of aeroplanes flying over the heads of the foe, pouring into their ranks volleys from machine guns, was amply demonstrated in the battles in Flanders, when British and French observation and fighting planes abandoned their legitimate functions and took part in the infantry attacks. Being of the lightest construction and wholly unprotected they were easy marks for rifle and machine gun fire.

To utilize to the utmost the aeroplane in connection with the infantry, the protection of the craft by means of light armor is being considered. This principle may be also applied to other classes of planes. To-day French tactical aviation possesses the best multi-plane machines.

The Breguets, the Samsons, the Caudron R-H are of the greatest efficiency. But experience has demonstrated that artillery observation machines are never safe from attacks of the enemy fighting planes, no matter how vigilant are the escadrilles whose duty it is to defend them. This fact has made it evident that it is necessary to build machines that are able to defend themselves.

The problem of construction is still far from being solved. It is necessary to have specialized planes for reconnaissance, photography and artillery regulation, and there must also be planes for infantry liaison and trench attacks.

The first class must be able to fly high and fast; the second, that accompany the infantry, must crawl and go slowly. To crawl at a low altitude they must be armored, otherwise they are quickly doomed to destruction.

Armored planes existed in 1914, and even before the war, but little by little they have disappeared.

On days of attack the French pilots are forced to fly for hours at less than 300 feet from the enemy trenches, filled with machine guns. For several months the Germans have employed an airship of the Junker type, entirely made of metal, all of whose machinery, motor, and guns are protected by a shell proof armored covering. They are thus able in the very face of enemy infantry to attack without much danger to themselves. It is to meet this emergency that the allies are now considering the building of aerial tanks.

Make Your Mind Master.

To make your life count you must begin now. The youth who applies himself has the best advantage. But it often happens that bright young folks have to play the fool for a few years to learn the value of opportunities. Some of them never get over it. They are the ones who know it all and resent advice from their betters. But anyone can rise if he wants to. Set the proper task and see that it's realized. Make your mind master and the result will be to your credit.

Care for the Crazy.

In the Orient the crazy man is a privileged person, to be tolerated, given food, allowed to go where he will, but never cured. He is supposed to be a peculiarly "holy person." But it is Americans, says World Outlook, who in 1872 founded the first hospital for the insane east of Suez—the Kerr Refuge at Canton, with 500 patients, who come from all classes; here you will find the mandarin, the colonel and beggar. Of them 39 per cent are reported as recovered.

Eider-Ducks.

Eider-ducks are numerous everywhere in Norway. Being the producers of the valuable eiderdown, a staple article of trade in Norway, they are rigorously protected by law, and are in consequence so tame as in many places to approximate to domestic fowl. The birds are regarded with far from friendly eyes by the fishermen, by reason of the damage they work among the spawning-beds of the fish. Lobsters in particular suffer severely from their depredations, the "fruit" of a female lobster being an especial dainty to the eider-duck.

Dick Smith, the goalkeeper, is the new benedict, and he is not by any means a novelty in himself, for he has been between the posts for the Bradley gang for a long time. In fact, the last couple of years, when the Petes were figuring out the prospects for the season, some one would remark, "Well, Oshawa will lose Smith this year"; but when the season opened, the same old Smith would be found in the nets for the Oshawa Juniors.

He is there again this year, and will tear himself away from the responsibilities of married life long enough to play against the Petes to-night. Th same Smith is a clever goalkeeper, and when he is right his opponents have to earn everything they get.

The two teams are old rivals, and there will be nothing of a pink tea nature about to-night's game.

Peterboro' Boy Makes Good Showing In Detroit Ice Races

Walter Jackson, a well known Peterborough boy now living in Detroit, has been making a great showing in the skating game this winter, winning three firsts and skating a dead heat in the other event in which he started. At the Mack Park rink, Jackson won the half mile and the 50 yard dash and at the big ice carnival at the Detroit Arena he was first in the half-mile race.

Speaking of the race in which Jackson skated a tie, a Detroit paper says: Jack High and Walter Jackson, the two real rivals in local amateur skating ranks, tried in vain to settle their arguments as to supremacy at the Arena Ice Carnival Thursday evening, the Australian pursuit race of a half mile resulting in a dead heat.

Starting on opposite sides of the rink neither skater could gain an inch in the six laps skated and another race will be put on at a later date to decide who's who.

WANT ROOSEVELT AS PALL BEARER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ABINGTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—Former President Roosevelt has been invited to be a pall bearer at the funeral of John L. Sullivan. A reply to the wired invitation has not yet been received.

Already eight names are on the list of pall bearers. They include Mayor Curley, of Boston, Captain James P. Sullivan of the City Hall Ave. Police Station, and Clarence Rowley, the dead man's attorney for years. Interment will be at Calvary cemetery, followed bw a funeral mass at St. Paul's church, Roxbury.

EDDIE COLLINS EXEMPT; WHITE SOX WILL HAVE GREAT INFIELD INTACT

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Eddie Collins will play second base for the Chicago White Sox again this year. The $50,000 star has received word that he will be placed in Class Four. Consequently Manager Rowland will have the same infield that played in the World's Series last fall—Gandil, Collins, Weaver and McMullin.

According to present indications, the White Sox may lose only one of their regulars, Pitcher Urban Faber, whose strategy proved to much for the Giants in October. "Happy" Felsch, who was married last summer, will escape the draft under a recent ruling by Secretary of War Baker.

LENTEN MESSAGE SOUNDS WARNING

In his Lenten message to the clergy and the laity, which will be read in all the Anglican churches throughout the province next Sunday, the Bishop of Ontario regards it as no exaggeration to say that this year will probably be a more fateful one for the destiny of the world than any of those immediately preceding it. The Bishop does not think that people have yet realized the tremendous strain upon the spiritual powers of endurance and faith the war is causing, and while they set out at once with vigor to make up for their utter unpreparedness for war they had done very little to strengthen their spiritual weakness. Out of this terrible nightmare of sorrow and suffering the love of God will eventually shine the Bishop states, but it needs faith to hold on firmly to this belief, and the approaching Lent with its special call to repentance for past shortcomings, to renewed vitality in both prayer and worship, to self-discipline by self-denial offers the opportunity to the people to identify themselves with His purposes. The Bishop's message concludes: "Let not our lack of faith be a hindrance. Let us offer Him that 'effectual fervent prayer' which availeth much, and by so doing we shall bring about that peace for which all are longing and praying."

In the boys' game of which Mr. Douglas Caniff captained the Peterborough team, and Mr. Robert Chilton the Cobourg, the home team administered a pretty sever trimming, defeating Cobourg to a score of 66 to 6.

Sir,—I see by press reports that the I.O.D.E. of Montreal has arrang. for the complete reorganisation of the collection of waste paper, and that in future the service will be prompt.

Why don't our women reorganise for the same purpose, if their patriotism still remains, as I believe it does? The proceeds from such a source forms a valuable asset for patriotic purposes.

Like many others, I have been saving my old paper, neatly tied up in small bundles, easy to handle, and yet there is no move to collect the same. If no one is going to call for it, I shall have to commit it to the flames or hand it out to the garbage collector.

"Save and Serve" is a good motto when put into executive, but waste at all times is to be deplored.—Yours truly, Patriotism.

USE BUSINESS METHODS U.S. IS ADVISED

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.— Senator Hitchcock to-day urged the war department to run on the up-to-date methods of great business concerns. Great Britain had to come to it, and so would the United States.

"I am told," said Hitchcock, "that some genius in the War Department Bureau succeeded in shipping to France a carload of sawdust, which is plentiful enough and cheap enough there, while nearly 3 million tons of important freight has been waiting a chance to go over for a month," he said. Conflicting orders for bags for gas masks, he asserted, had been issued in the war department, one for 1 million, another for 2 million, and the third for five million. Fortunately one of the civilian committee men outside of the department discovered the conflicting orders and secured a revision and stopped the blunder, he said. "The President and the Secretary of War have evidently realized the defect of the existing system and have attempted to change it," said Hitchcock, "without legislation but without success."

St. John's Church Confirmation Class

At the services yesterday in St. John's Church, the Rector, Major J. C. Davidson, gave notice of the Confirmation classes, which will commence on Friday at 5.15 p.m. A pastoral letter from the Rector was distributed. The Rector expressed, on behalf of the Church, sympathy for the family of Driver Millard Brooks, who was connected with the Sunday School and the congregation of St. John's. Reference was made to the death of Mrs. Godfrey also a member of St. John's, and to Mr. F. M. DeiaFosse, who is ill in St. Joseph's Hospital; also to the death of the late Mrs. Edgecombe Pearce, in whose memory the flowers were placed yesterday on the Altar A warm welcome was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberts, formerly workers of St. John's and who have returned from Windsor.

The Rector also announced that in future the time Holy Communion formerly administered at 8 o'clock, will be changed to 8.30 o'clock.

Two People Asphyxiated In Hamilton

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 4. — Mrs. Margaret Griffin and her fourteen year old son were found dead to-day in the room they occupied on Walnut street. They were asphyxiated when the gas which had been left burning, suddenly died down and later came on in full force.

"I am afraid, my dear young friend, that I am losing my grip." "Don't say that, Professor. Why, your address has been holding attention from the start." "But I am losing my grip, I tell you. I saw the porter give it to the wrong man." Baltimore American.

Opera Chairs In Gallery At The New Court Room

When the County Council completes the rebuilding of the Court House, the Court Room should never again be a reproach to Peterborough. In the old days, before the Quaker Oats fire, High Court judges used to complain of the lack of light and ventilation, and judicial noses were wont to sniff at the heavy air, sometimes redolent of "skillet," and wonder what fate had served them so malevolently as to send them here. Judge Huycke had on occasion dropped broad hints that the County Council might easily employ themselves if they had all the roads and bridges in good repair. A brand from the Quaker Oats fire, however, put an end to the plaints of the judiciary, and the contentions that sometimes broke out in the Council.

The special property committee, with Warden Anderson as chairman, which has had charge of the remodelling and reconstruction, has reached the stage of purchasing furniture for the Court Room. They met on Saturday afternoon to consider tenders, but adjourned without letting the contract. The judge's screen, chair and bench is a beautiful design, suggesting dignity and authority. The furnishing will harmonise with this central setting. Gone are the circular benches with their amphitheare effect. A railing across the room will enclose the Court with its special seats for the Grand Jury and petit jury, twelve seats for each group, also for the lawyers, press, witnesses, and finally, the focal figure, the prisoner.

The gallery will provide accommodation for over two hundred persons. Orchestra chairs for the public's comfort will be a feature, not for display, but because they are actually cheaper than benches. The railing, tables, dock, witness box, all the Court furniture, will be in quarter-cut oak.

To-day the contractors are working on the gallery elevations, and in its nudity the room is essentially beautiful. The walls are a soft white plaster of paris, with vaulted ceiling, heavily panelled. An abundance of electric lighting has been provided.

It is stated that the Peterborough County Court Room will not only be the largest in the province, but will also be one of the finest in design and appointments.

Furniture for the law library, the county clerk's office, and other rooms is also being ordered.

The total cost will be about $5,000. Of this sum $1,000 will cover the furnishings for the Court Room.

GARIBALDIAN VOLUNTEER ARMY TO WEAR RED SHIRTS OF GLORY

ROME, Feb. 4.—Garibaldian volunteers are enlisting with great enthusiasm throughout Italy. They range from youths to aged veterans, who fought in the wars of independence, under the great hero.

The Government has permitted the formation of this body of volunteers, which will be commanded by Gen. Peppino Garibaldi. The officers have been chosen from the regular army. The men will be allowed to wear the Red Shirt, of ancient glory. From all the Italian colonies abroad many applications for enlistment have been received.

Red Hot Battle When Oshawa Meets The Petes To-night

A Married Goal Keeper a Novelty For the Oshawa Team —Old Rivals Will Clash at Brock St. Rink in First Game of Junior O. H. A. Semi-finals.

With a fast sheet of ice ready and both teams at full strength and in the best of shape, the second round Junior O.H.A. game at Brock Street rink to-night between Oshawa and Peterborough should be a sensational battle.

In Toronto this year the Junior games have surpassed in sheer interest both the senior fixtures and the N.H.A. clashes, and Peterborough fans have a chance to-night to be just one of those games that have had the Toronto fans on their toes this season.

The local team has won a host of friends this season by their clever work, and a grand crowd will be on hand to see them battle Manager Bradley's fast-stepping youngsters. The Oshawa outfit will take some beating. They have a fast forward line, with Venini, who played intermediate last year, at right wing, Bowen, who scored fifteen goals in one game recently, at centre, and Southwell, a clever youngster at left wing. Swinyard, who played against the Petes last year, is the substitute. By the way, Oshawa will introduce a novelty to-night in the shape of a married man playing junior hockey. Dick Smith, the goalkeeper, is the new benedict, and he is not by any means a novelty in himself, for he has been between the posts for the Bradley gang for a long time. In fact, the last couple of years, when the Petes were figuring out the prospects for the season, some one would remark, "Well, Oshawa will lose Smith this year"; but when the season opened, the same old Smith would be found in the nets for the Oshawa Juniors.

He is there again this year, and will tear himself away from the responsibilities of married life long enough to play against the Petes to-night. The same Smith is a clever goalkeeper, and when he is right his opponents have to earn everything they get.

The two teams are old rivals, and there will be nothing of a pink tea nature about to-night's game.

The puck will be faced at 8.15, with the Petes lining up as follows:

Goal—Murray.
R. Defence—Girard.
L. Defence—Hagerman.
Centre—Cherrett.
R. Wing—Park.
L. Wing—Bartley.

WANT ROOSEVELT AS PALL BEARER

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ABINGTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—Former President Roosevelt has been invited to be a pall bearer at the funeral of John L. Sullivan. A reply to the wired invitation has not yet been received.

Already eight names are on the list of pall bearers. They include Mayor Curley, of Boston, Captain James P. Sullivan of the City Hall Ave. Police Station, and Clarence Rowley, the dead man's attorney for years. Interment will be at Calvary cemetery, followed bw a funeral mass at St. Paul's church, Roxbury.

EDDIE COLLINS EXEMPT; WHITE SOX WILL HAVE GREAT INFIELD INTACT

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Eddie Collins will play second base for the Chicago White Sox again this year. The $50,000 star has received word that he will be placed in Class Four. Consequently Manager Rowland will have the same infield that played in the World's Series last fall—Gandil, Collins, Weaver and McMullin.

According to present indications, the White Sox may lose only one of their regulars, Pitcher Urban Faber, whose strategy proved to much for the Giants in October. "Happy" Felsch, who was married last summer, will escape the draft under a recent ruling by Secretary of War Baker.

LENTEN MESSAGE SOUNDS WARNING

In his Lenten message to the clergy and the laity, which will be read in all the Anglican churches throughout the province next Sunday, the Bishop of Ontario regards it as no exaggeration to say that this year will probably be a more fateful one for the destiny of the world than any of those immediately preceding it. The Bishop does not think that people have yet realized the tremendous strain upon the spiritual powers of endurance and faith the war is causing, and while they set out at once with vigor to make up for their utter unpreparedness for war they had done very little to strengthen their spiritual weakness. Out of this terrible nightmare of sorrow and suffering the love of God will eventually shine the Bishop states, but it needs faith to hold on firmly to this belief, and the approaching Lent with its special call to repentance for past shortcomings, to renewed vitality in both prayer and worship, to self-discipline by self-denial offers the opportunity to the people to identify themselves with His purposes. The Bishop's message concludes: "Let not our lack of faith be a hindrance. Let us offer Him that 'effectual fervent prayer' which availeth much, and by so doing we shall bring about that peace for which all are longing and praying."

In the boys' game of which Mr. Douglas Caniff captained the Peterborough team, and Mr. Robert Chilton the Cobourg, the home team administered a pretty sever trimming, defeating Cobourg to a score of 66 to 6.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I see by press reports that the I.O.D.E. of Montreal has arranged for the complete reorganisation of the collection of waste paper, and that in future the service will be prompt.

Why don't our women reorganise for the same purpose, if their patriotism still remains, as I believe it does? The proceeds from such a source forms a valuable asset for patriotic purposes.

Like many others, I have been saving my old paper, neatly tied up in small bundles, easy to handle, and yet there is no move to collect the same. If no one is going to call for it, I shall have to commit it to the flames or hand it out to the garbage collector.

"Save and Serve" is a good motto when put into executive, but waste at all times is to be deplored.—Yours truly,

Patriotism.

USE BUSINESS METHODS U.S. IS ADVISED

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner).

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.— Senator Hitchcock to-day urged the war department to run on the up-to-date methods of great business concerns. Great Britain had to come to it, and so would the United States.

"I am told," said Hitchcock, "that some genius in the War Department Bureau succeeded in shipping to France a carload of sawdust, which is plentiful enough and cheap enough there, while nearly 3 million tons of important freight has been waiting a chance to go over for a month," he said. Conflicting orders for bags for gas masks, he asserted, had been issued in the war department, one for 1 million, another for 2 million, and the third for five million. Fortunately one of the civilian committee men outside of the department discovered the conflicting orders and secured a revision and stopped the blunder, he said. "The President and the Secretary of War have evidently realized the defect of the existing system and have attempted to change it," said Hitchcock, "without legislation, but without success."

St. John's Church Confirmation Class

At the services yesterday in St. John's Church, the Rector, Major J. C. Davidson, gave notice of the Confirmation classes, which will commence on Friday at 5.15 p.m. A pastoral letter from the Rector was distributed. The Rector expressed, on behalf of the Church, sympathy for the family of Driver Millard Brooks, who was connected with the Sunday School and the congregation of St. John's. Reference was made to the death of Mrs. Godfrey also a member of St. John's, and to Mr. F. M. DelaFosse, who is ill in St. Joseph's Hospital; also to the death of the late Mrs. Edgecombe Pearce, in whose memory the flowers were placed yesterday on the Altar A warm welcome was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberts, formerly work--- of St. John's and who have returned from Windsor.

The Rector also announced that in future the time Holy Communion formerly administered at 8 o'clock, will be changed to 8.30 o'clock.

Two People Asphyxiated In Hamilton

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 4. — Mrs. Margaret Griffin and her fourteen year old son were found dead to-day in the room they occupied on Walnut street. They were asphyxiated when the gas which had been left burning, suddenly died down and later came on in full force.

"I am afraid, my dear young friend, that I am losing my grip." "Don't say that, Professor. Why, your address has been holding attention from the start." "But I am losing my grip, I tell you. I saw the porter give it to the wrong man." Baltimore American.

Opera Chairs In Gallery At The New Court Room

When the County Council completes the rebuilding of the Court House, the Court Room should never again be a reproach to Peterborough. In the old days, before the Quaker Oats fire, High Court judges used to complain of the lack of light and ventilation, and judicial noses were wont to sniff at the heavy air, sometimes redolent of "skillet," and wonder what fate had served them so malevolently as to send them here. Judge Huycke had on occasion dropped broad hints that the County Council might easily employ themselves if they had all the roads and bridges in good repair. A brand from the Quaker Oats fire, however, put an end to the plaints of the judiciary, and the contentions that sometimes broke out in the Council.

The special property committee, with Warden Anderson as chairman, which has had charge of the remodelling and reconstruction, has reached the stage of purchasing furniture for the Court Room. They met on Saturday afternopn to consider tenders, but adjourned without letting the contract. The judge's screen, chair and bench is a beautiful design, suggesting dignity and authority. The furnishing will harmonise with this central setting. Gone are the circular benches with their amphitheare effect. A railing across the room will enclose the Court with its special seats for the Grand Jury and petit jury, twelve seats for each group, also for the lawyers, press, witnesses, and finally, the focal figure, the prisoner.

The gallery will provide accommodation for over two hundred persons. Orchestra chairs for the public's comfort will be a feature, not for display, but because they are actually cheaper than benches. The railing, tables, dock, witness box, all the Court furniture, will be in quarter-cut oak.

To-day the contractors are working on the gallery elevations, and in its nudity the room is essentially beautiful. The walls are a soft white plaster of paris, with vaulted ceiling, heavily panelled. An abundance of electric lighting has been provided.

It is stated that the Peterborough County Court Room will not only be the largest in the province, but will also be one of the finest in design and appointments.

Furniture for the law library, the county clerk's office, and other rooms is also being ordered.

The total cost will be about $5,000. Of this sum $1,000 will cover the furnishings for the Court Room.

The Government has permitted the formation of this body of volunteers, which will be commanded by Gen. Peppino Garibaldi. The officers have been chosen from the regular army. Bakers Have To Pay More

Cost of Standard Flour is Greater Than Higher Grade Product

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—When the Government undertook to regulate the price of the feed which is sold by millers to farmers, the loss representing the difference in price which the millers used to charge and that which they now have to charge, has to be made up by increasing the price of flour to the bakers, with the remarkable result that the bakers are now paying more for standard flour than they used to do for the higher grade product before the Food Controller's order was announced. The situation was explained by an official of the Canadian Flour Export Company to-day. The increase in price of flour per barrel made necessary by the decrease in the price of feed to the farmers is 15 cents, and to this must be added the new Government tax of 1 1-2 cents per bushel, which means 7 cents per barrel on the flour. The total increase per barrel is thus 22 cents, but this is reduced by the fact that the new flour is of lower grade than the old and is worth 12 cents less, so that the result of the whole business is that the baker must pay cents more per barrel for his flour than he did formerly, and cannot recover this from his customers, as the fraction on each loaf is very small.

THE COMING OF THE "AUCTION BLOCK"

A Tremendous "Punch" Play —Stirring Life Drama—Marrying For Money And its Results

Lorelei Knight is the daughter of a crooked country town politician and a shrewd, nagging mother. She is so beautiful that her mother has never allowed her to turn a hand to household tasks for fear she will mar physical attractions which the mother hopes to turn to monetary profit.

Lorelei's brother, Jimmy, who has inherited the dishonest tendencies of his father and the shrewdness of his mother, makes an engagement by mail for Lorelei to be seen by the manager of New York's most famous "girl show." She is engaged at sight and her family moves with her to New York with the avowed intention of putting her on the marimonial market for all she will bring—of putting her on the auction block to be knocked down to the highest bidder.

She is bought in marriage by the dissolute son of a millionaire, who appears to have more money than he really has. When she discovers this and he learns that she does not love him there is an awakening which results in pronounced domestic unpleasantness.

In the course of the story Lorelei comes into contact with Jarvis Hammon, steel millionaire, and his satellites and slaves. Thrilling episodes follow.

Lorelei, meanwhile, is busy at the self-set task of making a man of her young scamp of a husband. His father refuses to give him money and he is forced to go to work. He works with a will, but his craving for extravagant company and the stimulation of drink makes the reeneration he is fighting for hard

Not until Loreli leaves him does he come to a full realization of his misdeeds and set about to win her love. When they are happy together the advent of a baby brings about a reconciliation between the young husband and his parents.

Rubye De Remer, who has been styled by one critic "New York's most beautiful girl" heads the cast of "The Auction Block."

"The Auction Block" is boked for the Empire Theatre for Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 6th and 7th, direct and intact from its overwhelming triumph in the large city theatres.

Banks Should Be Allowed To Take Payment

An important and practical suggestion for an improvement in the machinery used in floating Canada's national loans comes from a bank branch manager at Calgary. It has to do with the fact that a great many people are under the impression that the payment due on January 2nd would automatically be charged to their bank account. In Calgary there were thousands of people under this impression and the conditions in that city were common to all of Canada. Particularly was it a problem in the rural districts where it is difficult to get in touch with those customers of the bank who have not telephone connections In view of this condition this Calgary manager makes the suggestion that, instead of a form which permitted a charge to the customer's account for the first payment only, this should contain instructions to the bank to charge the account with all subsequent payments If the subscriber did not desire this and wished to give specific instructions, all he would have to do would be to delete such words as exceeded his wishes

"What's this?" asked the acquitted man. "The bill for my services," said the lawyer. "Go on! You proved that I was insane, didn't you?" "Yes." "Well, you can't do business with an insane man. You ought to know that."—Boston Transcript.

CANDLEMAS DAY

"If Candlemas day be dry and fair,
The half o' winter's to come and mair,
If Candlemas day be wet and foul,
The half o' winter's gone at Yule."

So runs an old rhyme which probably accounts for superstition that the bear who comes out and sees his shadow on the second of February goes back for another six weeks' nap. Just why a fair Candlemas day should presage a long winter and a bad crop no one has ever satisfactorily explained, but so the saying runs.

Candlemas day, of course, really derives its name from being the supposed anniversary of the purification of the Virgin Mary. Extensive ceremonies on this day died out of England to a great extent with the Reformation though it is still observed as a holiday by the Church of England.

In Rome, however, there is a great ceremonial on Candlemas day at which the Pope officiates. The candles carried during the ceremony typify Christ as the Light of the World. It was an old superstition in England that the way in which the candle carried burned foretold the bearer's fortune for the year.

An old Scotch custom was for the children to take gifts of money to their teachers on Candlemas day. School was then dismissed and often a huge bonfire would be held during the afternoon.

It is an English custom to take down the Christmas decorations on Candlemas even, the holly being replaced with yew.

CAPT. PEARSON'S APPOINTMENT

Former Local Boy is Made Military Secretary of the National Council Y. M. C. A. For Alberta and British Columbia

Capt. H. A. Pearson of Toronto, formerly of the Peterborough Examiner staff, who has recently finished a tour of Canada and many cities in the United States, speaking of the work of the Y.M.C.A. in France, where for over two years he was Senior Secretary, has been appointed Military Secretary of the National Council Y.M.C.A. for the Provinces of Alberta and British Columbia, with headquarters at Vancouver.

Recently a request has come to the Y.M.C.A. from the mining communities in British Columbia, asking the same kind of work be undertaken for their employees as is being done for the soldiers in France The companies will erect and equip Red Triangle Huts and there will be programmes of moving pictures, sing-songs, educational classes, etc., similar to the plan carried on for the past three years for the boys in the army.

The Military authorities have asked the Y.M.C.A. to co-operate with them in caring for the large number of consumptive soldiers at present housed in the C.P.R. hotels in the mountains. LETTERS FOR PEOPLE IN ENEMY COUNTRIES

Post Office Department, Canada,
Ottawa:

Up to the present it has been permissable to send letters destined for persons in an enemy country or a country in the occupation of the enemy subject to censorship through the medium of an intermediary in a neutral country. An arrangement has now been made whereby such correspondence can be forwarded through the medium of Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son, 530 St. Catherine St., W., Montreal in connection with the authority received by their London House from the British Government to undertake the transmission of such correspondence.

The letters to be forwarded must relate only to private news and must not contain any reference to military or naval movements, to political and economic conditions or the like. The letter should be enclosed in an envelope legibly addressed to its ultimate destination, and must be left open in accordance with the censorship regulations of enemy countries. This should then be placed in another envelope addressed to Thos. Cook & Son, 530 St. Catherine St., Montreal, together with a slip bearing, legibly written, the name of the sender and also a postal note for twenty-five cents to cover the charges.

This amount covers the expense of transmitting the letter to a neutral country from thence to the enemy country and the reply. The arrangement necessary to ensure the transmission to the writers of any reply from the correspondents in enemy countries will be made by Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son.

There are certain towns to which on account of restrictions imposed by the enemy Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son cannot forward correspondence, and in other cases they are only able to transmit the letter without making arrangements for the reply. Full particulars, however, may be obtained from Thos. Cook & Son on writing to them at 530 St. Catherine St., W., Montreal, and enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for the reply.

Letters addressed to enemy and enemy occupied territory can only be sent in this manner and any which are being forwarded through other than this authorized channel will be returned to the sender. This does not affect in any way correspondence addressed as Prisoners of War in enemy occupied territory which is to be forwarded in accordance with the Prisoner of War regulations.

R. M. COULTER,
Deputy Postmaster General.

ANALYZES HIGH LIVING COST.

London, Eng. — "High wages mean high prices. Fresh cycles of wage advances succeed one another. Each one results in further increases of prices or in preventing a reduction of prices. The producers are raising prices against themselves as consumers. We are deeply impressed with the seriousness of the situation and are convinced that if the process continues the result can hardly fail to be disastrous to all classes of the nation."

This is the summing up of a report just given to the House of Commons by its Committee on National Expenditure, after long investigation into the rising cost of necessities of all kinds in Great Britain. "The whole thing is a vicious circle of rising wages followed by rising prices," asserts the report. The counter-recommendations of the committee include:

The government should endeavour to avoid the creation of new credits in financing the war.

The actual increase in the cost of living to the working classes should be ascertained.

Profits should be limited.

An advance of wages should be limited if given on any ground other than the rise in the cost of living.

A single policy under the direction of one authority should be adopted in all industries in the determination of wage questions. The all round increase in wages of 10 per cent, and similar increases in the cost of commodities purchased at home, have already involved an increase in national expenditure of 130,000,000 pounds yearly.

One of the most important causes of the increase of expenditure, says the committee, has been the expansion of credits. If it had been possible to finance the war from day to day by means entirely of taxation and loans from the savings of the people, the general increase of prices would have been considerably less than it is.

The fine green gold mesh bag is a pretty affair to carry with the afternoon costume.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PETERBORO' UTILITIES COMMISSION

Few Interruptions of Service During the Year—Otonabee System Consolidated With Utilities Commission Plant—Change in Street By-laws—New Construction.

Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, submitted the following third annual report at a meeting held on Saturday.

During the year 1917, the demand for light and power has steadily increased, as shown by the amount of power purchased for distribution. Our heaviest demand for 1916 occurred in December, when it would naturally be expected. This year of 1917 the heaviest month was in October, which exceeded the peak of 1916 by 248 H.P., and if the Metal Products Co. had continued their heavy demand up to the end of the year, the peak would have occurred in December and been 600 H.P. more than that of 1916. The actual K.W. hours used were 11,703,075—2,418,648 more than in 1916. New customers were taken on to the number of 745, 528 of whom were patrons of the old Otonabee Power Co., whose system was taken over on March 1st at a cost f $7,520. This system has since been consolidated with our own plant, completely metered and scrap to the value of $2,263.74 cleaned up and disposed of.

Interruption of Service.

Comparatively few interruptions of service have occured during the year. A partial shut down was caused by a very heavy sleet storm on April 7th, which was general all over the country, doing considerable damage to lines all over the city. Heavy lightning storms, accompanied by wind and rain, caused interruptions for a short time on May 1st, July 7th and 21st, and August 1st, also on December 28th, the Hydro lines over which we have no control, broke down, cutting off the supply of energy to No. 1 Power Circuit and East City for a short time.

Meter Department.

914 meters have been installed and 166 re-verified after five years' service. 666 services were disconnected for vacancy and 734 re-connected when re-occupied. This ever - moving population adds no little amount of work to our meter and billing departments.

Construction.

177 poles have been erected, 38,000 feet of wire strung, and 72 transformers with a capacity of 880 K.W. or 1179 H.P. have been placed and connected. Three circuits have been overhauled, cleared of trees, wires tightened up and put in good operating condition. Ten transformers with a capacity of 66.5 K.W. were burned out, due to tree trouble, lightning and old age.

Thawing.

During January, February, March and April 109 frozen water services were thawed out.

Street Lights.

On November 30th, the old series of street arc lamps were abandoned, after running continuously for 33 years, having first been started May 23rd, 1884. These were replaced with tungsten lamps, which are doing good work. The city is now lighted by 102 luminous magnitite ornamental lamps and 1,022 incandescent lamps.

Central Ontario Life Underwriters Met Saturday

Presentation Made to Mr. W. A. Haslam, Who is Leaving For Windsor

The regular meeting of the Life Underwriters' Association was held at the Empress Hotel on Saturday evening, Feb. 2nd, preceded by a very nice dinner. This meeting proved to be one of the best ever held by the Association, both from an educational and social standpoint. After the business was disposed of, Mr. W. A. Haslam, Supt. of the Metropolitan Life, who was leaving Monday for Windsor, was presented with a pipe and cain, as a slight token of appreciation for the good work and great service rendered to the Association. Mr. Haslam replied in an appropriate way, at the same time introducing his successor, Mr. A. G. Roberts.

Mr. J. I. Allen, Supt. of the Prudential Life, followed with a splendid paper, showing the great need for more life insurance. That people carried very considerably more insurance on their material things, but very much under insured their lives, with the result that families that had been living in comfort while the bread winner was with them, were now dependent upon friends or charity, when a small annual saving put into a life insurance policy would have altered the situation. Owing to the limited time, Mr. Allen unfortunately had to cut his paper short, which was a disappointment to those present.

The Rev. Canon Davidson, who was the guest of the Association for the evening, gave a most interesting account of some of his work at the front, at the same time expressing his pleasure of being present with what he termed, a fine body of men, doing a fine Christian work.

Mr. Sedgwick, the President, then gave an outline of the programme for the present year, in which he stated that every meeting night a real insurance canvas would be put on and that for the meeting to be held the first Saturday in March Mr. Ferguson, manager of the Dominion Life, would canvas Mr. Dawson, manager of the Imperial Life, Mr. Dawson presuming to be a large manufacturer.

The meeting came to a close at nine-thirty after a most enjoyable two hours had been spent. The number present was twenty-nine, including some of the out-of-town members.

CHURCH UNION BEING EFFECTED

SEVERAL DEPENDENT CHARGES TO BE CLOSED IN BAY OF QUINTE DISTRICT.

AVOIDING OVERLAPPING.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 3.—An important joint conference was held at Napanee on Friday, at which most important decisions were made looking to the union of a number of congregations of the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies in the Bay of Quinte district. If the proposals are carried out as arranged, six appointments will be closed, four ministers will be freed for work elsewhere, and $2,100 will be saved to missionary and augmentation funds, as well as additional amounts contributed locally for support of the ministerial workers and the homes in which they reside.

The meeting assembled in the Presbyterian Church at Napanee. There were present about fifteen of the clergy and laymen from the Bay of Quinte and Montreal Conferences of the Methodist Church and from Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. W. B. Tucker, of Madoc, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was elected chairman, and Rev. A. J. Wilson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Napanee, secretary.

After a full discussion resolutions were carried recommending that the Methodist appointments on Wolfe and Amherst Islands should be closed and Presbyerian appointments at Portsmouth, Collins' Bay, Consecon, and Hillier should also be closed.

On Tuesday next Rev. F. L. Brown, Superintendent of Missions of the Methodist Church; Rev. J. D. Byrnes, Superintendent of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. W. B. Tucker, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, will visit Peterborough, and on Wednesday visit Lindsay, to see what practical arrangements can be made looking to economy of men and resources.

The movement so far undertaken contemplates the closing of only such appointments as are not self-sustaining and require help from the mission funds of the two Churches. But there is a proposal on the part of some to have it extended to other places that are not missions, but where here is a notable overlapping of effort.

Sun Dogs After Bruin

According to Those Who Are Steeped in Weather Lore the Winter is Still Lusty

The weather man has turned loose his symbolic menagerie apparently to warn shivering mortals that winter has not yet expended its forces of hyperborean blasts.

On Saturday the bear of the old Candlemas legend glimpsed his shadow and turned tail on the alluring sun for another six weeks' snooze in his hibernal quarters.

This morning two sundogs growled a prognostication of severe, stormy weather, according to the ancient interpretation that these unleashed, unmuzzled hounds of the weather man bade only ill for those to whom Palm Beach and Bermuda are vain hopes.

BLOW TO USERS OF MARGARINE

Embargo May Mean Also That Manufacturing in Canada Will Cease.

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—Now that Canadian householders are getting used to oleomargarine as a substitute for butter, the news comes that the United States Food Controller has issued a decree against its shipment to Canada and the probabilty is that there will be litle, if any, on the Canadian market for some time. For each shipment sent out of the United States the shiper had to get a special license, according to the regulations of the Food Control Department. This license has been refused by the authorities, for the time being. There are manufacturers of oleomargarine in Canada, but the bulk of the supply comes from across the line, and one of the esential elements of the composition, cotton-seed oil, comes entirely from the United States.

THE POWER OF ACTION

Rev. Canon Davidson's Sermon at St. John's Last Evening

Yesterday evening, at St. John's, Canon Davidson, who had spoken in the morning on "Power through Repose," took for his subject, "Power through Action," basing his remarks on the words, "And doeth them," Matt. vii., 24. While we were a people of action, a community of workers, we did not always recognize the importance and real object of our different activities. The real end of work, whether secular or religious, was the benefit of the worker. Our daily work was a valuable discipline, tending to develop our faculties and make us strong, orderly, resourceful patient. Little advance was possible for an idle man. The swimmer kept himself up by action, and sank when it ceased. The aeroplane or steamer was only guided when in action. Let us do our work faithfully to the very best of our ability, not because of necessity but with a good heart doing our part of the world's work. It is good for us and through it we gain power, guidance and influence.

The power of action was of prime necessity, and strikingly exemplified in religion. The services of the Church, to be at all effective, must be distinctively in some sort services of action. Man's spirit, heart, mind, will, voice and body must all be engaged. Every one of these God-given faculties should be employed in His worship, and there was distinct loss if any were omitted. The action of the people was as important as the action of the clergymen, and one reacted on the other. In such action, glad, enthusiastic, warm - hearted God's gifts were received as they could not be received otherwise.

This was exemplified in the hearty congregational services in France, both liturgical and extemporaneous. Their evident power came largely through united action.

Far more important still than action in Church was resultant action in ordinary life afterwards. This was the direct message of the text. The triumphant survival or calamitous downfall of the Christian was here said to be determined by action or inaction, doing or not doing the Divine instructions given. It was tremendously important then that men should be in action not only in their churches but also, and more especially, outside them. We hear and talk of goodness. See to it that thoughts and words are translated into definite concrete actions. Get into action in the simple ordinary duties of life, in acts of honesty, honour, kindness, generosity, hospitality and other factors of all-round goodness.

It is really interesting to see how principles can be worked out in practice, and not so hard when one sets themselves to do this with Divine help. These doings multiplied will gradually form a strong and attractive character, and put one in the way of light and blessing. Doing good we shall gain good.

In spite of the storm the congregation was a large one, occasioning congratulatory remarks by the Rector.

A skirt of plaid velours and a coat of velvet make a pretty outfit for country wear.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS MUST OBTAIN THE 1918 LICENSES AND MARKERS

Chief Thompson has received the following letter from W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Public Highways:

"Toronto, Feb. 2.—Owners of motor cars have had one clear month in which to obtain their 1918 permits, and number plates. As our new markers are available and in use, confusion will result in the enforcement of the Motor Vehicle Law unless all owners now using cars are required to immediately obtain their licenses for the current year. We are, therefore, requesting all police authorities to enforce the Motor Vehicles Act in this regard after giving proper warning."

Chief Thompson stated that this notice must be regarded as sufficient warning. Automobile owners must conform to the law. Licenses and markers can be obtained from M. H. P. Lindsay, at his office over Kent's drug store, corner of Hunter and George streets.

QUIET SESSION OF LEGISLATURE IS EXPECTED

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—Although it is expected that the session of the Ontario Legislature, which opens formally to-morrow afternoon, will be followed by the Provincial elections, the prospects to-day are that the session will be one of the quietest in the memory of Old Man Ontario. The only important public legislation so far in sight is not of a nature likely to prolong the session, and it is expected that the sittings will be over before Easter, followed by prorogation about April 8th. The bill for the control and isolation of certain communicable diseases will be an important measure. Private legislation will apparently be very light, and confined largely to municipal bills. The formal opening will take place at three p.m. Tuesday, with the Speech from the Throne and the usual ceremonies.

112,000,000 Gals. of Water Was Record Pumpage In Jan.

The report of the Utilities Commission for January includes the statement that the water was entirely free from infection. The pumpage reached the record total of 112,000,000 gallons, an average of 3,613,000 gallons per day. This is the highest monthly consumption in the history of the department, and is attributed to the practice of many householders who leave their taps running in severe weather to prevent freezing. The heaviest day's pumpage was on the 26th, the day of the Neill fire, when 4,723,000 gallons were used. The peak rate that day was at the figure of 7¼ million gallons a day. In that crisis the pumps maintained a pressure of 120 pounds for eight hours. The department estimates that 1½ million gallons were poured on the Neill fire.

SCOTT ROBERTSON.

Scott Robertson, Keene, died yesterday evening in Nicholls Hospital, after a short illness.

Deceased was born in Keene 39 years ago, and had always resided there. He leaves of the immediate family his mother and three brothers, John, Peter and William, all residing in Otonabee.

Funeral from the family residence on Tuesday, February 5th, at 2.30 o'clock. Service at the house, conducted by Rev. Mr. White, of Keene, at 2 o'clock.

MR. THOMAS EDWARD WADE.

Thomas Edward Wade, who for the past 27 years has been a widely known resident of the city, died yesterday morning at the family residence, 87 London street, after an illness of several weeks' duration from heart trouble.

Mr. Wade was born in Hawkesbury, Ontario, 71 years ago, where he resided a number of years. Later he removed to Lakefield, where he resided while associated with the building of the Burleigh Locks, after which he came to Peterborough and was associated with the building of many public structures, among these being the Lift Lock and the Government Wharf.

Mr. Wade has for many years been well known in construction circles because of his prominent and long connection with public works, of many of which he has been inspector or superintending foreman. He was highly skilled in such work and his efficiency and reliability made his services sought and appreciated, and his employment in that capacity inspired confidence that the work intrusted to his supervision would be faithfully and honestly carried out.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge and of Court 33, Lakefield, C. O. F. He leaves of the immediate family, his wife and seven children, Mrs. Eldpath, Lethbridge; Mrs. O. Kitner, Painesville, Ohio; Mrs. C. M. Bennett, Miss Henrietta and Miss Aileen, all at home; Stanley and Alan with the 2nd Battalion, on active service in France.

A particularly sad circumstance surrounds Mr. Wade's death, in the fact that it has been his greatest wish during his illness that he might be spared until his two boys returned from the front.

The funeral, under Masonic auspices, will be held on Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Pogue will officiate. Service at 1.30, at the house.

The Visit of Dr. Grenfell To Peterborough

The coming of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell to Peterborough is a matter of greatest interest. The self-sacrificing work of this heroic man on the shores of Labrador has given him a place in the hearts of his fellow-men which few men have. There is not a city in Canada or the United States that would not feel honoured in having Dr. Grenfell as its guest.

Some years ago the Doctor Addressed a full house in this city. The meeting was then held in the Opera House. This year it was impossible to secure that building, but St. Paul's Church are opening their spacious audiorium for next Tuesday evening, and Mr. Fisk has kindly consented to operate the stereopticon for Dr. Grenfell. Mr. T. F. Matthews will introduce the guest to the people of Peterborough.

Council Meeting This Evening

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council will be held this evening Following a day of rest the Aldermen should be in excellent form for an all-night talk feast. There is very little business on the slate apart from the regular monthly routine.

For Chinese war-workers. Chinese gentlemen in London at the Chinese Legation packing cases of special New Year's gifts to be sent to the host of Chinese laborers on war work on various fronts, the gifts having been purchased by means of the generous, large money contributions which have been made by Chinese in England.

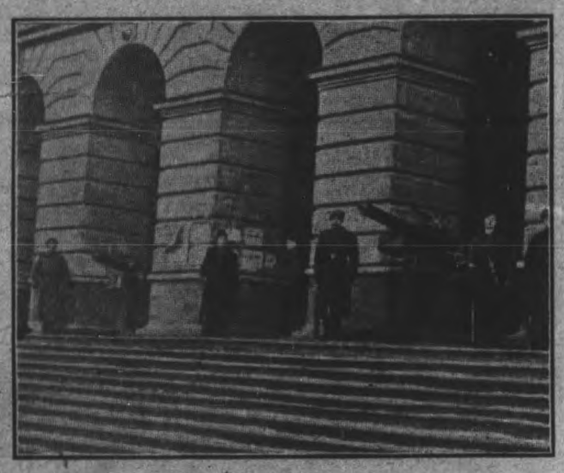
Aeroplane Cameras. Some of the various types and up-to-date patterns of photographic cameras employed by observers in reconnoitring aeroplanes of the French air service are seen in photograph, which was taken at one of the French aviation centres on the Aisne front.

A nurse wishes her patient "the best of luck and a good crossing." The scene is at a casualty clearing station somewhere in France. A Red-Cross train is waiting to pull out with its load of wounded bound for England. One such case is being lifted into the train on a stretcher. The army nurse and her patient are smiling, for this is not a very bad case. The number card hangs on the inside of the doorwary of the Red-Cross train.

In Gaza as the Turks left it: Houses stripped of timber for trench-building. Timber is scarce in most parts of Polestine, and perhaps more so than anywhere else in the southern regions of the country, in the districts that border on the Mediterranean coast-line. Everywhere the Turks stripped off the rafters and roof-beams and removed window-frames, floors and doors for trench-supports.



The Russian situation. Entrance to the Bolshevik Headquarters guarded by artillery.

Railway Laying at a French Camp—Pneumatic "Drilling."

Going to the Trenches: Taking a load of "aerial torpedoes" behind camouflage. Sir Douglas Haig has sent this special telegram to the Belgian Commander-in-Chief, congratulating the Belgian army on its part in recent fighting: "I wish to thank you most warmly, and also all ranks of the Belgian Army, for the valuable help given so loyally and so graciously and which I know will continue to be offered throughout our combined operations."

Proof of the well-equipped condition in which the British contingent has been sent to Italy. An anti-aircraft gun motor-lorry unity.

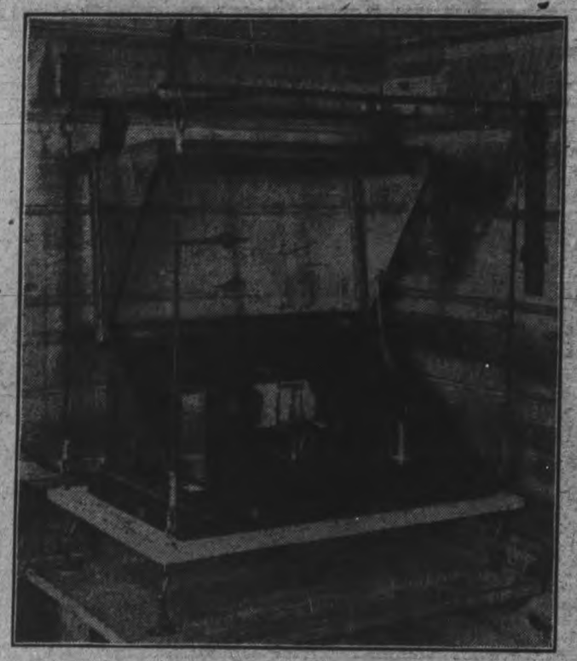
Current News Portrayed in these Striking Pictures from Many Points.



A scientific marvel that is of inestimable value in war operations. This instrument, known as the lightning recorder, gives warning of storms more than 200 miles away.

The men who control affairs in Russia. This is a representative group of Bolsheviki assembled in Petrograd to debate the conduct of the Revolutionary Government. They are delegates from the various industrial centres of the country and include many Americans, so called because they have lived in the United States, although few of them are citizens. There are several women in the assembly.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. W. H. Gough, lives on Lot 10, Con. 2, Village of Bloomfield, and Township of Hallowell, Prince Edward County. He was born in Bloomfield, and has always resided there. He is a gentleman of high repute in the community in which he lives, and is a practical farmer and a breeder of high-grade, pedigreed, registered Holstein cattle. He has long competed at the different fairs, and always succeeded in securing first and second prizes. His two sons take a lively interest in both farming and in stock raising. Mr. Gough and sons are always pleased to receive visitors and to show their thoroughbreds. They have a large farm, equipped with all modern improved farm implements, milking machines, gasoline engines, separators and very fine buildings. Intending purchasers would do well to give them a call. The pictures presented herewith show Mr. Gough, his Holsteins and his fine barns.

Signaller L. G. Clay, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clay, of Kingston, who left here in February, 1915, with the 22nd Battery. When the Bolsheviki seized the government there was great rejoicing among certain elements of the working classes. One of the most frequent methods of expressing satisfaction was in parading through the principal streets of the capital. This picture shows a vast procession marching along the Nevsky Prospekt beneath the banners of the Bolsheviki.

Bolshevist leader haranguing thousands of Russian soldiers and civilians in front of the Winter Palace, Petrograd. Protected by the so-called "Red Guard," shown in the foreground, composed of civilians who seized guns wherever they could be found and rushed to the support of the Bolsheviki.

FREE ADVICE ABOUT YOUR

Manly Strength

TO MY READER:

Whether or not you lack an abundant vigor here is a free offer which will surely interest you, and through which you may easily profit from now on to the end of a ripe, healthy, advanced age. I have compiled a little treatise for self help (book form) which I am pleased to send absolutely free by mail in a perfectly plain, sealed envelope to any man anywhere who writes for it. Over a million copies have already been thus distributed to those who wrote for the mfrom all over the world. There is no obligation whatsoever involved in this offer, nothing which you are required to buy, either now or in the future. It is just simply an out-and-out free proposal. In this little book of 72 pages, 8,000 words and 30 half-tone photo reproductions, I have endeavored to give a straight-forward talk to men, young and elderly, single and married, a concise compendium for self-reference, a perfectly plain discourse upon those important, personal matters relating to vital strength of men, the preservation of virility, its possible self-restroation, its legitimate uses and its wanton abuses. Every man should be in possession of this book. One part describes a little drugless mechanical vitalizer which I make and distribute, but whether or not you wish to use one of these vitalizers is for you yourself to determine.

IT'S THE MAN NOT THE CLOTHES THAT COUNTS.

However, aside from anything it contains in reference to my vitalizer, the book should be read by all for its real worth. Therefore, please use free coupon below.

SANDEN, Author.

Reader, the whole world is to-day alive to the importance of a better general understanding of sex hygiene. The much discussed science of eugenics is teaching the great mass of people that strong, healthy, rugged parents beget equally sturdy children.

Manhood, no matter where or in what condition of life we find it, is the single power that most fascinates both men and women. The one who radiates this manly influence, this result of a vigorous, sturdy nerve force, is the one who forges to the front, while weaker people stand aside.

It is my opinion that any man may hope for a complete restoration of his manhood and vigor if he but make up his mind that he WILL conquer himself. Of course I do not include the man of extreme old age, or the one who is incurably diseased. Lost vitality is not, according to my theory, an organic disease. It is more a sick condition of the mind and the nerves and a lowered state of the whole body all combined. My free book tells you just what you may do.

The vitalizer referred to above, which I make and distribute, is a little appliance that men who desire to restore lost vitality are using everywhere to-day. The book in one part fully describes it. You wear this vitalizer comfortably upon your body all night. It weighs but a few ounces, and apparently pours a great, gentle stream of FORCE or VITALITY into your blood, your nerves, your muscles and organs while you sleep. Men say it drives away the nervous weakness or pain in small of back, that vigor is restored in 60 to 90 days. With special attachments, my vitalizer is also used for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. It is a wonderful little appliance and generates and sends out a marvelous force. Possibly you might want to use one of these vitalizers in your own case. If so, you can, after reading the free book, let me know and I will make a special proposition whereby you may have one. If you live in or near this city I should be pleased to have you call and get a free demonstration of the vitalizer, otherwise write. Hours, 9 to 6. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case.

Let Us Send You This Book FREE!

Fill in the coupon; let me send you at once my free booklet in plain sealed envelope; it is profusely illustrated with half-tone photos; keep it in your pocket for ready reference; read the chapter on Vitality; read the chapter on Debility; read the chapter on those subjects which interest every man, young or old, who would be strong in manly vigor. It is a word of hope, a carefully written, interesting booklet, which should be in everyone's possession. Therefore send to-day.

Must Send Letters By This Channel

OTTAWA, Feb. 4. — An official memorandum, issued by Dr. R. M. Coulter, Deputy-Postmaster General, says:

"Up to the present time it has been permissible to send letters destined for persons in an enemy country, or a country in the occupation of the enemy, subject to censorship through the medium of an intermediary in a neutral country. An arrangement has now been made whereby such correspondence can be forwarded through the medium of Messrs. Thos. Cook and Son, 530 St. Catharine Street west, Montreal, in connection with the authority received by their London house from the British Government to undertake the transmission of such correspondence.

"The letters forwarded must relate only to private news and must not contain any reference to military or naval movements, to political or economic conditions, or the like. The letter should be enclosed in an envelope legibly addressed to its ultimate destination and must be left open in accordance with the censorship regulations of enemy countries. This should then be placed in another envelope addressed to Thos. Cook and Son, Montreal, together with a slip bearing legibly written the name of the sender and also a postal note for 25 cents to cover the charges. This amount covers the expense of transmitting the letter to a neutral country and the reply.

"Letters addressed to enemy and enemy-occupied territory can only be sent in this manner, and any which are being forwarded through other than this authorized channel will be returned to the sender. This does not affect in any way correspondence addressed to prisoners of war in enemy or enemy-occupied territory, which is to be forwarded in accordance with the prisoner-of-war regulations."

MANY CZERNIN NOTES TO WILSON.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—It is known positively, according to a despatch from Berne to The Daily Mail, that Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, through private intermediaries, has sent message after message to President Wilson, assuring him of the sincerity and guilelessness of Austrian diplomacy.

ANNUAL ESTIMATE OF PRINCIPAL GRAIN CROPS THROUGHOUT THE DOMINION

Yield and Quality of Grain Crops—Value of Field Crops in Canada—Average Values Per Bushel Are Higher Than in Any Previous Year.

FOUR PROVINCES COMPARED

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The Census and Statistics Office has issued its annual estimate of the yield, quality and value of the principal grain crops of Canada for the season of 1917, as compared with 1916. For the provinces of Quebec, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia, the agricultural statistics of 1917 were collected in co-operation with the Provincial Governments, and consequently for these four provinces the reports of both the Dominion and Provincial statistical authorities will record identical results.

Yield and Quality of Grain Crops.

The total yield of wheat for Canada is returned as 233,742,850 bushels from 14,755,850 acres, as compared with 262,781,000 bus. from 15,369,709 acres in 1916. Of oats the total yield is 403,009,800 bushels from 13,313,400 acres, as compared with 410,211,000 bushels from 10,996,487 acres in 1916. The yield of barley is 55,057,750 bus. from 2,392,200 acres, as against 42,770,000 bushels from 1,802,996 acres in 1916. The average yields per acre of these crops are in bushels, as follows, the corresponding figures of 1916 being placed within brackets: Wheat, 15.75 (17.10); oats, 30.25 (37.30); barley 23 (23.72). The total yields in 1917 of the remaining crops are as follows: Rye, 3,857,200 bushels; peas, 3,026,340 bushels; beans, 1,274,600 bushels; buckwheat, 7,149,400 bushels; mixed grains, 16,157,080 bushels; flaxseed, 5,984,900 bushels; corn for husking, 7,762,700 bushels.

The quality of the grain crops of 1917, as indicated by the average weight in pound per measured bushel, is as follows: Fall wheat, 59.37 lb., as compared with 59.52 lb. in 1916; Spring wheat, 59.48 lb., as against 56.51 lb.; all wheat, 59.46 lb., as against 57.10 lb.; oats, 33.55 lb., as against 33.86 lb.; barley, 46.97 lb., as against 45.66 l.; rye, 53.44 lb., as against 54.95 lb.; peas, 59.81 lb., as against 59.88 lb.; beans, 59.70 lb., as against 60 lb.; buckwheat, 46.49 lb., as against 46.35 lb.; mixed grains, 44.41 lb., as against 43.13 lb.; flaxseed, 54.73 lb., as against 54.99 lb.; and corn for husking, 56.18 lb., as against 56.51 lb.

Values of Field Crops in Canada.

The average values per bushel of grain crops for all Canada in 1917, according to the prices returned by the crop-reporting correspondents of the Census and Statistics Office, are higher than in any previous year. They are as follows: Fall wheat, $2.08 as compared with $1.54 in 1916; spring wheat, $1.93 against $1.29; all wheat, $1.94 against $1.31; oats, 69 cents against 51 cents; barley, $1.08 against 82 cents; rye, $1.62 against $1.11; peas, $3.54 against $2.22; beans, $7.45 against $5.40; buckwheat, $1.46 against $1.07; mixed grains, $1.16 against 88 cents; flax, $2.65 against $2.41; and corn for husking, $1.84 against $1.07.

TO THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA.

The Times: The carrying tonnage may be replaced, but the goods have perished forever. It is seldom when a vessel is lost that the nature of her cargo is revealed in this country, but the Germans whenever they secure the ship's papers before sending her to the bottom do not exercise the same reticence. Their newspapers reveal statistics supplied by the German Admiralty setting forth the valuable contents of their victims. Sometimes it is a cargo of foodstuffs, details of which must make their readers' mouths water, but preference is shown for a list which purported to describe a cargo ship sunk months ago, namely 135 field guns, 30 howitzers, 140 machine guns, 120,000 rifles, 50,000 shells, 160,000 bombs, 1,500,000 cartridges, six armored cars, 11 motor lorries.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN CURED BY MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Siberian Town, Home Of Nicholas Former Russ Czar, Called Dead City

Tobolsk, Ancient Capital of Siberia, Contains 30,000 Inhabitants—A Drab and Desolate Aspect—A Dismal Looking Structure is Prison —The Home of the Exiles

THE PRISON HERO

"A city of the dead." "A living tomb." This is how Harry de Windt the noted traveller, describes in "The Manchester Guardian," the Siberian town of Tobolsk, to which Nicholas Romanoff, once Czar of all the Russias, and his family have been exiled. De Windt writes:

"Tobolsk is the ancient capital of Siberia, and contains 30,000 inhabitants, largely composed before the war of Germans, engaged in the leather and tallow trades. It has been stated that the ex-Czar is being conveyed to his place of exile "by special train from Russia," which can hardly be correct, seeing that Tobolsk can be reached only by river. I had to travel there for five days from Moscow via Nijni-Novgorod, up the River Volga to Perm, thence across the Ural Mountains by rail to Tiumen, and down the Irtysh River.

"The province of which Tobolsk is chief town is eight times the size of Great Britain, and is sparsely peopled by Russians, Tartars and fur-clad Ostiaks and Samoyedes, yet it was once of considerable commercial importance, which, owing to the Transsiberian railway, has now greatly decreased.

"On approaching it from the river and viewed from a distance Tobolsk presents an imposing and picturesque appearance, which is quickly dispelled on closer acquaintance, for the place then assumes a listless, lifeless appearance which sinks into the soul. There is an upper and lower town, the former being the citadel, which consists of a cluster of whitewashed buildings overlooking the river from the summit of a precipitous limestone cliff.

"It is approached by a steep carriage drive, and here the ex-imperial family will probably reside, for the citadel comprises the governor's palace, government office and a golden-domed cathedral, whence there is a fine view of the river and crescent-shaped city, which chiefly consists of drab-coloured, weather-bleached wooden buildings in various stages of decay.

"Neither they nor the streets are kept in decent repair, and as the latter have rotted away, in places it is somewhat risky to drive after dark, for the town is but dimly lit. The constant clatter of traffic along these wooden thoroughfares becomes maddening after a time, for it resembles the incessant rolling of thousands of drums, and is generally prolonged far into the night. The best hotel was old, dirty and comfortless, and permeated, like many of the streets, with an odour of sewage, for the drainage here is of a very primitive description.

"There is a theatre (generally closed) and a so-called cafe chantant, which was unpleasantly suggestive of some low-class dives in New York and San Francisco. Amusements there were none, by day or night, except the arrival and departure of a river steamer, which appeared to afford the inhabitants their only relation.

"Some of the shops were fairly good, especially those for the sale of antique jewelry and silver where sleeve links, scarfpins and other articles fashioned in the shape of a bell were constantly offered to me. For Tobolsk is as proud of the bell as Lucerne of its lions or Berne of its bears —the Bell of Quidlich,' which for toiling the signal for an insurrection was banished here by a Czar of the sixteenth century.

"In the Dark Ages Siberian exiles were deprived of their nostrils by means of red-hot pincers, but this being obviously impossible in the case of the metal offender, its suspenders were publicly removed in the presence of the Czar and a huge concourse of people, and this unique exile has now found a resting place in the local museum.

"Tobolsk presents at all seasons of the year a drab and desolate aspect, especially in summer, when the only trace of greenery is a public garden composed of stunted birch and cedar trees dusty shrubs and scentless flowers, intersected by weedy paths ankle deep in wet wet weather. A dilapidated and deserted bandstand occupies the centre, and it is a stone obelisk with the inscription 'To Yermak,' the dauntless warrior who with a handful of Cossacks captured Western Siberia three centuries ago from a formidable Tartar force.

"The prison here is the most dismal looking structure, inside and out, which I have ever beheld, and it is well in keeping with its mournful surroundings. This, in short, is a cit yof the dead in more ways than a city of the dead in more ways than death rate of any town in Siberia, a fact partly attributable to defective drainage and partly to the extensive and stagant marshes by which it is surrounded, and which are a fruitful source of every malarial disease.

"Look down from the citadel on a summer evening, and the town below you is invariably concealed by a lake of dense, fever-laden mist which has crept in at sunset from the neighbouring swamp. Summer is a season of dull-grey skies, incessant rain and swarms of mosquitoes; winter of intense cold combined with damp, a climatic combination unknown in other parts of Siberia, which elsewhere is invariably sunlit, dry and bracing. Political exiles have told me that they would rather serve a five years' sentence in the depths of Russian Asia than reside here in comparative freedom for six months, although it is much nearer Europe."

No Trouble To Keep Skin Free From Hairs

(The Modern Beauty.)

There is no need for any woman to countenance superfluous hairs, because with a paste made by mixing some powdered delatone with water, it is easy to get rid of them. The paste is applied for two or three minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This treatment will rid the skin of hair without leaving a blemish but care should be taken to see that you get real delatone.

A RUN ON THEM.

Many years ago Lord Charles Beresford landed at New York and was asked to dinner by a deputation of prominent men, who would take no denial. He appeared at the banquet in morning dress, his hosts all being correctly attired and he began his speech by apologizing for his apparent lack of good manners. He had confided his difficulty, he said, in being at the eleventh hour without evening clothes, to the hotel manager, who told him that the solution was quite easy, and that he had only to start a trifle early and call at Messrs. So-and-So, where he could be accommodated in no time. To his dismay, however, the shopkeeper expressed his regret and inability to comply with his request.

"The fact is, sir," he said, "I have generally some twenty-five suits of evening clothes on hire, but there's a big dinner in the city to-night to Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, and they have all been leased out."

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

CHAPTER XIII.

THE SEARCHLIGHTS OF SCIENCE.

Wade Terhune had designated half past eight as the time for his scientific experiment that evening, but McCary put in an appearance a little before the hour.

He found the detective and his assistants engaged with a complicated arrangement of coils and batteries behind a screen in the corner of a great, bare room. Across the opposite wall a sheet was extended and before it, at a distance of some ten feet was a long, narrow table, like a school form.

A row of chairs was placed along one side of it facing the sheet and on the table before each chair was a thick, square pad of writing paper, and a tray of pencils. The room was dimly lighted by a huge, frosted dome high up in the centre of the building, and McCarty entered gingerly, avoiding a net work of thread like wires which ran along the floor from the table to the screen.

"Don't mind them, Mac. You won't get a shock if you step on them," called out Terhune. "Come on here behind the screen and I'll show you something."

McCarty complied, without undue eagerness, holding himself stiffly from contact with the instrument which met his gaze. Above the coil of wire on the stand was an elongated horizontal cylinder marked off into regularly spaced sections and covered with a white vellum-like substance, checked with tiny squares. Before each section of the cylinder hung a steel needle-pointed pen of the self-feeding variety, the holders of which were slender, transparent tubes, filled with red ink.

"There are ten chairs before that table out there and ten sections on his cylinder," explained Terhune. "The pens will record on the individual charts the emotions of each occupant of those chairs when a different picture is thrown on the sheet. Beween each picture the pens lift automatically for a fraction of a second to register the break. No one can escape; they may resort to every every possible subterfuge in the test, school themselves to the utmost impassivity, but their feelings, their most secret thoughts will be bared as though their hearts and brains were under a psychic microscope!"

McCarty nodded judicially.

"I see," he prevaricated. "It's amazing! It is your own invention, Mr. Terhune?"

"I have contrived several modifications," the detective admitted modestly as he emerged from behind the screen." The original is in use in the criminal investigation departments of all the larger cities in Europe. One of these chairs by the way will be vacant; Miss Beckwith has been in a state of collapse since the inquest yesterday, and is under the care of a physician."

"Miss Beckwith?" McCarty glanced up. "Are you sure of that, sir?"

"Well, I did not have subpœnas issued," Terhune temporized, smilingly. "This is purely an invitation affair. Have you made this connection, Bassett?"

"Yes, sir," the assistant replied, as he too left the screened enclosure.

"Well lay the rugs to cover the wires, and everything will be ready. It is nearly time."

"There is one thing I would like to ask you, Mr. Terhune.' McCarty drew him to one side. "Will you let me have a look at the impressions you made of those finger prints on Mrs. Doremus's glass cabinet?"

"Indeed I will, Mac, but not now. You will see them before I leave, I promise you."

"However did you get them, sir? You couldn't trace them."

"Photographed them," returned the detective briefly. "I brought them out clearly by sprinkling them with a chemically prepared powder, subjecting the glass itself to a certain degree of heat from the under side, and then blowing the loose particles away with a small bellows. The heat caused the powder, which is green, to adhere to each line of the original markings, and they showed more distinctly in the photograph even than to the eye. But my guests are coming."

The bell rang as he spoke, and Bassett ushered in a tall, bronzed man, who walked with a free, swinging stride and whose eyes were youthfully bright in spite of his gray hair.

"Good evening, Mr. Allen. You are prompt, I see. Please sit here." Terhune indicated a chair at the end of the line, and McCarty turned away to hide his surprise.

Allen! It must be Mrs. Doremus's first husband, the man whom she claimed had dined with her on the night of the tragedy. How had Terhune located him so quickly?

Further conjecture on that score was prevented by the arrival of the others who were to form this strangely assorted gathering. Mr. Charles Sturtevant entered, with the aviator, Luke Edwards, a his heels. Then came Grafton Foxe and his wife, followed shortly by Stephen Quimby.

Mr. Terhune greeted each in a brisk professional manner and indicated the seats which he desired them to occupy at the table. They had scarcely taken their places when the door opened once more and Mrs. Doremus made her appearance, accompanied by her maid, Mary.

As the former advanced to the table she paused abruptly, her eyes dark with terror fastened upon the averted face of the first comer, but Terhune ushered her reassuringly to her seat, then turned and beckoned to McCarty, motioning to the vacant chair between Mrs. Doremus and Stephen Quimby.

"I think we are ready now," he began. "I have you all here to-night to put before you a simple test, one primarily of observation. It is a variation of those used in the lower grade schools, and in certain institutions for determining the degree of intelligence and perceptive and retentive powers of the subjects under examination.

"The room will be darkened, and on the sheet before you will be thrown a disconnected series of pictures after the manner of the old lantern slides. Before each of you there are pencils and paper and I will ask you to write down what the different pictures suggest to your mind when they pass before you.

"The spaces on the paper are numbered to correspond with the order of sequence in which the pictures are presented. You will note that along the edge of the table runs a narrow pneumatic cushion for the wrist. It is bulky, but very soft and you need have no hesitation in pressing down upon it."

McCarty noticed then a band of what appeared to be inflated black rubber about four inches wide, extending on the extreme edge of the table for its entire length. He rested his hand and wrist upon it experimentally, and found that it gave readily beneath the pressure, but swelled on either side and seemed to cling to his hands as if by some process of suction. The pads of paper were clamped immovably to the table and the pencils were sharp and of very hard lead.

"Understand, I do not wish a description of the pictures themselves, but merely a word indicating what they each suggest to you. There will be no titles thrown on the sheet to guide you nor do I propose to lecture about them beyond this brief foreword. I must ask those who are still wearing gloves to remove them, that the writing may be unhampered. All ready? Lights down, Bassett!"

The glow of the dome in the ceiling dwindled to a blurred, hazy glimmer, in which the white square of the sheet seemed to stand out glaringly. No further sound of a voice broke the stillness and a long minutes passed as they sat in motionless expectancy. The gloom and suspense worked on McCarty's nerves, and he could feel his scalp tingle, while an unaccountable desire to move or shout, anything to break the tension, obsessed him.

Then, from the obscurity, came Terhune's voice.

"Steady! WRITE, please!"

A face suddenly flashed upon the sheet; the face of a young girl with a soft, wistful mouth, straight, delicate brows and thoughtful eyes.

McCarty gasped as he recognized the picture of Marion Rowntree, which had been published in the newspapers a few days before, and mechanically he wrote two words. All thought of his errand there vanished in his absorbed interest in the game itself.

He forgot the shadowy figures seated on either side of him in the darkened room, forgot that he himself was under a mysterious and ruthlessly betraying test. His breathing became audible, his eyes protruded, and with leaping pulse and mounting excitement he watched as picture succeeded picture on the screen.

After the portrait there appeared a stand containing a miscellaneous collection of objects; books, flowers, candy boxes, a Persian kitten, and a solitaire ring. Number three was a bridal party ascending the steps of a church, and with scarcely a break it was succeeded by a funeral cortege.

McCarty was oblivious to the stirring near him and his own muttered ejaculations drowned any others which might have reached his ears.

The fifth picture almost brought him to his feet. It was that of a young woman, with streaming hair and distorted face, struggling in the grasp of two nurses; obviously a maniac. What could it have meant? What connection with——"

It vanished before his thought could complete itself, and its place was taken by a scroll with pendent seals, labelled "Last Will and Testament." This time he was subconsciously aware of a movement beside him but he gave it no heed.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Pains In The Small Of The Back

Headaches, Dryness of the Skin and Loss of Weight Warn You That the Kidneys Are Diseased

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 8.—"Pains in the small of the back" is the way hosts of people describe their sufferings, no knowing that the pains are in reality the kidneys. Pains in the back, weak back, lame back, backache—these are the first indications of kidney touble. They are the warning which nature gives you. If you heed at once you can be cured. Neglect will soon put you at the mercy of the most painful and fatal of diseases.

Women as well as men have kidney disease, and may well feel anxious when the kidney pains make themselves felt in the small of the back.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills give you prompt relief from backache, it is well worth your while to take them. But they do more than this. They regulate and invigorate the action of the kidneys and ensure a return to health of these important organs.

Mr James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I had been troubled with lame back for nine or ten years, and although I had tried other remedies, they were of no benefit to me whatever. Through reading the advertisements in your booklets for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I commenced taking these, and found that they were the best I ever used. I took about a dozen boxes in all, and am now completely cured. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

("This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, and believe his statement with regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct.—John Dunn, J.P.")

"This show was written for the tired business man," remarked the manager. "The production cost a fortune." "That's the one thing," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "that bothered me. I'm a tired business man myself, and I got so busy figuring how you are going to pay interest on your investment that I couldn't keep my mind on the performance."—Washington Star.

THE "EROICA" SYMPHONY.

A Musical Portrait of Napoleon as Beethoven Idealized Him.

The most notable example of a masterwork with a political origin is Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony. General Bernadotte during his residence in Vienna in 1798 as ambassador from the French nation suggested to Beethoven the composition of a symphony in honor of Napoleon. At that time Napoleon was looked upon as the champion of freedom, the savior of his country, the embodiment of republican ideals, with which Beethoven was in thorough sympathy, and he willingly accepted the proposal.

Before the symphony was published Napoleon became emperor, and when the news reached Vienna Beethoven was violently angered. "After all, then, he is nothing but an ordinary mortal! He will trample all the rights of men under foot to indulge his ambition and become a greater tyrant than any one!"

With these words he seized the music, tore the title page in half and threw it on the ground. He never again referred to the connection between his work and Napoleon until news of the latter's death reached him. Then he said, "I have already composed the proper music for that catastrophe," meaning, of course, the funeral march. But the whole symphony, with its essentially revolutionary character, is a musical portrait of Napoleon as Beethoven idealized him.

Why 1881 Was Chosen.

In 1881 a so called prophecy of Mother Shipton's was in every one's mouth:

The world then to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

A traveling tailor denied inspiration to this prognostic, nor, as now appears, was it remarkable for accuracy. But he went further. He demonstrated in the dust of the road why that exact date was chosen. Not only was it cabalistic, a multiple of nine, etc., but it was the only date available to Mother Shipton which in Arabic numerals was the same backward, forward and upside down. Eleven hundred and eleven was past, and not till 1881 would the coincidence recur. The next Mother Shipton will select 8008, which is not tomorrow or next day.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

Weather and the Spider's Web.

One of the simplest of nature's barometers is a spider's web. When there is a prospect of wind or rain the spider shortens the filaments by which its web is sustained and leaves it in this state as long as the weather is variable. If it elongates its threads it is a sign of fine, calm weather, the duration of which may be judged by the length to which the threads are let out. If the spider remains inactive it is a sign of rain; if it keeps at work during rain the downpour will not last long and will be followed by fine weather. Observation has taught that the spider makes changes in its web every twenty-four hours and that if such changes are made in the evening just before sunset the night will be clear and beautiful.

Use Some Kerosene.

If your sewing machine runs stiffly saturate the parts with kerosene and leave it on over night. In the morning wipe dry, then oil with a high grade machine oil, and the machine will run like a breeze.

Put some kerosene in your starch and see what an easy ironing day you will have. If your irons are rough wet a cloth with kerosene and while the irons are very hot rub them on the cloth vigorously.

Tides Him Over.

"According to this expert, an aeroplane is built like a watch."

"From my point of view," said the impecunious citizen, "a watch has one great advantage an aeroplane lacks."

"What is that?"

"It's easier to pawn."

Sandpapering the Stove.

Before applying the polish if a bit of sandpaper is rubbed on the stove any little accumulations of grime will be removed, and a smooth, even coat of polish will result.

Conflicting Precedents.

A man can't always regulate himself according to history. There was Samson, who lost his life because he had his hair cut, and Absalom because he didn't.

Underworld Germs.

A progressive school teacher, according to a correspondent of the American Agriculturist, asked her pupils to use individual drinking cups. Some did so; but an influential trustee heard of the request and ridiculed the idea, saying that he "was from Missouri and had to be showed," that "germs were far too much overworked nowadays," and that a good tin drinking cup should be procured and chained to the pump. This was done. A new boy came to school. It was noticed that he had a small sore on his face. Soon similar sores appeared on the faces of all the children who, like him, used the common cup. The teacher and the pupils who used their own cups escaped. The trustee then admitted that he was "showed," at the expense of the children who had contracted a disagreeable contagious disease, and there is now no tin cup chained to the pump in that district.

Dearth of School Books.

The Vossische Zeitung learns that publishers of school books in Germany have petitioned the ministry to place their businesses on an equal footing with those considered necessary to the conduct of the war. Publishers of school books may apparently use up their stocks of paper for printing, but may employ no new paper. It is already very difficult to obtain books for pupils moving into new classes. It often takes from four to eight weeks before a whole class is satisfactorily supplied. The state of affairs will be unthinkable if suddenly at the beginning of a half-year no more school books are to be had.

Pooling Their Resources.

It is announced that, by the requirement of the Government, the principal petroleum companies have arranged to pool their distributing facilities in this country, and also the tonnage employed in bringing supplies to the United Kingdom, with the object of releasing men for the army and effecting economy in various directions.

"You're looking miserable, Subbubs. Why don't you ask a doctor what ails you?" "I know what ails me—quick consumption." "You don't mean it?" "I do. I have to bolt my breakfast in two gulps to catch the train, and my lunch in two more to get back to the office."—Boston Transcript.

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NOT A TOTEM POLE

THIS figure is neither a totem-pole nor a snow figure. It is the body of a great mountain goat shaggy in his hard-weather clothing. On the higher slopes of the mountain, the lower approach of which is seen in the background, this goat ranged and rustled in the fall of 1916. On his right, as he peered down over the cliffs, he often spied the ribbon of trail which passed through the Vermilion Pass, on its way to link the Columbia Valley with the Canadian national park at Banff, Alberta.

But one day when the blinding blizzard of these peaks whirled and roared around the immovable cliffs of the goat's range he drifted down into the edge of the spruce forest. It was more pleasant there. A gun cracked, and he knew no more. Down through the timber the ski-wearing hunter skidded his catch by the horns, the passage drawing the limbs back as shown in the picture, and the weather freezing it rigid. At the camp, in a desire to get a proper perspective of the biggest goat of the season the hunter stood the body in the snow, close beside the trail, and there it remained until more meat was wanted. For weeks its frozen eyes stared fixedly at the peaks where once it roamed, and where even then its mates were browsing and rustling, doubtless having already forgotten him. For in the hunting country it is always the survival of the fittest, and no one worries about the other.

Is Bismarck's Book in London?

CAN it be possible that Great Britain has in her hands a weapon more powerful than sword, rifle, grenade, or cannon which she refuses to use against the enemy who would chain all mankind as slaves to the Kaiser's military machine? There is reason to believe that this question can be truthfully answered in the affirmative, and the fact reopens certain very interesting pages of history bearing on the present war.

The weapon in question consists of the manuscript of the third volume of the memoirs of Bismarck, the iron chancellor, to whom, more than to any other man who ever lived, is due the unification of Germany and the growth of her power until she thought it strong enough to master the whole world. Everyone knows that after Bismarck had for life devoted his great talents to the services of Germany and the Kaiser's family, the latter turned him out of office in his old age, with every circumstance of ignominy, and even made threats of shameful punishment in case the ex-chancellor should publish facts in his possession that would set his case in the true light before the world.

Bismarck was a master of the pen, had a store of wit and humor, was familiar with several languages, possessed a marvelous memory, and had an unsurpassed knowledge of public affairs in the world during that important era in which he was the most masterful statesman in Europe. His published memoirs, the record of his sayings and action during the Franco-German war by Busch, to say nothing of what general history tells of his achievements, suggest what an act of lunacy it was for the Kaiser to provoke the enmity of such a man. His dismissal by the Kaiser exasperated the veteran statesman to the utmost, and he determined to take vengeance by completing his autobiography in which his relations with Kaiser Wilhelm II. are fully set forth. The book was written, but never published, yet enough is known of its contents to awaken the keenest desire all over the world to read its every page.

It is said to detail the treatment of his parents by the Kaiser with a frankness that shows the son in a most odious light. But more important than this unfilial conduct toward both his parents are the revelation of his intrigues against Austria and the house of Hapsburg, which are said to be of such a character that if they were made public the Kaiser would never dare to visit Vienna again. It was Bismarck's intention to publish the volume in his lifetime. But knowledge of its contents reached the Kaiser, and he threatened the author with such dire penalties in case of its publication during his life that Bismarck, fearing its seizure by the emperor, secretly sent the manuscript to London, and it is now in the Bank of England.

When Bismarck died the Kaiser warned his sons, Herbert and William, not to publish the book, and they were prudent enough to obey the order. He also tried to get possession of the manuscript, but failed in the attempt, and there is little doubt that the work will some day come to light, a consummation, it may be said, devoutly to be wished by everyone interested in the affairs of this moving world.

The bearing of the case on the present war consists in the fact that as the Kaiser is the head and front of the German offensive against the rest of mankind, and as the Bismarck book would beyond doubt do him irreparable damage all over the world, including his own country and Austria, there are many who urge that the English Government should seize the manuscript as enemy property and publish it as a war measure. The only reason why it has not been seized and published is said to be that such action would injure the reputation for security now enjoyed by the Bank of England. When one reflects on how little concern an agreement on a 'scrap of paper,' given under the most solemn circumstances, has for the Kaiser and his hordes, it tries one's patience to have our British ally balancing the reputation of a bank against the cause of the world's democracy. The Kaiser would sacrifice an army corps if he could thereby get the Bismarck manuscript. Perhaps the persistent attacks on London by zeppelins and airplanes are aimed at the Bank of England, in hope of destroying the hated copy of the Iron Chancellor. Why take any risk with an enemy in whom no faith can be placed? The world has a right to know all that can be known about the greatest enemy the human race has produced in recent years.

Publish Bismarck's book and discuss the propriety of the act at The Hague.

Portugal's Contribution.

Captain Ferriero Simas, C.M.G., Portuguese militafy attache in London, who has just returned from a visit to the British front, spoke in an interview with Reuter's representative of Portugal's great effort in the war.

"Portugal," he said, "now has nearly 80,000 men in France, comprising two corps of heavy artillery. Besides, since the war we have mobilized more than 40,000 men for service at home and in our colonies, especially in East Africa. A great part of our mercantile fleet is being employed in the transport of men and munitions to East Africa."

A sudden change of temperature contracting the metal may sometimes cause the mainspring of a watch to break.

Net guimpes will wear longer if they are washed without ironing. Shape them carefully while damp.

In cold winter weather salted snow will serve instead of ice in the ice-cream freezer.

PRISONERS IN HOLLAND.

Many Britishers and Germans at the Hague.

Seven to eight thousand British prisoners-of-war from Germany shortly are to take up their quarters at The Hague and in the neighborhood, constituting a fresh strain on the sorely-tried housing accommodation of the city and its environs. A like number of German prisoners from Great Britain are to be quartered in other parts of the country, and preparations are afoot to provide for them.

Both Great Britain and Germany have sent over representatives to cooperate with the Netherlands authorities in the matter. Special hospital accommodations are being provided for the numerous invalids, as only a limited number of cases can be placed in existing civil and military hospitals. The British and Netherlands Red Cross societies are joining efforts in this task.

A site has been offered by the city council of the Hague, in the neighborhood of the British quarters, for the erection of workshops, Young Men's Christian Association huts and the provision of football and cricket grounds. Following the example set in Switzerland, special care is to be devoted to training men for useful vocations. With a view to avoiding competition with native labor, in accordance with rules laid down by the authorities, the employment provided probably will take the form of constructing movable houses or cabins for use in Belgium after the war, and making furniture for the same purpose, work that is already occupying many Belgian interned soldiers and refugees.

To accustom the German prisoners to regular employment and give them a certain amount of confidence in the future, workshops are to be erected in the Wolfhazen camp. Raw materials are to be brought from Germany, where the finished work will be in due course exported in order to avoid competition with Netherlands workmen. According to present plans, some of the men will be put to work on the land, while students will be given facilities to continue their studies at Netherlands universities.

Where Spiders Work Hard.

In a large English factory that produces surveying instruments, spiders are numbered amongst the most indispensable workmen. They spin the delicate thread used for the cross-hairs that mark the exact centre of the object lens in the surveyor's telescope. Spider web is the only suitable material yet discovered for these cross-hairs. Human hair is transparent, and when magnified has the apparent dimensions of a rough-hewn lamp-post.

The spiders produce during a two-months' spinning season thousands of yards of web, which is wound upon metal frames and stored away until needed. A spider "at work" dangles in the air by its invisible thread, the upper end of which is attached to a metal wire frame whirled in the hands of a girl. The girl first places the spider on her hand until the protruding end of the thread has become attached. When the spider attempts to leap to the ground she quickly attaches the thread to the centre of the whirling frame, and as the spider pays out its web she wraps it round the frame. At one time she removes from a spider several hundred feet of thread.

The spiders are kept in a large room under the supervision of three girls and a forewoman. When the little workmen are not spinning, they live in a large wooden cage. Flies are their chief article of diet. During the winter months the spider colony usually dies, and an entirely new corps of workmen must be recruited.

The girls who have charge of the spiders are not in the least afraid of them. On the contrary, they regard them as pets.

Problem for Engine Builders.

The farm tractor engine has been described as a 90 per cent engine because it is under load the majority of its time. The motor truck engine might be spoken of as a 40 per cent one, and the motor car engine as a 15 per cent powerplant, in that it is rarely if ever working at full power, such as the airplane engine is. Because of this greater load on the airplane engine, its manufacture is much more difficult. One engineer has stated that building 100,000 airplane engines would be much more difficult than building 1,500,000 motor car engines.

Judge Was Emphatic.

In his volume of recollections Balfour Browne tells a story of Justice Martin, a bluff lawyer, who was noted for his "bulls."

One of these is still remembered as probably the best example ever uttered by a judge in his official capacity.

He was sentencing a man who had been convicted of sheep-stealing, and after treating the unfortunate prisoner to a lengthy lecture on the enormity of his offense, he wound up as follows:

"My man, if you had been tried for this eighty years ago, you would have been hung tomorrow morning.

War Making New Words.

New activities are steadily producing new words, and, coined as they are for the most part, under stress of circumstances, they make no pretense at preserving philological amenities. The latest, like so many others, comes from France. "This afternoon," writes an officer, in a letter from the front, "we motored over to the Tankodrome." As one writer very justly exclaims: "And only a year ago we had yet to learn what tanks were!"—Christian Science Monitor.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

Letter of Napoleon's Secretary to the von Kuhlmann of His Day.

The London (Eng.) Spectator, which specializes in correspondence, has recently published a very interesting document. It is a letter written by Napoleon's Secretary of State (Baron Bassano) to the von Kuhlmann of the day, whose name was Baron von Krusemark—Frederick William of Prussia's envoy. It shows anew that nothing is changed, least of all Prussian perfidy, and that there were always von Kuhlmanns. After stating that he has submitted von Krusemark's note (a declaration of war) to the Emperor, the Baron de Bassano thus admonishes von Krusemark:

"That part of the note which is most worthy of serious consideration reduces itself to this: Prussia solicited and concluded an alliance with France in 1812 because the French armies were nearer than the Russian armies to the Prussian states. Prussia declares in 1813 that she breaks her treaties because the Russian armies are nearer than the French are to the Prussian states. Posterity will judge if such conduct is loyal and worthy of a great prince and conforms to equity and sound politics. However, that may be, posterity will do justice to the consistency of your Cabinet in following its principles.

"In 1792 France, agitated from within by a revolution and attacked from without by a formidable enemy, seemed ready to succumb. Prussia made war on her. Three years afterward, at the moment when France was triumphing over the coalition, Prussia abandoned her allies. She passed to the side of the (French) Convention at the moment when fortune visited it, and the King of Prussia was the first of the sovereigns opposed to France to recognize the republic. When four years had scarcely elapsed, in 1799, France experienced the vicissitudes of war. Battles had been lost in Switzerland and Italy; the Duke of York had landed in Holland, and the republic was menaced north and south. Fortune had changed; Prussia changed also. But the English were driven from Holland. The Russians were beaten at Zurich. Victory again visited our standards in Italy—and Prussia again became the friend of France. In 1805 Austria armed. She marshalled her armies on the Danube, she invaded Bavaria; while the Russian troops passed the Niemen and advanced on the Vistula.

"The reunion of the three Great Powers and their enormous preparation seemed to forecast nothing but dangers to France. Prussia did not hesitate for an instant. She armed; she signed the Treaty of Berlin, and the shade of Frederick II. was called upon to witness the eternal hate which she vowed against France. When her minister, sent to the Emperor to draw up the treaty, arrived in Moravia, the Russians had just lost the battle of Austerlitz; they owed to the generosity of the French their ability to return to their own country. Prussia tore up as soon as possible the Treaty of Berlin, concluded six weeks previously, forswore the solemn oath of Potsdam, betrayed Russia as she had betrayed France, and entered into new engagements with us. Out of these eternal changes of policy there was born in the public opinion of Prussia a veritable anarchy. Agitation so took possession of the minds of men that the Prussian Government was unable to control it. Now Prussia speaks of her desire to reach an established peace on a solid basis. But how is it possible to reckon upon a solid and lasting peace with a power that believes itself justified when it breaks its engagements according to the promptings of the moment? To-day, M. de Baron, what remains of Prussia? She has done nothing for her old ally; she will do nothing for peace. A power whose treaties are only conditional cannot be a useful intermediary; she guarantees nothing whatever."

Skeletons Give Information.

Fifteen human skeletons were unearthed in the Province of Kawachi, near Osaka. This is considered the birthplace of Japanese civilization. Of the relics of the Japanese stone age, discovered by Professor Okushi, nine of the skeletons were in perfect preservation, all bones being intact. It rarely happens according to scientific records that so many perfect skeletons are discovered in one place.

Among indications that people of that period lived on uncooked food, is the fact that upper and lower teeth are evenly worn down. Decayed teeth are not found. The bony structures of the skeletons are massive; shin bones, in most cases, are somewhat flat. Some of those skeletons stand seven feet high; even shorter ones are over six feet. Skeletons were found in a lying position, with knees drawn up. Without doubt, these people belonged to the stone age in Japan 30,000 years ago, at least.

While making the excavation, stone implements, earthenware, two copper arrowheads were found. Two white jade earrings were discovered, which may be of Chinese origin, and of a much later period. It is thought this find may establish a link between the Stone and Bronze Ages in prehistoric Japan. Archealogists hold that it surely indicates the early people of Japan had intercourse with other parts of Asia. The earthenware patterns are not necessarily Ainu; the bones cannot possibly be those of Ainus. This discovery revolutionizes ancheological theories of prehistoric Japan.—Exchange.

Chinese Confectionery.

It is acknowledged that the Chinese are very skilful in making confectionery and possess the reputation of having many secrets. They are able to empty an orange of its pulp entirely, then fill it up with fruit jelly without one being able to find the smallest cut in the rind or even a tiny hole.

It is better to clean meat by wiping it off with a wet cloth than to let water run over it.

FLIGHT OF THE MOSQUITO.

The Malaria Laden Pest Rarely Travels More Than a Mile.

There is a good deal in modern prophylaxis in taking care of the mosquito, but it is always a feature in the case to know how much territory must be covered to assure a reasonable degree of safety. If mosquitoes were like birds, capable of outdistancing a railway train and for scores of miles, the problem of oiling the ditches and ponds would be a very serious one, and the question of careless neighbors would be a very wide one. The practical limit of flight of Anopheles quadrimaculatus, the insect selected for the trials, proved to be about a mile.

The method used by these investigators in their experiments was to stain mosquitoes and report on their recapture after being liberated. The species in question was selected for the work from the fact that it is the most vigorous flier of its group and is probably the principal carrier of malaria. The result of the research suggests that at the distance of a mile and a little better from a prolific breeding place the individual is quite safe, and his efforts need be directed only to the nearer pools.

The mosquito apparently required three days for the journey and in some instances returned to precisely where it was caught, for the specimens were oftentimes carried to a common point before being liberated, but were collected in places where they were quite abundant.

JOHN IS A GREAT NAME.

Known In Nearly All Lands, It Has a Famous Family Tree.

The name John is one of our best, also one of our oldest. It is found in nearly all languages, and no matter how disguised, from Juan to Johannes, it is almost certain to be identified. The Johns have a magnificent family tree.

There was an apostle named John and also a John the Baptist. There have been twenty-two popes and one anti-pope by the name of John. Three kings of Aragon and Castile, one at least of Bohemia and several of Portugal, France and England have borne the name of John.

There was John Sobieski, the "greatest of the Poles." There was John, surnamed Lackland, who was forced to sign the Magna Charta. There was John the Good. Running down the famous list, we find also John the Fortunate, John the Perfect, John the Fearless, John the Constant.

Then there was Jack of the Bean Stalk, also Little John, who was not little, but who, on the contrary, was tall and strong, and who was one of the most impudent followers of Robin Hood.

If old King John gave England the Magna Charta John Hancock helped to give us our Declaration of Independence. If the historical and symbolical Johns seem too numerous we might add John Rockefeller and John Doe.

Plans Historical Park.

Pennsylvania plans a park to commemorate the site at Taylorsville where Washington and his Continentals embarked on their trip across the Delaware to capture the Hessians at Trenton, writes a correspondent, and Governor Brumbaugh recently signed a bill appropriating $25,000 for the purchase of the land at the place of embarkation.

The Pennsylvania Historical society and the Daughters of the Revolution of Pennsylvania four years ago each pledged a sum equal to that the state might give for such a park, and the payment of these pledges will give a fund of $75,000 for the establishment of the park. Actual construction, however, will not begin until after the war.

The place on the other side of the river, where the Continentals landed was utilized several years ago by the state of New Jersey for a park similar to the one planned by Pennsylvania.

Judge Goes Solomon One Better.

In Asheville, N. C., a judge decided that a hostler charged with drunkenness was not to blame, because he had been sold horse liniment by a druggist, who knew what he really wanted it for, so he fined the druggist—but, on second thought, he also held the hostler for cruelty to animals in depriving horses of medicine.

Ladies! Keep It on The Dresser
Few drops on corn or callus stops pain, then they lift off.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Never limp or twist your face in pain again, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corns or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle, without the slightest irritation of the surrounding skin. Just a touch of freezone on a sore corn gives instant relief.

Ant Strength.

An English scientist weighed a small ant and a dead grasshopper which it was dragging to its nest. The weight of the grasshopper was found to be sixty times greater than that of the ant. The force exerted by the ant in dragging the grasshopper along the road was therefore proportionately equal to that of a man weighing 150 pounds pulling a load of four and one-half tons or a horse of 1,200 pounds a load of thirty-six tons.

GERMAN MILITARISM STILL SUPREME IN CENTRAL POWERS

Last Vestige of Resistance Has Been Crushed Out of the German People, Cowed by Threat of the Firing Squad and Fearful For the Fate of Their Women and Children ---Leaders of the Strike Are Sentenced---Successful Raids By the British Reported by Field Marshal Haig

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 5.—(By Ed. L. Keen)—German militarism is still supreme in the Central Powers. Its hard iron heel to-day had crushed out practically the last vestage of resistance by the starving, enslaved German people. Cowed by the threat of the firing squad and fearful for the fate of their women and children, through reduction of their already meagre rations the protesting workers had practically all returned to the factories. Only one isolated case of continued resistance was reported. That was at Jana, where the Tageblatt said a third of the men employed there had walked out Saturday.

There is a disposition among officials and students of economics here to regard the waning of a genral strike as only a temporary surease of the Central Powers' industrial and political problems. The work of extraordinary courtmartial at Berlin in imposing severe penalties on strike leaders is expected to provide fuel for further trouble. Wilhelm Dittmann, a Socialist member of the Reichstag, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for "inciting to high treason," and was given an additional two months for resisting public authority. Imperial Chancellor Hertling previously had refused to intervene in Dittmann's case, declaring he could invoke no civil procedure so long as the military was supreme in the Capital. Reinrich Schultz, another popular leader, is under six months' sentence for distributing strike literature.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 5.—"We carried out successful raids last night, south of Fleubrai, (southwest of Armentieres), and in the neighbourhood of Ypres-Bisden Railway," says to-day's official report. "Many Germans were killed and prisoners and machine guns were captured by us."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Ten months of war have cost the United States about $7,100,000,000; at the rate of $710,000,000 a month, or nearly $24,000,000 a day.

More than half of this huge sum or $4,121,000,000, has been paid as loans to the Allies, and the balance, about $3,00,000,000, represents America's outlay for its own war purposes exclusive of more than $600,000,000 for ordinary Governmental expenses.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

GENEVA, Feb. 5.—German strikers threw a bomb against the Imperial Palace in Berlin, according to despatches received from that city to-day by the journal De Geneve. No details were given.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ZURICH, Feb. 5—The war has cost Germany alone 1,300,000 in dead, and as many more have been wholly or partly incapacitated, Socialist Member Zgiz declared in the Bavarian Diet, according to dispatches received here to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The British Foreign Office, through Holland, has protested to Germany against the sentence of imprisonment of two British aviators for dropping propaganda literature over the German Empire. After careful investigation the Foreign Office has been unable to discover any breach of international law on the part of aviators, the Daily Mail said. Germany, the Foreign Office said, has done similar propaganda work on an extensive scale and unless the aviators are released reprisals will be taken.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Enemy submraines and air raiders have killed 14,120 British non-combatants, men, women and children, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law declared in the House of Commons to-day.

MOST GERMANS CAN ATTAIN IS PRODUCE SALIENT IN LINE

WITH THE ARMIES IN THE FIELD, (By Henry Wood)—The most which Germany can possibly attain by a big offensive on the Western Front this spring is merely to produce in the lines a salient, more or less deep and more or less extended which, in the end the French military authorities based on three and a half years of present-day warfare on the French front. The premises on which their opinion is founded are very simple. In the three years and a half that Germany has launched gigantic assaults against the French front. She has never yet succeeded in piercing the lines in the real military sense of the word, namely, to such an extent as to enable her armies to pass through and encircle the broken ends. What has taken place with the German assaults is that the front line at a given point, has been pierced or broken into a sufficient extent to force the opposite army to fall back over a limited front, upon its second or third line of trenches or even back upon its second or third line of positions. In each case like this a salient is produced in the line and nothing more.

What is worse, once this salient is produced it becomes very easy for the opposing army by attacking simultaneously the two sides it presents to them ,to reduce it and straighten out the line to what it was before. This, competent French military authorities declare is all that can possibly result from the great Spring offensives which the Germans declare they are now prepating.

Three years and a half of warfare have demonstrated that the Western Front cannot be pierced. In addition, there never was a time when the French front was more strongly fortified and defended than now. Still more, there never was a time when the French Front presented less vulnerable points of attack than now. This is for the very simple reason that all salients which formerly existed on the Western Front have now been reduced with the exception of one at St. Mihiel, south of Verdun.

Like all salients this could easily be reduced by the French if they considered it worth while to do so. If anything were to be gained by the effort. For this reason the many rumours which Germany is now circulating rel[illegible] to the big western offensive she is preparing are causing nothing but calm confidence and attentive expectancy on the part of the Allied armies.

MAJOR BISHOP WILL BE INVITED TO COME HERE

Peterborough may have an opportunity in the near future of seeing and hearing Major Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Canada's famous airman. At last night's meeting of the Great War Veterans, the secretary was instructed to write to Major Bishop to invite him to come to Peterborough and give a lecture under the auspices of the Veterans. Vice-President W. Perks suggested that this be done, and the members were unanimous in endorsing the proposal.

VETERANS WANT ACTION IN REGARD TO ALIEN RESIDENTS

Local Branch Think That All Enemy Aliens Should Be Interned and Friendly Aliens Should Either Join the C.E.F. or Be Deported to Their Native Land

RESOLUTION PASSED

Moved by Comrade R. H. Muir, seconded by Comrade H. Yates:

That owing to the fact that a great number of men returned to this city from active service and discharged are unable to find employment on their return to civic life because of a large amount of alien labour employed in various industries in this city, that we consider that all enemy aliens should be interned or put to work under the Government, and that all friendly aliens should be given two choices—that of returning to their native land or of enlisting in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces; and that we strongly recommend to the Government the necessity of legislation dealing with aliens similar to that now proposed in the United States; and that a copy of his resolution be sent to Sir Robert L. Borden.

The above resolution was carried unanimously and with but little discussion at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association last night in the Recreation Room of the Armouries.

President H. J. Staunton was in the chair.

Other branches of the Great War Veterans throughout the Dominion have passed similar resolutions.

A resolution of thanks to Mr. G. N. Gordon for his kindness in giving his services free of charge as legal adviser to the Association and for his many friendly acts on behalf of the Veterans was passed unanimously.

Considerable discussion took place over the question of revising and bringing up to date the constitution and rules of the local branch of the Association, and a committee composed of President Staunton, Secretary S. Whatley, Treasurer Geo. Coleman, and Comrades R. H. Muir and Fred Long was appointed to take this work in hand.

Delegates to represent the Peterborough branch at the annual Provincial Convention, which is to be held on May 22, 23, and 24, were appointed by last night's meeting. The Peterborough branch is entitled to send three delegates, and President Staunton, Secretary Whatley, and Comrade Muir were selected. Comrade J. H. Burnham, M.P., was also nominated, but was low man in the balloting.

Seven new members were admitted to the Association at the meeting.

ORDER IS DRASTIC ONE

Practically All Industries and Business Places Must Close Down on Saturday, Sunday and Monday

THE NEW REGULATIONS

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—On the recommendation of C. A. Magrath, Canadian Fuel Controller, the Cabinet to-night passed an Order-in-Council suspending the operation of manufacturing plants for three days, February 9, 10 and 11. The only exceptions are plants which must be continuously operated seven days of the week to avoid serious injury to the manufactured products, plants manufacturing perishable foods or foods necessary for immediate consumption, and plants devoted to the publication of daily newspapers. The order applies to all business and professional offices, warehouses, wholesale and retail stores. For the purpose of selling food only, stores may retain necessary heat until 12 o'clock (noon) February 9 and 11. The regulations do not apply to the heating of restaurants, hotels or places where meals are regularly served.

Apply to Central Canada.

The regulations do not apply to Western Canada nor to the Maritime Provinces. The Order, as passed, will apply to all of Ontario and Quebec from Fort William on the west to Riviere du Loup on the east. It is understood that it was the intention to pass this Order last week, but it was held up owing to doubt as to further action in the United States and the possibility of a discontinuance of their Order. Mr. Magrath, who is in Washington, is in close consultation with the American authorities, and is co-operating with them in every possible manner to meet the present situation. This recommendation was decided upon by him as best for the present, although further orders by him along the same lines may be issued later if necessary.

Goes Farther Than American Order.

The Canadian Order will go farther than the American, in that all munition plants must close down for the three days. The Canadian Order also goes farther than the American, in that during the months of February and March all golf, country, yacht, canoe or hunt clubs must be closed except on Wednesdays and Saturdays. On other days of the week the coal consumption is to be restricted to the quantity necessary to prevent damage through freezing.

Places of Amusement.

For the present, heatless Mondays only are ordered for theatres, moving picture houses, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, private and public dance halls, and any other places of amusement. They must remain closed every Monday, beginning February 18, and extending to March 25. Exception is made where entertainments or special functions had been advertised before February 1.

The fuel regulations announced to-night are as follows:

(1) These regulations shall apply to all of that portion of the Dominion of Canada lying east of and including Fort William, and lying west of Riviere du Loup in the Province of Quebec.

(2) These regulations shall not affect railways, public utilities, telephone and telegraph plants and premises, domestic consumers, hospitals, churches, charitable institutions, military and naval barracks or posts, premises and plants of coal dealers, Consular and other officials of foreign Governments, mines and plants directly engaged in the manufacture of war supplies which may have received special permit from the Fuel Controller.

(3) On the following days, namely, February 9, 10 and 11, 1913, no manufacturer or manufacturing plant shall, except to such an extent as is essential to prevent injury to property from freezing, burn coal or use power derived from coal for any purposes, with the following exceptions:

The Exceptions.

(a) Plants which necessarily must be continuously operated seven days a week to avoid serious injury to the product in process of manufacture.

(b) Plants manufacturing perishable foods or foods necessary for immediate consumption.

(c) Plants devoted to the printing and publication of daily newspapers.

CONDITIONS IN GERMANY CAUSED ALLIES' ATTITUDE

Inter-Allied Council at Vensailles Influenced by Knowledge That the Food Situation in Central Empires is Increasingly Serious

PARCELS CUT OFF

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Feeb. 5. —Secret knowledge in possession of the British government regarding conditions in Germany, may have influenced the uncompromising attitude adopted by the Inter-Allied Council at Versailles. Food conditions in the Central Empires are known to be increasingly serious. The Russian "storehouse," upon which the Central Empires were counting to relieve their own hunger, is still locked—because Leon Trotsky the Russian Foreign Minister, outmaneouvred both Central Empires and Ukranians.

Germany's plight is indicated by a recent order forbidding relatives to send parcels of food to officers held prisoners in England and France, and directing that money be sent instead. This has resulted in cutting off export of thousands of parcels from Germany weekly. The Exchange Telegraph declares that mail from relatives to prisoners here takes 500,000 letters a fortnight. Incoming letters is said to reveal a state of affairs in Germany infinitely worse than heretofore reported. Diseases, due to under nourishment, are increasing, it was reported, and discontent is evidenced among all classes.

COLD PLAYS HAVOC WITH TRAINS AND WIRES

Canadian Press.

TORONTO, Feb. 5. — Unusually cold weather prevailing in Central and Western Ontario, last night, played havoc with telegraphic and railroad systems all over these territories. Communication was interrupted in all directions when the wires snapped and trains in such well organized sections as the forty-mile Toronto-Hamilton line, were many hours late, or were cancelled. Advices from all parts of Ontario indicate that the Canadian Fuel Controller's orders for heatless days in factories and industries, have been well received at most points, although it had been hoped that Ontario's exceptionally good electrical advantage would have obviated the necessity of their application here.

Temperatures varying from sixty below zero in Northern Ontario, to zero in Halifax, with an average of eighteen below in lower Ontario, were the ranges of climate in this, which is probably the most generally coldest day of the season all over Canada.

NORMAL SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETY

The regular meeting of the Normal School Literary Society was held on Monday, 4th February.

The last instalment of "The Mock Trial" was presented, and brought to a successful end. It is intended to begin, at next meeting, a series of inter-form debates.

THE WEATHER

Some cold facts in a netshell:

Temperature this morning from 6 to 9, 29 degrees below zero. No lower during the night.

At the noon hour to-day 16 below.

Highest yesterday, 12 degrees below.

This is the coldest day since January 13, 1914, when we had it 32 below.—W.P.

Coal Supply In The Schools Getting Near The Zero Mark

Local Manufacturers Volunteer to Help the School Board Meet Threatened Emergency--"Why the Consumer Pays As Much For Coal When He Calls For It As When the Coal Dealer Delivers It--A Central Distributing System is Needed.

EXPLANATION FROM MR. HICKS

Mr. A. A. Fowler and Mr. J. W. Worth, representing the Board of Education, appeared at last night's meeting of the City Council with an explanation concerning the coal supply in the Public schools of the city. Six schools and the Collegiate Institute come within the jurisdiction of the School Board. Soft coal can be used in six of the schools and hard coal in the seventh. Last summer the Board secured what at that time was thought to be sufficient coal for the present winter, but owing to the severe weather the situation in three of the schools stands as follows:

King Edward school—Fifteen days' supply.

Queen Mary school—Ten days' supply.

South Central school —Five days' supply.

Mr. Fowler informed the Council that the Bonner-Worth Company had agreed to supply twenty-five tons of coal, and a similar quantity has been secured from the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, making a total of fifty tons. This will enable the Board to keep the schools open for six weeks longer. Mr. Fowler said there was no necessity for closing the schools at the present time, as the children were warmer in the schools.

Ald. Dobbin was of the opinion that the fifty tons of coal secured from the two local factories should be conserved for the use of the citizens instead of being diverted to the schools. "We may have to close the schools," ventured Ald. Dobbin with a shake of his head.

"There are other buildings which should be closed down before the schools," countered Mr. Fowler. It would not be fair to the ratepayers to close down the schools," he added.

A POINTED QUESTION.

"Why are the coal dealers charging the same price for coal when the consumer delivers his own coal as when the coal dealer delivers it?"

This pointed inquiry was submitted by Mayor Duncan, and addressed to Mr. R. Hicks, of the Robert Hicks Company, who was present for the express purpose of answering such questions.

"It is no saving to us to have the consumer deliver his own coal," said Mr. Hicks in reply. We have the same equipment and men and our output is very much reduced when the yard is filled with people who are endeavouring to deliver their own coal. We have to keep two men in the yard looking after them. That is the whole reason. In one hour on Saturday last seventy-eight people were served with not more or less than two hundred pounds of coal and the total output amounted to between seven or eight tons in the one hour, or a daily output of about seventy tons of coal. In the ordinary way with our men and equipment we could put out between one hundred and one hundred and twenty tons of coal a day."

Mayor Duncan informed the Council that he had communicated with Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald on the same subject and the explanation was similar to that given by Mr. Hicks.

Mr. Hicks was of the opinion that the School Board was handling the coal situation in a very efficient manner. "We have not reached the acute stage yet,)' said Mr. Hicks. The one weak spot is the distribution. It cannot be done by the dealers themselves and be done equitably.

THE REMEDY.

As a remedy Mr. Hicks proposed the establishment of a central distribution system where every dealer would have to report all sales. "The salvation of the situation next year," said Mr. Hicks, "will be the persons who put their coal in early."

One year ago the estimated consumption of coal in Peterborough was thirty-two thousand, four hundred tons. This year, owing to the shortage of wood and the extreme cold weather, the estimated consumption will be forty-five thousand tons.

Ald. A. McIntyre was of the opinion that the Mayor should authorize the investigation of all local cases of alleged hoarding of coal.

Mayor Duncan said he had no authority unless it could be provided by the Fuel Conrtoller.

"That is all red tape," countered Ald. McIntyre.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Taylor, Mayor Duncan was instructed to ask the Fuel Controller for the necessary authority to investigate such cases.

Mr. Hicks said the coal dealers were restricted to a profit of fifty cents a ton over all costs. All coal dealers are licensed.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Taylor, the Council decided to appoint Mr. F. W. Miller to take over the work of distributing coal that, up to the present, has been performed by the Police Department.

CITY COUNCIL WILL COMPLY WITH REQUEST

The Government Will be Asked to Amend the Assessment Act

The assessor received a letter from the Assessment Commissioner of Toronto saying that that city intended to ask the Government to amend the Assessment Act to provide that the income of stockholders in, or owners of, manufacturing and mercantile concerns, and all sign writers and painters should be assessed in the same way as the income of professional men, and that non-resident contractors be assessed so as to increase on the higher incomes, and that persons assessed for income whose taxes would be less than the amount of the Statute Labour Tax shall pay at least the amount equal to the Statute Labour Tax, and asking that this city support these applications.

The Council at last night's meeting decided to comply with the request.

Will Make No Difference In Coal Handling

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—Officials of the operating department of the Grand Trunk stated this forenoon that the Fuel Controller's order would make no difference in the handling of coal for this part of Ontario, as the company's lines to the United States' obrder are completely tied up on account of the severe weather.

After the dust is wiped off a mirror a little camphor on a cloth will brighten it.

LET US KNOW THE TRUTH.

We have the new food controller, credited with a deal of determination to "make things hum" in his line. His announcement that there are to be pantry perquisitions to discover private hoarders of food and inflict condign punishment, looks like fulfilment. But, if he wants to put an end to or prevent food hoarding, why does he select doubtful ground and threaten fishing expeditions to discover petty food hoarding, when he has wholesale food hoarding okcially brought to his attention? Mr. O'Connor, cost of living commissioner, officially reports that large quantities of eggs are held in cold storage—held for advance in prices, at the risk of becoming unfit for food. If this is true then our "big stick" Food Controller has his material for making examples ready to his hand without looking for trouble with the frugal housewife.

We have a deal of trouble to know where we are at, and a little difficulty in trusting our price regulators and food controllers. The food purveyors by the cold storage avenue—or impasse—get back at Mr. O'Connor, and declare that he raised a false alarm by quoting cold storage figures a month old; and that the hoarded eggs, admitted to be in storage at the time he referred to had been put on the market previous to Mr. O'Connor's belated condemnation, founded upon hoarded eggs by millions.

While the cold storage people deny Mr. O'Connor's statements, we have learned to take the statements of the professional food hoarders with a grain of salt. The people know, or at least they believe—and it is hard to change their belief—that immense quantities of food have been locked up in cold storage, and in the process, developing hot prices. Whether or not the cold storage people have all of a sudden become public philanthropists and released their hoarded stocks, for selling purposes, we don't know. But we should know; it's a matter of easy proof. Cold storage plants are a sort of semi-public "institution" and the government could soon find out whether Commissioner O'Connor's assertions as to hoarding or the denials of the cold storage people themselves are more correct. With prevailing food scarcity the people should get the truth.

The Governor-General's household is using war bread of 50 per cent. wheat and the rest of rye, potato and other flours.

WAITING FUEL.

The continuously keen, cold weather, and the difficulty of securing coal and wood fuel, suggests greater attention to a fuel resource of almost unlimited abundance in Ontario and other provinces—peat. Investigation, not of the most thorough and convincing experimentation, have demonstrated that Ontario has not only virtually inexhaustible deposits of peat; but that its conversion into good and comparatively cheap fuel, is economically possible. It seems that steps — not steps only, but strides—should be taken to utilize our peat deposits in the public interests. A Toronto gentleman has written to Premier Hearst on the subject and has received the following in reply:

"The peat question, so far as it comes under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Government, is receiving our best care and consideration, and large areas of peat lands have been set aside already by the government for full examination and exploration. The lands will require to be drained and other work done before the actual work of producing peat fit for fuel can be advantageously proceeded with."

This is academically reassuring; but the Premier's statement has too little of the spirit of directness and decision for the times, when the thermometer is chronically below zero and coal and wood are almost unobtainable.

The government experiments at Alfred peat bogs demonstrated that there were practical processes available for the manufacture of peat fuel of excellent quality at a reasonable price. There need not be delay for drainage of peat bogs. At the extensive bogs at Kirkfield, on a railway line, and also on the line of the Trent Canal, peat was taken out by dredges, without the slow and expensive preliminary of draining; and, besides, good merchantable peat was manufactured; but the company operating was crippled for finances, and hampered by inexperienced management. Otherwise, with adequate financial support (such as a government can supply) and efficient management, the industry of producing commercial peat would have been a success.

The Brockville Recorder points out to Premier Hearst that there are a thousand acres of excellent peat bog near Brockville, on the line of three railways, "all drained, with buildings, etc," and suggests that everything is ready for the Ontario government getting "busy on the peat problem."

If Sir William Hearst intends to seriously tackle the peat producing problem, Brockville, with a large peat bog drained, and buildings ready, presents an excellent chance of getting at work at once; and Kirkfield might not be overlooked.

Ontario has no big problems to wrestle with, to prevent giving prompt and practical attention to helping supply an urgent fuel need. Private enterprise, if it had the financial wherewithal, and the will, would "get busy" and be manufacturing peat by the hundreds of tons within a month or two. If a little of the "pep," and promptitude that got the first Canadian expeditionary force into the field and overseas "in record time," were put into the peat producing business, we should soon have a supply on the market.

The cheer that should come from the fact of the days growing an hour longer every step of the calendar, is chilled by the proverb that tells us that "as the day lengthens the cold strengthens."

FRIENDS IN NEED.

The Board of Education is deeply indebted, and proportionately grateful, to two of our local factories, which have come to the rescue in this time of fuel stringency—to the De Laval Company and the Bonner-Worth Company, for supplying some of our schools with coal, in order to keep them in operation. The Bonner-Worth Company was requested to supply twenty-five tons to the Queen Mary School, and the De Laval a like amount for the King Edward and South Central Schools; and both readily acceded to the request. These plants were approached on account of their proximity to the respective schools that needed assistance in the way of coal supply.

No other factories have been approached but the School Board feels that it will be as generously dealt with by others, if the occasion arises for calling upon them for assistance.

The action of the factories indicates possession of the spirit of co-operation and helpfulness that should characterize all our relations. It is the spirit that should animate all our citizens in their mutual relations. Those in a position by reason of possession of fuel resources, or other resources, can help by sharing their surplus with the less fortunate.

In this matter of fuel we have to be neighbourly and, above all, saving. It seems to be gratuitous superfluity to counsel care and saving in the use of fuel when it seems so hard to get anything in the shape of fuel to waste; but there are public and semi-public institutions that can fairly well consider limitations of activity in the interests of fuel conservation. We can't do without continuous heat in our houses; it is absolutely essential to protecting health and prolonging life. But in regard to churches, theatres, and places of amusement, and even schools, there might be considered combinations, or expedients, that would help the coal supply. Churches, as many are doing, might combine services, forgetting for the moment and occasion differences of worship, form, etc., and only thinking of the great essential common to all denominations.

In the matter of the schools, the closing of them for a time during the winter and curtailing the holidays is suggested. There are objections to this; but there are also objections to the necessity of curtailing many things we are accustomed to in private life—like, as is done in many cases, closing most of the house except two or three rooms, and everybody huddling over the kitchen fires.

We must all make sacrifices: and practice rigid economy of coal is one of the things we must do.

Our severe winter is not over, and the coal supply that many thought enough for an ordinary winter is nearly all gone; and before long there will be new demands and the coal situation will be intensified.

We must face the situation and voluntarily make in time sacrifices that others are compelled to make, and we may have to make, later on.

The Board of Education can repay the factories for supplying coal in time of need, by providing technical schools for their benefit—when the spring comes and the war clouds shall have rolled away.

Patronage Stubbornly Persists In Spite Of The Premier's Promises

Patronage in the public service dies hard. The excellent promises and pledges made by Sir Robert Borden and members of his new Union Administration were probably made to be implemented. Assurances have recently been given that definite legislation will be presented to Parliament, and announcement is now made that under immediate order in Council the outside employees of three large departments are to be freed from patronage. Sincere supporters of the Government policy are glad to see this start being made.

In an article on the merit system, The Civilian, the organ of the Civil Service at the Capital, complains that the Government has failed to consult the Civil Service Commission, "and practically all the thousands of clerks taken on in Ottawa were employed without the approval of the Government's merit machinery, which costs some $50,000 per annum." It proceeds:

"The consequence is that loose characters have sifted into the several departments doing war work, and the daughters from clean homes rub elbows with these characters, and contamination is not unlikely in the natural course of events.

"The Government has not followed President Wilson's example of relinquishing patronage appointments, but, on the other hand, the service and the public are amazed to find that the Government is repudiating its pre-election pledge to eliminate patronage appointments." Of this most serious charge The Ottawa Citizen, which supported the Union Government in the recent electoral campaign and should know conditions at the Canadian Capital, says:

"The very definite statement made in last week's Civilian, that loose characters have sifted into the several departments doing war work in the Canadian Government service, cannot be ignored. The introduction of demoralizing influences among the civil service workers is not exactly in accord with the ideas of morality in Canadian home life. But it is apparently one of the vicious by-products of political patronage.

"Ottawa cannot afford to have the atmosphere of the civil service tainted by charges of low social morality as an outcome of patronage morality. But the Governments bad faith with regard to the abolition of patronage is in itself demoralizing."

There seems to be imperative need for a resolute grappling with the baneful plague that destroys efficiency and develops waste. It may well be that the Administration has found the task of uprooting the evil to be harder than it anticipated. For generations it has spread its tentacles in fertile and receptive soil. But the people of Canada commissioned the Union Government to big jobs made necessary by stressful conditions. They will not regard their representatives as having proven equal to their obligations and opportunities if they fail to demolish patronage, root and branch.—The Globe.

The City Will Settle For $300

The City Council at the regular meeting held last evening, decided to adopt the following recommendations of the Legal Committee:

That the City Solicitor be authorized, without prejudice, to settle the case of Shannon vs. Peterborough, in which a claim is made against the city for injury to a child's finger, by the road grader, by the payment of not more than $300, and that if it is settled under this authority a cheque be issued to the City Solicitor for the sum agreed upon.

That the City Engineer be informed that the council views with strong disapproval the carelessness shown in his department in the Shannon case, and that the council insists that all machinery must be so placed or protected that the city will not be liable to have claims for damages made upon it, and that if the city is again forced to pay damages under similar circumstances the amount will be deducted from the salary of the official whose negligence shall have caused it.

"TOO LARGE."

Ald. Langford was of the opinion that the amount was too large and also expressed the advisability of throwing a veil of secrecy over the proceedings of Legal Committee for fear the public mind might become distorted with a vision of large damage claims.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon quoted some old English law for the edification of Ald. Edgar, who was prone to question Mr. Gordon's judgment in recommending a settlement on a basis of three hundred dollars.

DISCORD IN AUSTRIAN ARMY.

Deputy Questioned War Minister About Rumoured Blunders.

Further light was turned upon the rumours of army scandals in Austria and dissensions among the military authorities of the Central Powers by a series of leading questions presented to the Austrian Minister of War by a Socialist Deputy named Glockel at a recent meeting of the Military Committee of the Reichsrat. As reported in Vienna newspapers, these questions were as follows:

"What was the cause of the complete failure of the first two offensives in Serbia? To what degree was the lack of coordination in the advance of the troops and the wagon trains responsible? How much attention was paid to patriotic holidays in deliberations on tactics?

"Why wasn't Przemysl evacuated at the right time? According to the official reports of the War Headquarters Press Bureau; 10,000 men were lost during the last sortie. Was this sortie unavoidable?

"What was the cause of the second breaking through by the Russians at Luck? Were the lines properly constructed? Was the Commander of the Fourth Army at his post?

"Is the rumour about the cutting of the dams on the Piave and the opening of the floo' gates founded on fact? Was there a big explosion of an Italian magazine which cost the lives of a large number of Austro-Hungarian soldiers? How was the booty of Friuli and Venice divided? Is it true that the German Army command demanded nearly all of the boots? What is the truth about the rumour that Udine was plundered for two days?

"What were the causes of the sudden removal of General von Tschurtschenthaler from the post of city commander in Innsbruck? Why were the following Generals removed from their posts: Archduke Friedrich, Archduke Josef Ferdinand, Brudermann, Puhallo, Auffenberg, Danki, and Schuma?"

The answers given to these questions by the Minister of War are not reported in copies of Austrian papers received here.

Five Thousand Local Employees Will Be Affected

The Wage Account as a Result of Fuel Order Will Be Approximately Thirty-five Thousand Dollars

From fifteen to twenty industries will be affected locally by the recent order of the Fuel Controller respecting three heatless days on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday next. There are about five thousand men and women employees in the city who will be temporarily thrown out of employment, and assuming that the majority of local industries close down on Saturday afternoons, the wage account for the day and a half is estimated at beween $30,000 and $35,000.

Some of the larger industries affected by the order will be the Canadian General Electric Company, the Quaker Oats Company, the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, the Bonner-Worth Company, the Auburn Woollen Mills, and many others. In some cases it will take as much coal to keep the plant from freezing up as it will to keep it in operation.

Are Not Exempted.

This morning one or two local merchants delude dthemselves into believing that they could keep their stores open because the source of their heat supply was included in the exemptions. The regulation distinctly states that the "exemption of one or more offices in any building shall not exempt other offices in such building."

One theatre and two motion picture houses will be affected as a result of the Order; also half a dozen pool-rooms.

HUNGARY'S TOILERS UNITE.

Labour Unions Growing Rapidly in Number of Members.

Although hard hit during the first two years of the war, the Hungarian trade unions began to recover their lost ground during the third war year and at present are stronger numerically than they were at the outbreak of the conflict, according to a report by S. Jaszci, Director of the Central Labour Unions of Hungary, found in recent issues of Austrian newspapers.

During the last year the Iron and Metal Workers' Union grew in membership from 20,000 to 60,000, while the Railroad Men's Union rose from 5,000 to 15,000. At the beginning of the war there were only 300 organized mine workers. Now the Miners' Union numbers 10,000. During the war the street car men have organized to the number of 6,000 and the municipal employees also have founded a union. In all, the membership of the Hungarian laobur unions is now well over the pre-war number of 100,000.

Labour organizations in Hungary have always been hampered by restrictive laws, but Director Jaszi says the war has improved their fighting spirit and that they have forced many concessions from the Government.

TROTZKY IN SPAIN IN 1916.

Madrid. — The Spanish newspapers have just discovered that Leon Trotzky, the Russian Bolshevik leader, was under arrest in Spain for a short time in 1916. He reached Spain from France in October of that year, but the police having learned that he was a "dangerous anarchist," arrested him at Vigo, took him to Madrid, and lodged him at the central prison from November 4th to 13th, pending investigation. Subsequently he was released but was requested to leave the country. He then embarked at Barcelona for the United States.

TRICKS THAT KILL

Germans Use Barbarous Schemes to Harm Enemy.

Baits Left in Evacuated Positions Prove Disastrous to Tommy, Who Would Investigate.

"The game of baiting the other fellow which the German soldiers really taught the allied troops is still in vogue on the western front at the present time," said a wounded Canadian officer who was telling some friends about the tricks which men play on one another in trench warfare.

"Don't fool with the enemies' evacuated positions, especially the dugouts, until you have experimented with wine bottles, jewelry, pictures and other trinkets at a respectable distance,' is the first order given to advance parties. When the Germans drew back to the Hindenburg line in France they plundered and carried off all kinds of loot. Now the finest place for a crowd of Tommies or pollus to capture is one of the dugouts recently inhabited by German officers.

"Perhaps Tommy spots a pile of jewelry on an innocent appearing table. Well, let Tommy rush to grab it and in a second the place is blown to atoms and all hands have gone 'blighty' for having grabbed the bait. This game of connecting fuses with gold chains, wine bottles and portraits has been costing bombing squads a large toll in losses. The coveted goods are so fixed by the Germans that when Tommy and the gang have pounced upon them they touch off the detonator of an infernal machine."

The Canadian told how 12 men who had entered a dugout in the German trenches formerly occupied by some officers had their eyes on several oil paintings. The non-commissioned officer who was with them, having witnessed the annihilation of men who had been caught by the bait in other cases, ordered the men out of the place and then fired a shot at one of the paintings. In response to the shot there followed an explosion which demolished the dugout.

The allied troops are daily being taught to keep their hands off all likely souvenirs when they occupy new positions. Even the business of searching wounded prisoners is being conducted in a gingerly manner by Tommy. The game of tricking the other fellow has been a very serious matter on the western front, according to this officer, chiefly because the German soldier does not hesitate at the most atrocious and barbarous of schemes to work harm to the enemy. On certain occasions German soldiers have feigned to be wounded and while men swept past them have been guilty of sniping.

German Out-pigs the Pig.

Having tried a substitute for almost everything, the Germans, we are told, are stopping short of nothing in their attempt to make certain new foods take the place of those made scarce by the war. The latest report says that a sausage dealer in Berlin has been fined $500 for selling sausage made of macerated rubber, finely ground hair and gelatin. His camouflage product contained no liver, no flesh, and no fats. At that, it was probably as digestible as some so-called sausage on sale in this country.—Popular Science Monthly.

Birdmen of the Empire Have Notable Record For Daring Escapades

STORIES of daring escapades of British aviators, exciting aerial combats from which the air-fighters escaped alive seemingly only by miracle and of brilliantly executed raids upon German aerodromes and troops behind the German lines are narrated in the reports of the Royal Flying Corps covering the activities of about one week. Hair-raising incidents of fierce conflicts above the clouds, or low over the German communication lines are described in these succinct reports without bombast, as though these narrow escapes from death were commonplace and all in the day's work of the air-fighter.

For example, there was the case of a British aviation officer who, when nearly a mile above the earth, was attacked by two enemy aircraft. He shot down one of them out of control, but was himself wounded and fainted while still high in the air. Recovering consciousness he found his machine upside down at an elevation of 4,000 feet, with one enemy aircraft still firing at him. The Britisher, however, managed after a struggle to right his machine and land safely.

In a somewhat similar instance, a German scout attacked a British airplane carrying a pilot and observer. One of the German's bullets passed through the gasoline tank of the British airplane and seriously wounded the pilot. The British observer, however, pumped a full double drum of bullets at the enemy scout at very close quarters and the German went to the ground with a crash.

Meanwhile the British pilot had fainted and fallen against the steering "stick" in such a fashion as to throw the airplane into a spin. The British observer climbed over the side and forward along the plane to the pilot's cockpit, lifted the pilot to his seat and, still standing on the wing of the plane released the steering gear, brought the machine out of the spin and safely to the ground.

Two British officers were returning from an expedition over the enemy's lines to locate hostile batteries when their machine was hit by anti-aircraft fire and the engine damaged. Volplaning, the machine landed 300 yards from the British lines, the airplane turned over and the aviators were hurled out on the German side of a canal. Running along the beach under heavy fire from rifles and machine-guns, the aviators dived into the canal only to find it full of barbed wire, but managed to reach the British lines in safety.

Many instances illustrating the reckless daring of the British aviators sent over the German lines to obtain information, destroy aerodromes and harry the German reserves are contained in the official narratives. One pilot who crossed the lines at Ypres, threw off two attacking machines, bombed the Heule aerodrome near Lille and was fired upon by two machine-guns. He dived at one of them, firing with both guns of the British airplane, drove the Germans from their guns, fired upon the aerodrome again, attacked and scattered a column of 200 German infantrymen on the road. A German two-seater airplane was circling 500 feet above him for an attack. "I roomed up under its tail and fired into it," writes the British aviator. "It crashed down onto the railway."

Another British pilot had fired a hundred rounds on German troops on the march when he was interrupted by two enemy airplanes. He attacked them and drove both down and then finished the job of driving the German infantry into trenches and shell holes.

Flying at the height of 200 feet a British aviator engaged in a revolver duel with two German officers in a motor, and while doing so ran into some lines of telegraph wires, but fortunately his machine cut them. A few minutes later he attacked German infantry, which escaped his gun only by diving into a pond.

The Eiffel Tower.

The Eiffel tower is just twenty-eight years old, having been erected for the Paris exposition of 1889. Although it was denounced as ugly, for the same reason as a skeleton, because it is unusual, its rigid lines are really graceful. It has outlived its popularity as a pleasure resort, although it offers a wonderful panorama of Paris, but it serves a far more important international service as perhaps the most important wireless station in Europe, for it is in direct communication with Canada, 2,500 miles off. Its mass of 8,000 tons of iron is 984 feet high, or, if its lightning protection be added, just over 1,000 feet, which is five times the height of the monument on Fish Street hill. In England William Holland's enterprise in imitation of it, the Blackpool tower, still flourishes, but Sir Edward Watkins' scheme, the Wembly tower, had the fate of the Tower of Babel, and the uncompleted fragment, which was for years a landmark on the G. C. R., has long been swept away.—London Globe.

Relic Hunters At War Front

MANY SEEN IN EVERY BATTALION OF FIGHTING LINES.

COLLECTION OFTEN A TRIAL.

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE.—In every battalion at the Front there are a number of confirmed souvenir hunters, and sometimes their influence is so potent that an epidemic craze for collecting spreads through all ranks, and the main topic of conversation is souvenirs in all their varieties.

In every walk of trench life one meets the man with strong acquisitive habits; in civilian life he might develop his bent into either finance, art, stamp-collecting, or possibly burglary. In the trenches the fully developed passion for collecting souvenirs is often a trial for the collector, for a collection of any kind sooner or later demands a place to put it in, and there is no place in knapsack and dugout life for a store of gathered treasures.

Seldom of Much Value.

The available war souvenirs are seldom of much value, but there is a considerable variety of things to choose from in most battle areas. In the early days of the war, German helmets were valued souvenirs, for th old-style German helmet was substantial and picturesque, brilliant with heavy metal garniture. There were also unusual variations, like the quaint Bavarian shakos,while one or two cavalry regiments provided a rare variety of headgear which has not been seen on the Western Front since the first year of war.

The German helmet of to-day has depreciated even more than the German mark. It is no longer even leather, but a kind of light paperfelt. The metal spike has given place to one of wood or composition. The solid brass regimental badge is now a thin tinsel plaque. The true collector cares very little for the modern helmet and has no interest at all in the little round convict cap which so many German prisoners wear. If the German only knew it, a sure passport to warm and instant favour on surrender is a decent helmet. It attracts immediate attention and the fortunate owner is given cigarettes and other marks of favour by his delighted captor, instead of being merely herded to the rear without ceremony.

Not Enough Helmets.

The supply of helmets is seldom adequate to the demand; indeed, the market is only glutted on occasions of a big push or a large scale raid.

Among lesser trophies, the ambitious collector finds great scope for his activities in the shells sent over by the hostile artillery. Fuses and nose caps in wonderful variation are to be obtained with a little pains, and the collection of these is encouraged by the general staff, because the setting of the fuse may give the correct range of a suspected battery, and there is other information of useful character to be gained from the study of these trophies.

The French soldiers have specialised in aluminium rings and jewellery made from the nosecaps of hostile shells, and quite an ambitious industry has been developed in this way. The British prefer to work in brass, usually the brass of empty cartridges and shell cases. With infinite patience and few tools they produce what the Frenchman calls "peculiar objects of the mantelpiece."

Little model coal scuttles with legs made of bullets, a tiny coal shovel worked up from a German rifle cartridge; vases of curious surface mottling made by indenting the brass of a field gun case; ambitious designs of Allied flags and well-known heroes, made from ration cases or brass—these are only a few of the things which the collector is offered by his own comrades. There is no end to the ingenuity and variety of the work of the soldier craftsman, but his most familiar work is in inkpots and candlesticks and decorative paperweights made from hand grenades or the interior of shrapnel shells.

RAT POISON CAUSED KINGSTON FIRE

KINGSTON, Feb. 4 — That some patented rat poison was the cause of a fire which gutted the home of James Harris on Sunday last is the opinion of the members of the Fire and Light committee. Two days before the fire the owner sprinkled some rat poison on some bread in one of the rooms. This was carried off by the rats to their nest, which is located near the hot water pipes. The poison contained a large percentage of phosphorus. The Fire and Light committee will ask that the sale of this brand of rat

City Council Authorize The Appointment Of Dog Catcher To Round Up Stray Dogs

Three Cases of Rabies Reported in Smith Township--Dog By-law Will Be Enforced—Routine Business Transacted at Council Meeting

By extending the time limit for three ten-minute periods the City Council at the regular meeting held last evening was able to conclude the business in time to get home before morning. During the evening two new offices were created by the Council. One is that of a dog catcher, with authority to garner in all stray dogs, and the other is that of special investigator to investigate all applications for coal, which up to the present are being received by the Police Department. The police claim to be overworked, due to a shortage of men. In connection with the appointment of a dog catcher, Mayor Duncan reported that he had been informed that three cattle in Smith Township had recently been infected with rabies. Ald. Jones said there was no use in creating by-laws unless they were enforced. He was referring to the dog by-law, which prohibits dogs running at large.

The Mayor and Chairman of the Property Committee were authorized to procure the services of a dog catcher.

Wants Claim Recognized.

Mr. R. C. Braund appeared in person before the Council in connection with the proposal to remove the daytime shunting restriction on the C.P.R. siding running into the Canadian General Electric Company's plant. Mr. Braund said he did not wish to be a hindrance to the advancement of the city or the C.G.E., but in event of the Council recommending to the Ontario and Municipal Railway Board that the restriction be removed, a rider be added, drawing the Board's attention to Mr. Braund's claim for compensation. The siding in question runs almost in front of Mr. Braund's store.

Ald. M. McIntyre was of the opinion that the Council should take no action in the matter. "Mr. Braund has a just claim," observed Ald. McIntyre. Mr. Braund said that farmers driving up to his store to do business were afraid to return, claiming that their horses were frightened by the shunting engine.

Resolution Adopted.

The following resolution was endorsed by the Council:

"We recommend that the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada be informed hat the Council of the City of Peterborough is of opinion that it would be in the interests of the city to have the restriction which prohibits the use of the Canadian Pacific Railway siding into the Canadian General Electric Works between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. removed, by granting the application of the railway company for the removal of such restriction, and that the suggestion be made to the Board that a flag signal should be given by the railways by means of a flagman, when shunting is being done on the sidings between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m."

Mr. E. G. Patterson, superintendent of the C.G.E., said that the restriction was a hindrance to the transaction of the company's business. During the month of November and December the delay occassioned by the restriction amounted to five thousand car days.

More Authority Wanted.

The City of Stratford addressed a letter to the Council, asking this municipality's support in favour of a legislative enactment vesting in the Council the right to revise the estimates of the Police Commissioners.

On motion of Ald. Langford and Ald. Dobbin, Peterborough will join with Stratford in an effort to secure this power.

BAND INSTRUMENTS.

The 57th Regiment addressed a letter to the City Council offering to purchase the instruments of the 93rd band a a purchase price of $50.

The matter was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council.

Ald. Langford suggested that the instruments be turned over to the Great War Veterans in lieu of a grant of $500.

TOWN PLANNING.

Mr. Thomas Adams, town planning expert, of Ottawa, who recently visited Peterboro, addressed a communication to the city council, pointing out the desirability of securing an accurate map showing the city and visible buildings. Mr. Adams remarked that Peterboro had an excellent site, and recommended the formation of a local town planning commission consisting of the mayor and six members.

INSURANCE AGAINST LOSS.

Hill, Weddell & Co., local insurance agents, are anxious to secure the insurance on the new piece of motor-driven fire apparatus to be placed in the fire station. Mayor Duncan said that he could not see the necessity of insuring fire apparatus owing to the fact that the firemen were on duty night and day. No mention was made of the possibility of an accident on the street, such as a collision. The communication was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The matter of again granting to the Peterborough Health Association, the sum of one thousand dollars, was left over to be dealt with by a committee of the whole council. During the past year the Association has expended over sixteen hundred dollars, including a grant of one thousand dollars receive from the city. Milk, drugs and other supplies were distributed free by the Association. Upwards of two thousand and thirty two visits were made by the nurses of the Association.

Similar disposition was made of the Great War Veterans' request for a grant of five hundred dollars to meet the cost of rent, heat and light in the new club rooms.

All requests for grants will be dealt with in a general way by this committee with the object of reducing them to the lowest possible minimum.

Mr. W. H. Pretty, in a letter to the council reported that he was in the market for any engineering work the city might have to offer.

The council decided to instruct City Solicitor Gordon to amend the city's private bill to provide for the election of ten aldermen instead of twelve.

BY-LAWS PASSED.

A by-law providing for the collection of the Provincial War Tax of one mill on the dollar was read a third time and passed.

WAS RE-ELECTED.

A by-law re-electing Mr. W. H. More to the City Trust Commission, was adopted by the council. Mr. Moore has been a member of the commission for 18 years and chairman for 15 years.

ONE MILL.

A by-law fixing the garbage collection rate at one mill on the dollar was read a third time and passed.

SALE OF ASHES.

A by-law authorizing the sale of ashes to M. M. Stevens was passed with the usual formalities at a contract price of two hundred dollars.

EXTRA HELP IS FROWNED UPON BY THE COUNCIL

The proposal to raise the Patriotic Fund grant of sixty thousand dollars by direct taxation this year was given a once over at last night's meeting of the City Council. Ald. Edgar suggested that the fund be raised by the issue of five year debentures at six per cent. The Council decided to refer the matter back to the committee of the Whole Council, together with the recommendation that City Assessor Henry be requested to employ a boy in his office instead of a girl.

"Who is going to pay for this extra help?" queried Ald. Langford.

It was pointed out that the city was prepared to assume this liability.

Ald. Langford was of the opinion that the assessor could get along very well during this year of forced economy in all departments.

The local association has invted the Dominion Executive to meet here next July.

ORDER IS A DRASTIC ONE

(4) For the period mentioned in paragraph 3, no coal shall be burned (except to such an extent as is essential to prevent injury to property from freezing) for the purpose of supplying heat for:

(a) Any business or professional offices, except offices used by the Dominion, Provincial, county or municipal Governments, public utilities companies, physicians and dentists, banks, insurance and other financial institutions (except for the purpose of accepting payment for obligations due); provided, however, that the exemption of one or more offices in any building shall not exempt other offices in such building.

(b) Warehouses, wholesale or retail stores, other than drug stores and bona fide news stands, premises where intoxicating liquor is sold or served, business houses or business buildings whatsoever; provided that for the purpose of selling food only, stores may maintain necessary heat until twelve o'clock, noon, on the 9th and 11th of February; provided also that wholesale stores and warehouses may remain open solely for receiving freight, but shall only provide such heat as will prevent perishable goods from damage.

(5) Nothing in these regulations shall be construed to forbid the heating of restaurants, hotels or other places in which meals are regularly served, but in which no intoxicating liquor is sold or served during the days specified.

Closing Country Clubs.

(6) During the months of February and March, 1918, no golf, country, yacht, canoe or hunt clubs shall remain open, except on Wednesdays and Saturdays. On other days of the week the coal consumption at such clubs shall be restricted to the quantity necessary to prevent damage through freezing.

(7) Theatres, moving picture houses, bowling alleys, billiard-rooms, private or public dance halls, and all other places of public amusement shall remain closed on each and every Monday, beginning on February 18, 1918, and extending to Monday, March 25, both days inclusive; provided, however, that entertainments or special functions which have been advertised on or before February 1, 1918, to the extent that tickets have been sold or invitations issued, either public or written, or which have been otherwise advertised through printed public notice, may be held as arranged.

(8) Any person and any member of a firm or partnership and any manager or director of any corporation violating any of these regulations shall, on summary conviction, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five thousand dollars and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

(9) Municipal authorities and officers throughout the portion of Canada affected by these regulations are requested to co-operate in the enforcement thereof, and report any infractions to the Fuel Controller.

ENGLAND MAY RESTRICT PASSENGER TRAFFIC

LONDON, Feb. 4.—As the war goes on the difficulties in connection with railroads, automobiles, and street railways are increasing rapidly and with growing effect on everyday life.

Congestion on the railways and in the mails will soon necessitate radical restrictions, it is asserted. Travel permits may become necessary, while reorganisaiton of freight transport will aim at distribution everywhere from the nearest sources of supply in order to save transportation, labour, and fuel. Food traders are being urged to combine for mutual held in the distribution, and households are asked to purchase at the nearest stores.

The street railways are being put on the same basis as the steam railroads under a new order giving the Board of Trade power to commandeer street railway rolling stock and material. Just as unnecessary railway lines were taken up and sent to France, so will dispensable street car lines be liable to removal from one part of the country to another. This proposal has aroused some opposition, as London will benefit at the expense of the provincial cities, but the idea is that lines and rolling stock shall be used where they are most useful.

Saving of gasoline is one of the chief needs, for the shortage is acute. The Government has found it necessary to convert thirty-five standard and other ships into oil-tank carriers. There will also be further reductions in both petrol and the use of horses for commercial purposes, and priority will be given to war work and food transport.

The use of gas for transport, which has recently become very popular, it is announced, will also be restricted to vehicles engaged in necessary business. Gas control throughout the country will be necessary unless the strictest economies are effected voluntarily in non-productive consumption such as for lighting. There is an enormous demand for more gas for power. In the munition factories many engines are gas-driven, and gas is also used to an increasing extent for heating furnaces. The Government has already given the Minister of Munitions new powers to enforce restrictions.

Transport used for non-essential distribution is to be prevented as far as possible. Coal, food and raw materials for munitions must all be obtained from the nearest source. Two thousand food committees and 800 local transport committees will assist in the organisation of local schemes of economising transport. Scores of towns already have their own schemes in operation. Lancaster and other cities are forming companies of traders to pool their vehicles.

Street railways will be used largely for the transportation and delivery of food. Some towns will institute street-car delivery of parcels. Milk will be delivered only twice daily instead of twice, while bakers, butchers, and other tradesmen will have only three deliveries a week instead of six.

Throughout the last year there has been an accumulation of traffic difficulties in London. The gradual elimination of private motor cars, taxicabs, and light automobile delivery waggons has thrown a burden on other means of transport which were already overtaxed, and some of the hardest problems of railway transportation are involved in the economical solution of railway congestion around London terminals.

ROY SMYTHE A CADET IN THE FLYING CORPS

Still another Peterboroughe boy has been added to the list of Royal Flying Corps Cadets. Roy Smythe, former right wing of the Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team and equally well known as a City League ball player, has enlisted with the R.F.C. and has begun training in Toronto. "Lank" had been out west for a year and joined the aviation squad in Winnipeg. He was here for Sunday, returning to Toronto yesterday.

NEW PRESIDENT FOR THE PETERBORO' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

Mr. Garbutt Resigns on Account of Ill-health and Mr. Roland Denne, Vice-President, Takes the Chair—Committees Were Appointed—New Members of the Board

The first meeting of the new board of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held last evening in Hooper's Palm Parlours, and a number of important matters were discussed and worked out. The meeting was called by the retiring President, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who gathered the old and new members of the Board together to turn the reins of office over to the new occupant of the chair. At the regular annual meeting, held two weeks ago, Mr. J. H. Garbutt, a former President, was elected as head of the Board, but a letter was read by the secretary to the effect that Mr. Garbutt wished to resign the office owing to ill health. The resignation was accepted with regret, and Mr. Garbutt was made an honorary President. This necessitated a re-arrangement of the first offices, Mr. Roland Denne, who was First Vice-President became President, and Mr. W. J. Cox, who was Second Vice-President, became First Vice-President, and Mr. Wm. Roberts was elected to fill the vacant position of Second Vice-President.

New Plans.

Mr. Denne, in accepting this office, laid out some new plans which will assist in working out more smoothly the details of the Exhibition. Several of the most important are the early getting out of the prize list, the signing of the present offered lease, and the re-arranging and construction of new entrances to the grounds.

It was again felt desirable that the Exhibition put on amusements on as many of the holidays during the coming season as could be arranged.

A resolution of condolence was passed to Mr. and Mrs. Brooks and family, regretting the recent loss of their son at the front. Mr. Brooks is a member of the Board.

Committees Appointed.

The following committees were then struck:

The first named on each to be chairman.

Light Horses—Messrs. W. J. Cox, Allan Mann, T. Cruikshanks, W. J. Stacey and C. G. Graham.

Heavy Horses—Messrs. Jas. Storey, J. O. Ball, S. Milburn, W. Roberts, Dr. Fortune and Harold Baptie.

Cattle—Messrs. C. E. Moore, T. O. Gibbs, J. Gillespie, Deyell and Webber.

Sheep and Swine— Messrs. Mann, Gillespie, Ball and R. J. Shaw.

Poultry— Messrs. McClennan, H. Baptie and Shaw.

Horticulture—Messrs. Kitney, Wise and Jordan.

Agriculture— Messrs. C. E. Moore, Steinkrauss, Clayton Telford and J. H. Garbutt.

Dairy—Messrs. G. A. Gillespie and T. H. Hooper.

Plants and Cut Flowers—Messrs. D. Jordan, F. Wise and C. F. Kitney.

Fine Arts and Ladies' Work—Miss Nina Davidson, Mrs. A. Stevenson, Miss Elliott, Mrs. E. B. Clegg, Miss Simons and R. H. Turner.

Amusements, Printing and Advertising—Messrs. R. M. Glover, R. H. Turner and C. G. Graham.

Racing Committee— Messrs. R. J. Munro and J. Brooks.

Subscriptions — Messrs. Turner, Hooper, Brown and Cox.

Concessions—Messrs. Glover, Brown and Turner.

Grounds Committee — The Whole Board, President as chairman.

Reception—Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Garbutt, Turner, His Honour Judge Huycke, J. H. Burnham, M. P., Mayor Duncan and the chairman of the Reception committee of the Council.

Get Together.

Every chairman is required to get his committee together and present a written report of any changes to be made to the prize list at the next meeting of the Board, to be held on Tuesday, February 19th, at the Council Chamber, at 8 o'clock.

One more important piece of business was the decision made that all entries must be in the secretary's hands by Wednesday evening previous to the Exhibition.

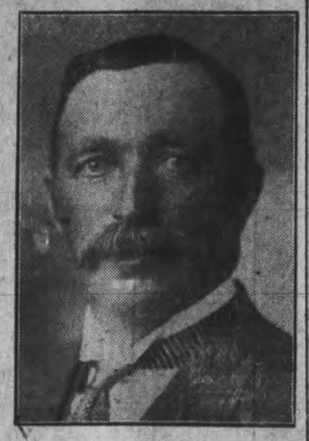
This year, Thursday, the first day of the Fair, will be utilized for the showing of all halter classes and the Grand Stand performance will be run off both afternoon and evening of the first day, as well as on Friday.

A Valedictory.

Mr. Gillespie before the meeting adjourned, took occasion to thank the members of the Board for the support given him during the past two years he was President of the Society and predicted the new President, Mr. Denne, with the assistance of the well-selected committees, would show even greater gains financially and in popularity for the Fair.

Mr. W. J. Stacey and Mr. C. G. Graham, newly elected members of the Board, were asked to give some suggestions, which they did and their recommendation will be considered at the next meeting.

MR. ROLAND DENNE, who last evening was elected President of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.



MR. J. H. GARBUTT, who retires from the Presidency of the Exhibition Board owing to ill health.

MR. HARRY STOCK PURCHASES BAKERY OF N. LUSH AND SONS

By the purchase of the plant and trade of Messrs. N. Lush & Sons, Mr. Harry Stock has largely increased the production and business of the long-established bakery of Wm. Stock & Son. Both shops will be operated by Mr. Stock, and the patrons are assured of an excellent service.

Both the Lush and Stock bread have been household favourites in Peterborough. Mr. Lush retired from active work some years ago, and his sons, who have been carrying it on, are now disposing of the business.

Women Silently Suffer

There are sufferings which only a woman knows and about one woman in every four goes about her household duties while suffering actual pain. If a man had to endure as much pain he would stay at home and let his work take care of itself. But there is nobody to do the work of a wife and mother. Her household work cannot be neglected, and so she works on and silently suffers.

In nearly every case her suffering takes the form of headaches and pains in the side. Her appetite is poor, and the least exertion leaves her breathless, and yet she heroically struggles on with her manifold daily tasks. The whole trouble lies in the blood, which is either scanty or impoverished so that the food she does take does not carry nourishment to the nerves, the brain and the body. Anaemic is the medical term for this condition, and unless steps are taken to increase the blood supply the sufferer may pass into a hopeless decline. To enrich the blood and increase its supply there is no medicine equal to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood, which fills the veins, strengthens the nerves, aids digestion, and stimulates the whole body. Through the fair use of these pills, backaches and sideaches and splitting headaches disappear, and the former sufferer has new energy and new interest in life.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by dealers in medicine everywhere or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COAL MINE NEAR LEVIS.

Quebec May Have Only Stray Deposit or a Large Vein.

QUEBEC, Feb. 4.—Work on the extraction of coal from a mine discovered on the cliff near Levis has started. So far three families are heating their homes with the anthracite taken from Quebec soil.

It is not yet established whether Quebec only has a stray deposit of coal or whether it is a far-stretching vein.

Good Programme At The Y.W.C.A.

A splendid programme delighted a fair audience at the beginning of a series of entertainments which will be presented at the Y.W.C.A., on Saturday evenings. The programme was:

Instrumental solo — Miss Mabel Penrose.

Reading — "La Marseillaise," Miss Parker.

"On to Victory," an interpretative study in motion, illustrating the spirit of the French nation, Miss Littlefield.

"The Soul of the Violin," Miss Parker.

"Russian Rhapsody," illustrating the evolution of the Russian peasant, Miss Littlefield.

"The Minuet," Miss Parker.

"And Old French Dance," Miss Littlefield.

"An Indian Legend," Miss Parker.

Miss Penrose was the accompanist for the various numbers.

Special mention may be made of the presentation of "La Marseillaise," Miss Littlefield appearing in her contribution to this trifold number in costume. In "The Minuet," Miss Winnifred Parker delighted the audience by a quaint recitation, accompanied by Miss Littlefield, who, in costume, gave a splendid motion interpretation of the dainty dance.

The next of the series of these entertainments will be announced later.

PROFITEERING IN GERMANY.

Year's Earnings of 37 Munitions Plants Show 75 P.C. Increase.

When the Frankfurter Zeitung recently attacked the German war profiteers, especially the Krupps and other munition makers, for "making a good thing out of the war," and heaping up gain at the expense of the nation as a whole, a cry of indignation immediately went up from the organs of the Pan Germans and iron and steel capitalists, and the Frankfort paper was accused of dealing in generalities, and not citing facts to prove its contention.

This caused the Frankfurter Zeitung to print figures showing that thirty-seven munition plants and allied works, with a combined capital of $400,000,000, cleared in the last year 75 per cent. more than they earned in the year 1913-14— that is, in round figures, $87,500,000, as against $50,000,000. The same concerns increased their dividends, on the average, from 8.2 per cent. to 13.9 per cent., though several of them doubled their dividends. In the two years last reported these thirty-seven companies made such large profits that they could afford to write off an amount equivalent to 40 per cent. of their entire stock capital.

In commenting on these data, the Frankfurter Zeitung, as quoted in the London press, said:

"We see that business is flourishing. It is flourishing just now, probably, more than ever, because the War Office is paying the large works (not the small ones) prices which deserve the closest attention of the Treasury Department."

As evidence of the far-reaching plans of German industry for the future it is noted that the Mannesmann firm of Westphalia is about to increase its capital from $3,500,000 to $21,500,000 to acquire new mines and

GERMANS IN PAPER CLOTHES.

Amsterdam. — Paper trousers are now being worn by a large proportion of the male population of Germany. Whole suits for men are being sold, which contain practically no fabric, except paper, but the demand for paper fabric far exceeds the supply. Collars are now selling in Berlin for about 75 cents each, and shoe laces of paper yarn are 15 cents a pair.

Leather is becoming almost unobtainable. Boots with wooden soles are worn even by the better class, and fully 40 per cent. of the soldiers at the front are wearing wooden-soled boots. The "standard" shoes that are sold contain only ten per cent. leather. In many cases the uppers are made out of old ship' sails, tent awnings and impregnated burlap. Paper for ordinary purposes has become so scarce that some of the provincial newspapers are using low grade colored paper.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

Betsy: I bought some oatmeal ingrain, 30 inch paper, and followed the little paper instructions very carefully about shading and pasting the paper, etc. But in one bolt I found after hanging two shades, both in the one roll. Should the firm stand the loss, as it spoils the whole room? It is right in the middle of a wall, or should I, especially as I butted it?

Answer: Betsy, your handwriting looks very much like the handwriting of a male, and your familiarity with terms like that of a paper hanger.

But perhaps your husband wrote it for you, so I will answer it. But let me emphasize that the object of this column is not one of authority or instruction to the tradesman or artizan, but rather to be of assistance to the inexperienced, as the heading suggests.

If after hanging two strips out of the same roll you discovered two shades, I would say the fault is yours. You evidently either reversed your paper, on the paste board, or you did so when hanging it. It would be almost impossible to have two shades in one roll of ingrain.

Admirer, Lindsay, Ont.: I have had the misfortune to spill some sewing machine oil on a leather covered chair. Is it possible to remove it without spoiling the leather. It is out of your line, I know, but I am sure you can suggest some remedy.

Answer: Try washing it with benzine or gasoline, which must be absolutely clean. What does not come off the surface will be driven through. Then allow the chair to stand a day, so that the benzine may evaporate, after which wash it over with well-beaten white of egg and polish with a soft clean cloth or a little wax rubbed in, and polished if desired.

A.B.C., City: How can I remove pencil marks from paint work without spoiling the paint?

Answer: Try rubbing them with lemon dipped in finely pulverized whiting.

Smith Township: Y: My paper will not stick to the wall; I used flour paste and put glue in it. What is the best thing to do?

P. S. The plaster is just the raw kind.

Answer: I take that you mean by raw plaster what is known as sand finish. First go over the ceiling and walls thoroughly with a block of wood to remove the loose sand. Then apply a coat of thin paste to which has been added a cup of brown sugar to a pail. Let this dry. Then hang in the usual way and it will stick if you use good, stiff paste on your paper. It it is very rough, hang lining paper first.

BODY OF OLD CHAMPION LIES IN STATE TO-DAY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By H. C. Hamilton.)

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 5. — In a beautiful mahogany casket, with wreaths of flowers almost completely hiding his last couch, the body of John L. Sullivan, former world's heavyweight champion, lay in state to-day at the home of his sister, Mrs. Annie E. Lenon. Following a steady stream of men, women and children that gazed on the peaceful features of the old gladiator until a late hour last night, more were present early to-day. Those who went to pay a tribute to a man whose name means more to pugilism than any other, took little heed of a wind that breathed a zero temperature.

Sullivan himself was dressed in a full dress suit. On the glistening mahogany of the casket there is a silver name-plate bearing only the inscription, "John L. Sullivan.' Arrangements have not been completed for the funeral. Only a few of the men at first selected have been able to attend as pall bearers and honorary pallbearers. Col. Roosevelt, invited to be one of the latter, was forced to decline. He sent a message from his home in Oyster Bay. Other honourary pall bearers will be James J. Corbett, the man who wrestled the heavyweight title from Sullivan, Billy Muldoon, famous as a trainer, former Mayor Curley of Boston, Miah J. Murray, Police Captain James P. Sullivan, and other local celebrities.

"BRINGING UP FATHER ABROAD"

Here For a Return Engagement Next Saturday

Funnier than ever, more musical than any of its predecessors, gayer in colour than even the original of the "Father" series, and as a natural consequence, the most successful of all the George McManus' comic cartoon "Father" series, is said to be "Bringing Up Father Abroad," the latest musical production with "Jiggs" Mahoney, the retired Irish contractor for its title character.

"Bringing Up Father Abroad" is due here at The Grand on Saturday next for a return engagement, with a company of the swiftest wits, liveliest dancers, comliest choristers and distinguished specialists now bidding for the roars and titters of the country's discriminating play-goers.

Included in the company are many of the clever principals identified with the early successes of the "Father" series, including John E. Cain, the original "Jiggs" and his popular teammate, Blanche Newcomb, Marion Benson, Ben Byron, Eddie Leamon, Madeline Gray, and the inimitable Robert Rice, who made the early editions of the "Father" series a byword wherever presented.

The girly choruses of the new production are said to hold the gold ribbons for youth, attractiveness, voice and personal charm, and also, to exceed in numbers the auxiliaries of any company now bidding for the applause of playgoers.

THE WISDOM TOOTH

The wisdom tooth is a bright attempt on the part of Nature to be funny with man. Nature is constantly springing little jokes of this character, such as the double-headed calf and the three-legged hen, but when she invented the wisdom tooth she committed a thoughtless and inhuman act.

No good reason has ever been advanced why the wisdom tooth should be allowed to live and litter up the human mouth. It is one of the most poorly located teeth we have, occupying a seat in the nineteenth row of the third balcony, where it cannot bite into anything except the cheek of the wearer. One of the most disappointing experiences a hungary man can have is to aim his teeth at a porterhouse steak three inches thick and have his wisdom teeth miss the target entirely and maim a perfectly good cheek. Science has long asked why Nature did not locate the wisdom tooth near the main travelled road, instead of hanging it off to one side, where nothing but the inquisitive forefinger of the dentist can get at it.

The wisdom tooth does not come with the rest of the set, but sits back and waits until the mouth has been completely filled with cavity-stricken molars, when it crowds into the end of the seat without any regard for the comfort of those next to it. A great many people do not cut their wisdom teeth until they get married, which teaches us that marriage should not be entered upon lightly.

Nobody is in favour of the wisdom tooth except members of the dental profession, who find it more profitable than buying laughing gas at eighty cents per 1,000 feet and feeding it to the patient at $9 per square yard. It requires more acrobatic ability to fill a cavity in a wisdom tooth than it does to dodge an action for breach of promise, hence our leading dental schools require their graduates to take lessons of some boneless contortionist.

The wisdom tooth is like some human voices which are roaming up and down, seeking whom they may destroy. It should be extracted as soon as it gets noisy.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

Mrs. Link, 18 Walker Street, Halifax, N.S., states: — "After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by using Dr Chase's Ointment. After the third of fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure.

"I see Newpop at the club quite often since his baby came. I thought he was anchored to a home life." "He was, but at the first squall he began to drag his anchor."—Boston Transcript.

Rousing Services At S. A. Temple

The week-end meetings of the Salvation Army reached high-water mark from every standpoint.

The Young People's Council, conducted by Commissioner Richards in the W.O.W. Hall was especially interesting indeed, and the three sessions improved each time, when the climax was reached in the evening—seventy-seven young people were at the mercy-seat seeking God. This pleased everybody, of course.

The soldiers' meeting last night was exceptionally well attended, considering the real cold weather. The Commissioner's heart to heart talks were very much enjoyed, and the listeners profited thereby.

The Saturday night and Sunday services at the Temple were conducted by Brigadier Miller, and the senior side of the Corps with their friends did enjoy the services very much.

Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, Brigadier Morris, Major Parker, Captain Beer, officers and soldiers from Cobourg, Trenton, Belleville, Lindsay, Port Hope, and Campbellford, were visitors to the city during the week-end. Some returned yesterday, others go to-day.

A special young people's campaign will follow on this month and a senior campaign next month, particulars of which will be given later.

WORTHY PROMOTION.

On the occasion of Commissioner Richards' visit to Peterborough last week-end, a worthy promotion was made. The Commissioner bestowed on Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney the ranks of Commandant, the highest that can be held by officers in the S.A. field. The Commandant and his good wife are to be congratulated upon their promotion.

Detroit In Serious Plight

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 5.—Detroit shivered to-day in a temperature of 16 below zero with the fuel supply practically exhausted and no relief in sight. Five schools closed, and the City Gas Co. has but two days' supply of coal. Many large plants expect to close down to-night. Serious suffering is reported in many homes.

Stewed tomatoes may be made very savory by the addition of a little sliced onion. They require longer cooking.

PTE. HAYLOCK AT KIRKDALE

Mrs. Raylock, 52 Weir Street, has received the following letter from Ottawa in regard to her husband, Pte. Fred Haylock, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

"I have the honour, by direction to advise you that a report received by mail from England, states that the marginally noted soldier, who has been suffering from a gun-shot wound in the face and fractured jaw, was transferred from No. 16 Canadian General Hospital, Kirkdale, Eng., on January 5th.

Oshawa To Play Here To-morrow Night

Bradleyites Were Unable to Reach the City Last Night and Game Had to Be Postponed—Teams Will Play Here To-morrow and in Oshawa on Tuesday Next.

The weatherman got out an injunction against the Peterborough-Oshawa Junior O.H.A. game last night, and owing to the tie up on the railways Oshawa was unable to reach the city, and the game had to be postponed. It will be played here to-morrow (Wednesday) night. The Petes had a lively practice last night with all the regulars out, and going strong, and they are right on edge for the game, which promises to be a ding-dong battle all the way.

The postponement has only added to the interest in the game, and the probabilities are that a record crowd will see the teams clash to-morrow night.

F. C. Waghorne, the dean of the O.H.A. refereeing staff, will handle the bell. It is a long time since he has been seen in action here, although the same "Wag" was refereeing games in Peterborough before some of the present Peterborough juniors were born.

The Oshawa team are said to be strong this year, and they are very confident of their ability to win to-morrow night's game. The Petes have their own opinion about this, however, and they say the Bradleyites will know they have been in a game.

The Petes were to have gone to Oshawa on Thursday, but on account of the postponing of last night's fixture the return game will not be played in Oshawa until Tuesday of next week.

The Hague. — Some idea of what follows in the train of under-feeding, which at present prevails everywhere in Belgium, may be gathered from the following statistics from an official source:

Since 1914, the general mortality in Belgium has risen by 50 per cent., while births have fallen off about 42 per cent.; in Ghent and Northern France deaths from tuberculosis have multiplied sixfold.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF G.W.V.A. MEETS

In spite of the extremely cold weather, there was a large attendance at the meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association last night, with the president, Mrs. Mills, in the chair.

Considerable organisation work, including the appointment of committees, was carried out. The cold weather has interfered with the canvass for the club rooms, but it is expected that it will be wound up this week.

RINKS AFFECTED BY NEW ORDER

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5.—The new regulations of the Fuel Controller, announced to-day, will likely compel the closing of hockey rinks on Monday nights as they come within the clause which prohibits any public amusement on the days in question. Except in the case of the Toronto and Hamilton arenas, which have artificial ice, all other rinks in Canada are unheated, using natural ice only for a skating surface, but under the wording of the order will be compelled to close.

Regarded As Sequence To American Order

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 5.—The Canadian Government's new fuel regulations, while coming as something of a surprise, are considered here to be a natural sequence of the recent drastic measures adopted by the United States' fuel controller.

The Canadian order only affects those parts of Canada which depend upon the United States for the greater part of their coal. The Western and Maritime Provinces do not come under the order since their coal supply is almost purely Canadian. While therefore, it is stated that the Canadian Government was not directly urged by the United States to imitate the action taken by the latter, the fact that American industries were forced to close on certain days to conserve United States' fuel supplies, made it necessary for the sake of common decency, if for no other reason, that their Canadian competitors who were using American coal, should also make some sacrifice for the same cause.

National pride was partly responsible for the Canadian order. On the other hand, had the weather been mild it is doubtful whether the order would have been promulgated when it was. The extremely cold wave which has struck Canada had hastened the decision of the government, which is now known to have been pending for some time past. The new order is said to be something in the nature of an experiment. Whether the order will be further extended will depend upon the weather and other conditions which may arise in the meantime. No protests have yet reached the government, but undoubtedly representations will be made by the interests, the peculiar situation of which may call for certain modifications of the new regulations. Any representations which the theatre people may make, for instance, will receive consideration. It has been suggested by some that they might select the day of the week on which they shall be heatless. After consideration of the situation Monday was decided upon as the day which would least inconvenience the theatre people. The fuel controller's branch will not volunteer even an approximation of the amount of coal which will be saved by the new order. If the weather is mild the saving may be insignificant. If the present cold wave continues the saving will run into thousands of tons. The regulations will be enforced with the assistance of the municipal authorities, and infringements of the order will be dealt with by the police.

SAYS REVIEW IS PEEVED AND HAS BEEN SIDE-STEPPING

Mr. Gordon, in an interview to-day, stated that the Review still side-stepped and dodged the fact that in order to deceive it's readers, and to misrepresent the facts it had cut out certain parts of a Judge's finding in order to give the wrong impression of it.

Mr. Gordon further stated that the Review's statement was untrue, that he ever sent Mr. Lindsay to Colonel Miller with instructions to tell Colonel Miller that he (Mr. Lindsay) was to be given the $6,000 policy.

The Review stated that Mr. Gordon wrote the Secretary of the Board, requesting him to furnish Mr. Lindsay with a statement of the various amounts of insurance, and this is untrue. Mr. Gordon stated he never wrote the Secretary of the Board making such request. The Review stated that when this policy expired Colonel Miller was notified of that fact that day. Colonel Miller was notified ten days before it expired by the Secretary, and a second time on the date of the expiration. So this statement of the Review is untrue.

The statement of the Review that Mr. Gordon was so emphatic to the point of profanity is absolutely untrue, and what is more, Colonel Miller never said that it was true, or informed the Review or any other party of this fact.

"The trouble with the Review is that it is peeved since last January," said Mr. Gordon. "It has been sore for a long while. Since the 1st of January the crape has been fluttering on the door of the Review, and the ambitions of the Review as the great municipal journal have been blasted."

"It is said, when the Review might have been on the inside of municipal affairs and the principal stockholder of the Review might have been 'The Warwick' of Peterborough, that the people of the Centre Ward were so unappreciative of the many virtues and outstanding ability of the Review's candidate that he was left in the lurch," continued Mr. Gordon. "It must have been a surprise, as well as a shock, that practically every time the Review picks a candidate he is hoodood with a handicap that puts him out of business on election day.

"These candidates, who want to be elected, will pray to Heaven that the Review will support the other fellow, and then their chances of election will be first-class," said Mr. Gordon.

"The Review will not be splashing so much ink around when it gets this soreness out of its bones," he continued; "but the real lively kick that was given the Review on New Year's Day was so severe that we must expect a certain amount of grouching from a bunch of sports who have always been known as poor losers."

Member Is Fined For Hoarding

LONDON, Feb. 4.—William John Macgeagh Maccaw, Unionist member of the House of Commons for West Down, was fined £400 and £35 costs to-day for food hoarding.

Mr. Maccaw was tried in the Oxted, Surrey, Police Court. According to the Attorney for the Food Committee of the Godstone division of Surrey, this member of Parliament had in his larder at Rook's Nest, 24 pounds of tapioca, 154 pounds of rice, 53 pounds of semolina, 100 pounds of biscuits, 53 pounds of tea, 100 pounds of sugar, 34 pounds of golden syrup and 21 pounds of honey.

Although it was not contended that people living in country houses should come to London daily for their supplies, this stock of goods was held to constitute a hoard.

One of Several Cases.

The case of Mr. Maccaw was one of several hundred pending, while many more have already been disposed of, every class in the country being involved. Last week Admiral Sir Richard Poore was fined £90 for having in his possession a quarter of a ton of food, while others who were fined included a railway worker, a wealthy widow and the proprietors of several hotels, the latter being charged with exceeding the official ration.

As a general rule the local Magistrates inflict stiff fines, but Baron Rhondda, the Food Controller, is dissatisfied with this method of dealing with hoarding cases, and, besides confiscating the excess stores, he has pressed the Magistrates to inflict imprisonment upon the guilty in cases of systematic hoarding.

STILL ANOTHER DECORATION

The list of decorations won by Peterborough soldiers for brave actions in the field is steadily growing. Yesterday it was announced that Sergt. Herb O'Heron, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, had been awarded the Military Medal. To-day Mrs. Wm. Mitchell has received word that her husband, Lance Corp. Wm. Mitchell, formerly of the 93rd, has also won the coveted decoration for bravery. No particulars have been received as to the feat for which the medal has been awarded.

Lance Corp. Mitchell went overseas as a sergeant with the 93rd Battalion and was attached to the recruiting staff of the battalion before it left Peterborough. He went to France in a draft to the 2nd Canadian battalion. Previous to joining the 93rd Lance Corp. Mitchell had been a member for some time of B squadron, 8th C.M.R., but was rejected in the medical examination at Ottawa owing to defective vision. He was determined to get overseas, however, and finally succeeded in his desire.

Train Service Demoralized

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—Train service on the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk was demoralized to-day due to a forty degree drop in temperature, to 18 below, and a forty mile gale. Snow was drifted upon the tracks, tying up the traffic.

FUNERAL OF MR. EDWARD WADE

The funeral of the late T. Edward Wade, 87 London Street, was held to-day from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Alex. Richardson, Henry Rush, H. C. Winch, H. Evans, W. Henry and G. W. Green. Service was conducted at the house and at the cemetery by Rev. Robt. Pogue.

Extreme Frost A New Problem To Railway Men

The G.T.R. train from Belleville, due here at 8.30 a.m., arrived this afternoon at 1.35 p.m., and on the C.P.R. the early express from Montreal went through Peterborough about eleven o'clock. These are samples of the disrupted train schedules reported on both railways to-day. The 5.30 p.m. passenger train from Port Hope was cancelled last night and the train to Lakefield stuck in a drift at Nassau. One of the crew crossed a field to a farm house and telephoned to the city for help. A yard engine was dispatched to release it. This stub line was closed until late this afternoon.

Severe frost heightened the troubles of the trainmen, and upon the firemen fell the bulk of the extra labour required to maintain the steam pressure. This division of the G.T.R. also received more than its share of snow with yesterday's high wind. The Port Hope road filled up in some of its cuts and was dead until three o'clock this afternoon when a plough was sent out to clear this line. A passenger train made up here followed it.

The west end of this division was closed early yesterday morning. The train from Toronto, due here at 11.40, tried to force a drift at Scarboro, but failed to force a passage and put back into the haven of the Toronto yards. Communication extended only from Lindsay to Port Hope over the local rails, but the main lines were expected to be cleared and in operation to-night.

These are heart-breaking days for the train crews, despatchers and station staffs. The series of blockades have been saved of much unpleasantness by the resignation of the public, who seem to have acquired a philosophical attitude born of the long winter and its exactions, to which they have become enured.

No Freight Moving.

There has been no freight received this week. Two cars of coal were delivered this morning, one to Fitzgerald's and the other to the Hicks' yard. In the meantime the public is good-naturedly forbearing with tangles in the railway skein. In fact the people seem to display a dumb satisfaction of mere existence. Step by step they have grown accustomed to tightening lines that even now are comparatively loose compared with the demands that coerce the peoples of most other countries. Hence, the crowds in the station waiting rooms are more than patient, and delays are accepted without complaint.

FARMERS ARE ASKED TO APPEAR

Farmers who are seeking exemption for themselves or for their sons or farm help are asked to appear to-morrow (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock at the Court House.

MISS MOWRY GAVE AN ADDRESS

Nursing Sister Miss Bertha Mowry, yesterday afternon addressed a gathering of nurses in the Public Library. There was a good attendance. Miss Mowry leaves for overseas in a few days.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT IN PRINCE ALBERT, HAD CHANCE TO ENLIST HERE

In the early months of the war, William Sloane was given a chance to enlist, or go to jail for theft, of which he was found guilty. He went to the Armouries here, passed the medical examination, and secured two days' grace in which to arrange his affairs. That was the last the police heard of him until [illegible] morning, when Chief Thompson's mail brought an inquiry from Prince Albert, Sask., where Sloane was arrested on 29th January on a charge of stealing clothing at Big River, Sask.

The letter asked for his record in Peterborough, and Chief Thompson forwarded it to-day. He had disappeared completely since 1914.

Sloane came to Peterborough from Norwood and worked here as a bricklayer. He is a young man of about thirty years.

14,000 HAVE BEEN PUT INTO KHAKI SO FAR

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterboro Examiner.)

Ottawa, Ont., Feb 5. — Fourteen thousand odd men have already been directly drafted under the Military Service Act. This does not include men who have joined other units voluntarily in the interval between the registration and the calling out of the draftees. In one district alone 400 men thought to be defaulters were found to have joined in this manner, and to have been for some time past in khaki. Hundreds of appeals have yet to be heard.

Over One Million Workers Affected By Fuel Order

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—The Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario will make a protest to the Government respecting the fuel order, alleging that stores could be closed on Tuesday with much less loss than on Saturday. Legislature Is Opened

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Feb. 5—With the usual military and state ceremonies, the fourth war session of the Ontario Legislature was opened this afternoon by Sir William Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor. The speech from the throne did not portend a lengthy session, but included important provisions. In view of the fuel scarcity in Ontario and the Dominion generally, a government will set aside peat deposits and take measures to increase the fuel supply by this means immediately. Reference was also made to the development of the Chippewa-Queenston power projects and other power projects in various parts of Ontario. The need for further extraordinary efforts toward food production were emphasized and arrangements for reception and re-education of returned soldiers given prominence.

"COAL LINE" SEEN AT HICKS' OFFICE REVEALS CONDITIONS

Overworked employees forced Mr. Hicks to regulate the receipt and delivery of coal to-day. Three men in the yard who have been pressed by the continuous stream of sleighs were about to quit this morning, and the office staff were nearly exhausted by the rush.

Mr. Hicks decided that to avoid confusion, a semblance of order was necessary, and immediately closed the office door and put a man in charge to admit customers singly. As a result, there was a "coal line" along Charlotte Street this afternoon which at three o'clock numbered about 30 persons. A chain across the entrance to the yard kept the sleighs out on the road. They, too, were admitted one by one, and only when the sleigh in the yard had received its supply.

"The men can do only a day's work," Mr. Hicks explained. "If this congestion were to continue the men would be worn out, and there would be a loss of time and effort by the crowding about the elevators."

The queue was something of a novelty in Peterborough, but it was bound to come, especially as a result of the freight difficulties the railways have experienced. The length of the line was a striking evidence of the fact that there is a steadily increasing number of householders who are dependent upon the two hundred pound allotments of coal which they are apparently glad to receive in these days of uncertainty and scarcity of supplies.

Closing Regulations on Saturday May Not Reach Country.

An Otonabee farmer stated that the closing of business on Saturday would be felt by the people from the country who, unless they are notified of the regulation, will bring in their produce as usual and find the stores closed to them, and probably a slim market. In this latter aspect there will be little hardship, for the market attendances are never large in sub-zero weather.

Late Despatches

Canadian Press Despatch.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—A detachment of German troops last night attacked the French positions on Chemin des Damse on the Aisne front.

LONDON, Feb. 5.— Andrew Bonar Law, government spokesman in the House of Commons, to-day announced that a Generalissimo would not be appointed as a result of the recent conference of Premiers and Generals at Versailles.

GERMANS SHIP OUT GOLD

While all Germans are being entreated to turn in their gold pieces to the Reichsbank to strengthen the reserves, some of their compatriots are doing their utmost to nullify these appeals, according to the following despatch found in copies of German newspapers recently received here:

"Stuttgart. — The local criminal police has got on the track of an extensive plan for the illicit exportation of gold by means of buying up French gold pieces from several of the South American banks, and shipping them abroad. Friedrich Dietz, a merchant, has been arrested as the chief plotter, as have also several bank employees who helped him in his work. A sum amounting to 160,000 francs in gold has been seized."

WINTER'S DESTRUCTIVENESS.

More Widespread and Probably Costlier Than Summer's Threatening Storms.

It's a hard frost that brings nobody a little extra profit. A plumber stated that he had never heard of so many frozen taps, cracked pipes, and other disorganisation of household water services as this morning's reports following last night's flurry in White River weather.

Wrecked stoves were included in the damage list, and one instance was mentioned of a woman whose stove had been so badly smashed by the usual blow-up that follows careless firing after water connections have become frozen, that she ordered a new stove.

There is something of the Hun in the Weather Man's campaign. He may not demolish houses, but he has put most of them to the inconvenience resulting from broken pipes, and consequent flooding. He has driven persons into the coal queues who never dreamed of that extreme experience, and there have been fires from overheated furnaces that have been as destructive as a stray bomb or two. Winter's manifestations may not be as spectacular as summer's electrical storms, but the destruction is more general and apparently more costly.

REMARKABLE HOLDING UP OF TRADE IN ENGLAND.

London. — The fourth year of the war has been remarkable for the sustained activity of trade, the continuous and cumulative increases in wages and the ferment in the engineering and munition industries, says The Daily Telegraph.

During the past twelve months wage increases to workingmen exceeded £100,000,000, and the increases during the three years 1915-16-17, together with the rise in prices of commodities, have completely revolutionized the pre-war economic basis of British trade.

The unpleasant feature of the year has been the growing discontent and unrest pervading large sections of the workers and this is seen in the number of industrial disputes, often of the most trivial kind. Official returns from January to November, indicate there were 494 disputes during those months, affecting 647,724 workers, and causing the loss of over 3,500,000 working days, the greatest loss of time being recorded during September, October and November.

The number of persons unemployed is the lowest on record, and during the war period the figure has steadily declined till it is now below one per cent.

FURS FOR MOURNING.

For those who prefer black furs to all others, or for those in mourning who find something incongruous in the brown or gray furs associated with crepe trimmed garments, there are lovely pelts of black lynx, broadtail, black fox and seal-skin made into conservatively modish muffs and scarfs and appropriately lined. The linings, by the way, have a good deal to do with the consistent attractiveness of these mourning furs. Generally they are of dull finished crepe silks beautifully applied; or the linings may be of white satin veiled with black Georgette crepe or chiffon. Occasionally gray chiffon or a gray brocaded satin is employed, but these are exceptions.

British Campaign In The Holy Land Was A Great Military Success

Gen. Allenby's Initiative and Determination Achieved Much—Ten Turkish Divisions Are Routed, 12,000 Prisoners Taken in 42 Days

COL. REPINGTON REVIEWS FIGHT

LONDON, Feb. 5. — "Whatever views we may entertain of the wisdom or the reverse of the policy which led the War Cabinet to change our defensive attitude on the borders of Egypt into a war of offensive movement of an ambitious character, writes Col. Repington, military critic of the Morning Post, "we must all admit that the plan, preparations and execution of the Palestine compaign have reflected great credit upon the Generals, staffs and troops, and that were not our other anxieties so pressing, the British world would be ringing with the fame of a considerable martial achievement.

"Sir Edmund Allenby, in his despatch of December 16, 1917, naturally restricted himself to the operations for which he personally was responsible, but it is only just that we should acknowledge, when we sutdy his campaign, the great debt we owe Gen. Sir Archibald Murray, the man who freed Egypt from its enemies, east and west, conquered the Sinai desert, and by skillful organization of the broad-gauge railway and pipe lines, enabled the British army to concentrate on the borders of Palestine with a hostile army in its front and a wholly unproductive desert at its back.

"This fine feat of prudent organization and leadership, including as it did many hard blows dealt to the Turks and their German leaders, is one that deserves our grateful acknowledgement, and when Gen. Murray's last despatch is published in its entirety we shall be in a better position to judge the character of the orders which he received, the weakness of his force, and the serious difficulties which he had surmounted with sparse means.

Justice will then surely be done to this fine leader and responsibility for his difficulties will be laid on the right shoulders. It was on the experience of the new Moses that the new Joshua made his plans. Gen. Allenby examined the position, recognized the improbability of success with the force Gen. Murray had, and sent in his estimation and reinforcements required. He refused to move until all had come, and the General Staff at home refused to hurry him, but when all the men, guns and munitions had reached him he struck hard and justified by his wise and vigorous leadership the confidence reposed in him.

Turks Cleverly Posted.

"To attack some ten Turkish divisions, deeply intrenched and provided with over one hundred heavy guns, can never be child's play. The Turks were cleverly posted on the line of Gaza-Beersheba in a series of strong works and fortified localities about a mile apart, on a front extending some thirty miles with good lateral communications.

"Owing to difficulties in obtaining water, Gen. Allenby was unable to get at the enemy except on the Gaza front. His first work, therefore, was to organize a water supply and a transport service, and only when this was done could he begin to execute the project of striking the left flank of the main Turkish position at Hereira and Sheria.

"Here the defences were less formidable than elsewhere; they were easier of approach and allowed play for the superiority in mounted troops from which, throughout the campaign, the British forces so conspicuously benefitted.

"This plan entailed a preliminary operation against Beersheba to secure its water supply and allow the British force alloted to this task to deploy on the hills northwest of Beersheba for an attack on the Hereira line.

"It also was necessary to make a strong demonstration against Gaza in order to hold the Turks there in position and to use up their reserve. It was a serious business in such a country to enable the Beersheba column to move, fight and remain supplied at a distance of twenty miles from a rail head, and almost the whole available transport, including 30,000 pack camels had to be used for this purpose. Railways were also pushed forward, and a water supply developed at the jumping off place of various columns.

"On October 27, the Turks made a strong reconnaissance against Karm, where our yeomanry resisted valiantly until reinforcement by the 53rd Welsh division, when the enemy retired. On the same day the bombardment of the Gaza defences began by sea and land. On the night of October 30, the two divisions of mounted troops and the camel corps destined to capture Beersheba moved into the sition and on the morning of October 31, Beersheba was attacked from the south and east, and was captured with a loss to the enemy of 2,000 prisoners and 13 guns.

"When it became known to him that Beersheba had been captured, Gen. Allenby attacked Gaza by land, and reached nearly all his objectives, and attained his purpose of attracting the enemy's reserves.

"The main operation then began. The Turks used all their available troops for a counter stroke far to the east, hoping to disarrange Gen. Allenby's plans, but they failed to do so. On Nov. 6th the Yeomanry of the London and Irish troops assaulted the Hereira-Sheria lines with complete success, taking 600 prisoners besides some guns. The Welsh troops were heavily engaged at Tel-El-Huweilfeh on the same day and defeated the enemy opposed to them."

After further reviewing the campaign Col. Repington says:

"In his brief and completely successful campaign of 42 days, Gen. Allenby routed ten Turkish divisions, and captured 12,000 prisoners and 100 guns. We must ascribe the main merit to his vigorous leadership and to steady adherence to the course of action which he had laid down for himself.

"From first to last he seized and maintained the initiative, gave the enemy no rest and dominated the little theatres of war. All who know General Allenby felt sure that in an independent command his strength of character, boldness and perseverance, would mark him out as a great leader. He had the chance and most worthily has he taken it."

To Stop a Persistent Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HUNGARY'S ATTITUDE ON PEACE QUESTION

Government Has Succeeded in Keeping Its War Aims Well Camouflaged —Do Not Believe in Peace on the Basis of the Status quo ante

GENEVA, January 5th—Up to very recent times the Magyar government of Hungary has succeeded in keeping its war aims pretty well camouflaged. In the Entente countries it was generally believed that all of the annexationists of the Dual Monarchy came from Austria, and that the Hungarians were more than anxious to conclude peace on the basis of "no annexations, no indemnities," or on the basis of the status quo ante. What the statesman of Hungary meant by these general phrases is gradually becoming known. The following few quotations taken from some of the leading newspapers of Hungary will shed considerable light on the situation.

Several days ago Count Tiszas organ, the "Budapesti Hirlap," wrote as follows:

"We want 15,000 kilometers of Roumania and 10,000 square kilometers of Serbian territory; that is ours."

In the Magyar Hirlap of December 2nd Count Julius Andrassy wrote the following article,

"More than once I have already declared that in foreign affairs I am no friend of the idea that we should commit ourselves to a principle, and especially not at a time when the governments are about to negotiate peace. At such times it is most advantageous to have an entirely free hand. The position of a card player who must spread out his cards on the tables is very weak indeed, as against a player who is in the habit of keeping the value of his cards secret. As I have already said a number of times, I disapprove the view that we have no right to make conquests and to demand indemnities for the enormous sacrifices that we had to bring in this way. Neither did our enmies bind their hands — under such conditions we have a moral right to make conquests and to demand indemnities. It all depends on whether or not we have the opportunity to make use of that right. This will essentially depend on the military situation and political circumstances.

"It would be a great mistake; it would be asking for the impossible to request that we bind ourselves to the status quo ante—I take it to be perfectly obvious that Serbia cannot be restored after the war to the extent that she existed previously. To pass a resolution to the effect that we do not aim at any conquest would be the equivalent to condemning the claims of our Allies, with which we are thoroughly identified. Such a course would be decidedly insincere and impolitic."

The above article attracted a wide comment throughout the Magyar papers, and received the unqualified praise of a great majority. The "Pesti Hirlap" characterizes the article as follows,

"The eminent Magyar statesman treats the question from a Magyar national standpoint. He never loses Magyar soil from under his feet. In its essential aspects, Andrassy's conception does not differ from that of Czerin. Andrassy only supplements the latter."

Count Andrassy's organ thoroughly approves the article, and underlines the phrase that "it would be a mistake, an impossibility, to bind ourselves to the status quo ante. The organ of the Party of National Work, the "Az Ujsag," writes of the article that "Andrassy's article deserves attention, even if considered abstractly. Now that the delegation is dealing with topics of the day, Andrassy's exposition of foreign policy only serves to increase our interest therein."

If there be any person in the Entente countries who still believe that in Hungary there are any friends of a democratic peace, we should commend the foregoing article to their earnest attention. Many others of similar content are daily published by the Hunarian press.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 2 cars, with 36 cattle, 2 calves, 12 hogs and 2 sheep and lambs.

There were but two cars of stock delivered at the Stock Yards yesterday. Traffic is once more completely tied up, so far as the transport of live stock is concerned. Railroads are absolutely refusing to accept live stock for delivery while the present cold snap lasts. Had it not been for the fact that about 800 to 900 head of cattle were held over from Monday there would have been no market yesterday. With the prospect that probably nothing woul be arriving at the market for the next day or two, buyers from the packing houses went in to clean up the few cattle available. The result was a short but moderately active market. Anything of fair to good quality sold about steady with Monday's prices. Considering that the held over cattle were pretty full, prices were better than might be expected. Packers are still confronted with the difficulty of being unable to ship out their beef.

There was practically no hog market, and no quotations are possible under existing conditions.

COME BY IT HONESTLY.

Vincent was altogether too garrulous in school to please his teachers. Such punishments as the institution allowed to be meted out were wthout any apparent effect upon the boy, until at last the headmaster decided to mention the lad's fault upon his monthly report.

So the next report to his father had these words:

"Vincent talks a great deal."

Back came the report by mail, duly signed, but with this written in red ink under the coment: "You ought to hear his mother."

"But ma can't tend the store alone."
"My folks are old," said August Skarr,
"And neither one can drive our car."
Said Van Eckstein, "I ask discharge,
Because our farm's so very large."
"My wife will starve," said Henry Stein,
"Her father's land isn't good like mine."
"I'd like to fight," said William Wegg,
"But lookit the skeeter bites on my leg."
"I'm strong for this war," said Walt Waite,
"But there's none to manage dad's estate."
"Such men as you aren't worth a dam!—
You're slackers all!" roared Uncle Sam.—Exchange.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

The 7th picture was a photograph of a corner of Mrs. Doremus's living-room, showing a window opened wide upon the darkness; the eighth was a window in the same position on the screen, but viewed from the outside, and barred with the iron of a prison.

Then came in regular sequence a view of the Manhattan Bridge; a little cottage with boards across door and windows; a railroad train; an open box of roses, and a card, with the word "Jack" plainly written upon it; a photograph of the glass cabinet in the corner of Mrs. Doremus's dining-room; a printed copy of the oath administered to witnesses at the coroner's inquest, and finally an enlarged photograph of the finger-prints on glass.

This drew from McCarty a loud and unconscious ejaculation of satisfaction as he realized it must be the impression he had asked for, but his exclamation was lost in a wild, hysterical outburst from the woman on his right.

"Let me go! Let me leave this horrible place! I am fainting, I cannot endure any more——"

"Lights, Bassett!" It was Terhune's authoritative tone. "The experiment is over."

The room burst into brightness once more and the detective went rapidly down the line, releasing the spring which held each tablet of paper in place and tucking them under his arm. "You are all at liberty to go now, but I need not request you to hold yourselves in readiness to return again if you are notified. You may be interested in knowing that you have each irrefutably recorded your emotions by the pulse beats in your wrists, in pressing upon the pneumatic cushion."

"What ridiculous child's play is this?" exclaimed Grafton Foxe angrily. "I for one shall pander no further to your absurd chicanery. There's nothing in the law which holds me amenable to such preposterous, so-called tests, and you can count my wife and me out in the future!"

"Come, oh come!" Mrs. Foxe dragged at his arm. "I am afraid——"

Stephen Quimby bowed and departed with an ironic smile. Mrs. Doremus, still trembling with hysteria, had already gone with her maid, and Mr. Steurtevant and the aviator followed.

George Allen, who had ignored the presence of his former wife, lingered for a moment at the door.

"That was mighty interesting, Mr. Terhune," he remarked. "I suppose you've no use for me here any longer, but I'd like to know what you can get out of the experiment. Will you try to find time to look me up at the hotel later?"

"I'll make the time, Mr. Allen," the detective responded heartily.

"Thanks for your co-operation."

His voice and the slight flush upon his ascetic face denoted an unwonted excitement and elation, and when they were alone with the assistant he beckoned to McCarty.

"Come and have a look at the papers," he invited. "Here is a list of the pictures in the order in which they appeared. Now let us see what suggestions they gave our friends."

McCarty glanced at the list the other had placed in his hands. It read: 1. Photograph of Marion Rowntree. 2. Collection of gifts. 3. A wedding. 4. A funeral. 5. Scene in an asylum. 6. A will. 7. An open window. 8. A barred window. 9. Manhattan bridge. 10. Closed cottage. 11. Railroad train. 12. Roses and card "Jack." 13. Glass cabinet. 14. Witness's oath. 15. Finger-prints.

Terhune was rapidly sorting the papers in his hands, which trembled exultantly.

"Ah! Here are some highly significant indications!" he cried. "There were cool heads here to-night, with alert, cautious minds inside of them, but we've broken them down, Mac! In spite of their efforts at concealment we have dragged their secrets from them! I told you that science could not fail! The mind of man may become confused, may be side-tracked by conflicting evidence and false clues, but science places its finger upon the truth invariably.

"It is the greatest, the only flawless detector! Each of these records bears interesting testimony and reveals very curious admissions, but in this one, Mac, we have the crux of the whole matter. It is an absolute betrayal of guilt, a veritable confession.

"How unconsciously yet irretrievably he has revealed his crime—for it is a man's handwriting, of course. Listen: Number one: The girl. Two, Cat, books, rings. Three, Bride she might have been. Four Her corpse. Five, Cray. Sir, Her mother's will. Seven, The window. Eight, Prison. Nine, The bridge. Ten, The House in Steinway. Eleven, The girl that went away. Twelve, Blank. Thirteen, The hiding place. Fourteen, The oath. Fifteen, My marks."

McCarty's lips parted, but no word came, and Terhune shook the incriminating paper aloft in triumph.

"What did I tell you? Science is omnipotent! See how he gives himself away!

"The bride she might have been'—but for him! 'Her corpse'—for which he was responsible! Her mother's will'—how well he knew! 'The window!' He could not bring himself to be more explicit. Twelve is blank, because he knew nothing of the rose or the card. The glass cabinet was instantly recognized, and then in the end, his self control shattered, he damned himself by an unequivocal confession. 'MY marks!' The record is numbered six, and the hand that penned it is the hand that sent Marion Rowntree to her death! Bassett, what is registered on the cylinder?"

The voice of the assistant came from behind the screen:

"Every section shows agitation and excitement but nothing but normal in the circumstances except number six. That jumped spasmodically all over the chart and finally touched the maximum point the cylinder records!"

McCarty's face was a study.

"Number six is my own!" he announced meekly. "I only put down what the pictures meant to me, like you told us. Twelve is blank, for I am not any too handy with a pencil, and the whole business was going so fast for me, and I wrote 'my marks' because they were the very finger prints on my mind, that I'd asked you to let me see. Science had better take another guess, Mr. Terhune."

CHAPTER XIV.

AN UNEXPECTED DEPARTURE.

"'Tis the mercy of God that you were not electrocuted on them wires!" Dennis averred, when McCarty told him the next day of the scientific experiment. "For what did he put you through the jumps if he did not expect you to show what you thought the same as the rest? 'Tis a marvellous thing, though, that Mr. Terhune with a bit of machinery could make you give yourself away like a blackhand informer, you that's as close-mouthed as the confessional!"

"Marvellous it may be, but we are no nearer the truth than we were before Terhune got together a lot of remarkable facts, including a motive, but he hasn't got the man!"

"Sure the motive points to Quimby, all right, and you knocked his alibi into a cocked hat!" reminded the other. "That is a good step of the way."

"It is that! A good step in the wrong direction, if it's not the real motive at all, and a false alibi don't necessarily mean guilt. The whole thing don't hit me right, somehow. Money is a mighty poor excuse for murder, to my thinking. Now, I'd never murder you for your money, Denny——"

"If you did," interposed McCarty, equably, you'd be a disappointed lad, the day."

"But I might kill you McCarty pursued in a hot rage of jealousy or revenge, or fear, that you would maybe squeal on me about something."

Dennis betrayed symptoms of alarm.

"I'm no squealer," he affirmed. "And as for jealousy I've no interest in any woman, as you well know."

"I'm using you as a figure of speech, you mullet head! Money is an incentive to do most anything in this world, but rarely to kill, as the records of the department will show. That is, outside of hold-ups and then it's accidental like. Even housebreakers caught turning a trick will run in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, before they'll shoot and take a chance of going to the chair.

"When I was on the force, we handled all kinds of murders, in the Eyetalian quarter to aristocratic killings in the best circles, and you can take it from me, Denny, when you get down to the motive there wasn't much difference. It don't matter whether you live up an alley or on the avenue if your blood is hot and some fellow steals your girl or gives you a rotten deal that you have got to get even for. Not five per cent. of the murders you come across are premeditated—you can bank on that; they are done when a fellow sees red, and can't think of anything but stark destruction."

"That's so. This brainstorm thing ain't just a lawyer's excuse," Dennis reflected.

"No more it is. Now take this Rowntree case. Does it look to you as if it had been planned ahead" asked McCarty.

"Well, if I'd made up my mind to put the girl out of the way I'd do it more private, I'm thinking, than to heave her out of the window and down in the middle of the street."

"Just so," McCarty nodded. "Terhune's a smart man, but he is so chuckful of science he despises the brains that God gave him."

"'Tis thorough he is, for a fact."

"True for you! And so am I when there's a good reason, but I don't need a spyglass to tell me a coal hole is open in front of me! Now if this murder had been done by means of some new, outlandish invention, it would take some one up in those things to find out the truth, but it's as elementary as a Saturday night bar-room scrap."

"There's more behind it nor that, Mac." Dennis shook his head. "Do you mind that book that I told you about—the 'Darting Death,' it was——"

HEALS INFLAMED ITCHING SKIN

A Home Treatment Which Relieves and Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Itching Skin Diseases, and Leaves the Skin Soft, Smooth and Natural.

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 9.—As a means of allaying inflammation, relieving the dreadful itching and healing and curing itching skin diseases, ulcers, and eruptions, we believe that we can prove that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most potent preparation that it is possible to obtain.

So many extreme cases have been cured, so much intense and continued agony has been relieved, and such a host of people have volunteered their evidence in this regard that we challenge anyone to produce like endorsement for any Ointment or any preparation which is recommended for such diseases.

Dr. Chase's Ointment certainly stands alone, unapproached, and unrivalled as a healer of the skin, and positive cure for itching skin diseases. From pimples to eczema, from chilblains to ulcers, each and every form of itching skin disease have been cured by this great ointment.

Mrs. J. Chapman, 408 Dundas Street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I suffered greatly from an awful rash and irritation of the skin on my chest and back. I could not bear to touch it, and had to wear very loose clothing so nothing would rub against it. At night when I would lie down, I could get neither sleep nor rest. I tried different remedies and doctors' treatments, but never got any relief. At last my daughter advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I did so, and after the first application I was able to get the first night's good rest that I had for a long time. I continued using the Ointment until I was completely cured."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is known in almost every community. Ask your neighbours about it. There is probably a marked cure at your door which you can investigate. The cures made by this preparation will stand investigation. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

HINTS FOR PIE BAKERS.

The next time you bake pies, especially juicy pies, try adding a little cornstarch to the crust. One teaspoonful to a pie will prevent the undercrust from being heavy. Try mixing the sugar and flour and adding it to the fruit before putting your pie together. The pie will be more evenly sweetened and you will not bite into any lumps of flour. Do not stretch the crust tight. In pressing the edges together push the edge of the top crust toward the centre of the pie. This allows plenty of room for the fruit to cook and prevents the crust from bursting open and the juice escaping. Save an ounce of juice or an ounce of meat or potato.

The idea of a "tonic"
For baldness that is chronic
Is manifestly quite absurd.
But when your hair is falling
In quantities appalling,
There's hope in that reassuring word,

LABOR IS HIS JOY

Wealth Not Worth While, Declares Owner of a Gusher.

Riches, Minus Toil, Do Not Appeal to Man Whose Farm Is Saturated With Oil.

Two men were riding through one of the newly discovered oil fields of the Southwest. On each side of the train rose an ugly forest of derricks, covering the rolling prairie with an unnatural growth. The ground under those leafless timber trees was black with crude oil. Refuse oil was burning, and enormous clouds of black smoke rolled up into the sky.

Suddenly the train swept by a quarter-section farm that lay like a great white square between the bristling derricks and the black soil. The little farmhouse was surrounded by a cottonwood grove. Two men with a team at work, stacks of grain and alfalfa and a herd of quiet cattle completed the picture.

"Look!" one of the travelers exclaimed. "Isn't that queer! That must be a dry section!"

A man across the aisle who overheard spoke up:

"On the contrary, that quarter is perhaps the richest oil land in the field. See that one derrick close by the house? It was a gusher and ran more than eight hundred barrels a day. Philip Ross, his wife and two sons live on the White farm, as it is called. When the gusher was struck, Ross' older son rushed into the house with the news. Ross and his wife were there.

"'Father,' he cried, 'the oilmen say it's the biggest drill in the state! We can lease the whole farm for a million! Hurrah!'

"The father calmly looked at the son.

"'What of it?'

"'What of it! We are rich! We can go to New York or Chicago and live without working!'

"'Live without working?' said Ross 'What sort of life is that?'

"They say Philip Ross brought his hand down on the kitchen table where he sat and said, 'Call in Duncan.' That is the younger son. Duncan came in, and the family sat there together.

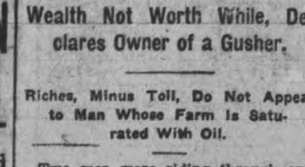
"'I let the oilmen drill to test our farm because you boys asked it,' said Ross. 'The result will give us a million without a stroke of work. But it will ruin our quiet home and unfit us for life's real tasks. It has already spoiled scores of our neighbors, as you and mother know right well. I think too much of you boys to let you grow up with money you never really earned. We are healthy, and daily work is a joy. We can't afford to be rich.'

"He turned to his wife and said, 'Janet, thank God that we are able to work, and do not want to live without it.' And the wife and the boys bowed their heads while the sturdy old Scotchman prayed.

"The oilmen were frantic at his refusal to sell or lease. They offered fabulous prices. They threatened and tried to scare him into yielding. But the White farm is still there, and Ross and his wife and sons are working on it happily, surrounded by the forest of rigs and the black stretch of ruined prairie soil.

The train was again passing through the tangle of derricks and black soil. But in the memory of the two travelers the White farm dwelt, a picture of rare conscience and conviction and resistance to the prevalent desire to make a fortune and live without working.

There is no real life without working. When will Americans learn that lesson, and be content to live and work on the White farm?



Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

JOURNALISM THE JAPAN WAY

One Publisher Finds Suppression of Sensational News Does Not Meet With Approval.

To ascertain the tastes of his readers with regard to sensational stories, according to the East and West News bureau, Motono Eikichehiro, editor of the Yomiuri, recently "held out" the story of the double suicide pact between the daughter of Count Yoshikawa, vice president of the privy council, and her chauffeur, with the result that the following day he was deluged with letters from indignant readers of his paper, many of them charging him with accepting bribes from the Yoshikawa family. Every other newspaper in Tokyo printed the story American fashion.

Eikichehiro based his action on a desire to protect the public from scandalous conduct. It is said the young editor is now convinced of the truth of the saying of the late Charles A. Dana that "whatever the Almighty permits to happen is fit to print." To deny the insinuation that the Yoshikawa family paid him to leave out the story, he printed: "The Yoshikawa family at once engaged a press agent and supplied the paper with complete details of the affair."

He later indulged in a long article about the aims of a newspaper, admitting that his attitude was a daring one. He confessed that if he followed the advices of the very few readers who approved his course, "he would have no hope of continuing in business."

Still Owns Violet Shop.

In the French chamber of deputies the lawyers and doctors are most numerous; but one deputy is a veterinary, another is a news agent, another is a miner, another a comedian, another a tinsmith, another makes wooden shoes, another is a confectioner. Others are professors, and one, who represents Upper Garonne, is a dealer in violets. Time was—and it is a long time ago—when he sold those sweet and modest flowers over the counter in person. Now, with a modesty equal to that of the violet, he has withdrawn himself from so public a position. But he still owns a shop alongside the Hotel de la Poste in Toulouse, a shop where violets, and only violets, are sold.

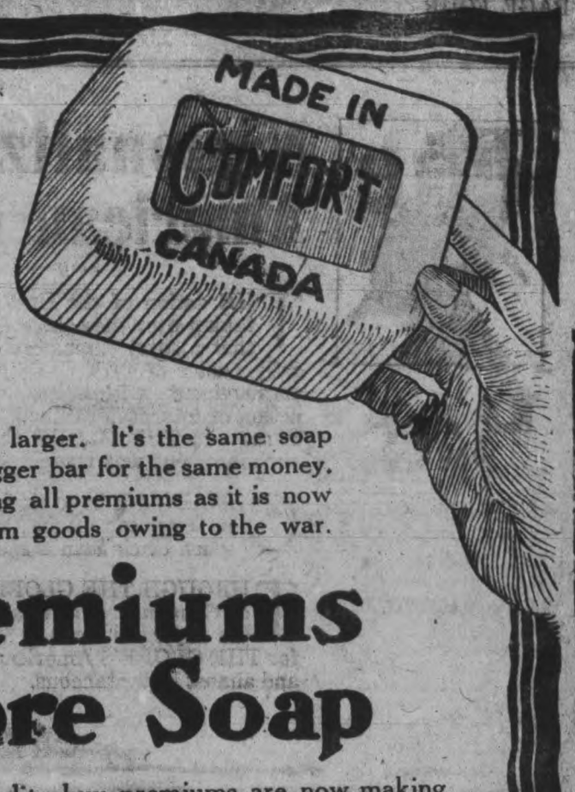
Women, Prepare!

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send 10c for trial package to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont.—"When I reached the critical period I was a nervous wreck and suffered with hot flashes and dizzy spells. 'Favorite Prescription' relieved me of all these ailments and brought me through this trying time safely. For woman of middle age there is no tonic equal to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and I never hesitate to recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Annie Soules, 41 Hess St. N.

Stratford, Ont.—"I was greatly benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; it was before twins came. I had become all run-down, was nauseated, very nervous and weak, and suffered with backache. Was not able to do anything for three months, when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' It soon gave me relief and it was not long when I was strong and healthy. 'Favorite Prescription' was surely a great help to me and I am glad to recommend it."—Mrs. L. J. Mantle, 61 Kent Lane.

Announcing the new bigger Comfort bar



The Comfort Soap bar is now much larger. It's the same soap absolutely, but we are giving you a bigger bar for the same money. We do this because we are withdrawing all premiums as it is now impossible to get satisfactory premium goods owing to the war.

No Premiums but more Soap

Dozens of factories from which we used to buy premiums are now making more necessary war supplies. Others again cannot ship, being across the ocean. The new premiums being offered us are away under Comfort Soap standards so when our present stock is exhausted we will not issue any more—certainly not until after the war.

But we can still buy the splendid materials that go into Comfort Soap, so we have decided to make the Comfort bar materially bigger, right away. There's where we can give you the same, old splendid-quality soap—only more of it.

We can't give you good Premiums but we can make it up to you in Soap.

All Comfort wrappers now out in the stores will be redeemed as heretofore but the wrapper on the new big Comfort bar will not be good for premiums.

You will meet the bigger Comfort bar any day now at your grocer's. Give it a friendly reception. It means more value in the wash tub. For a while yet you may be getting the old bar—it's just as valuable, the wrapper being still good for premiums.

WILL USE HORSE CHESTNUTS

Heretofore Ignored, Well-Known Nut Is to Have Place With Other War Munitions.

"Horse chestnuts for munitions." It is a sober headline in the English papers. Hooray for the horse chestnut! but they are not going to shoot it at the Germans, declares the Boston Transcript. The horse chestnut crop is being harvested in England under the orders of the "director of propellant supplies"—direful title!—for use in the place of large quantities of grain used in connection with munitions, which grain is hereby released for use as food.

We are not told just how this released grain has been used in the manufacture of munitions. That would be giving information to the enemy. But in any case, horse chestnuts will do the business, and all England is put at work by government circular collecting them. Collection will be carried out by local committees formed in connection with the schools. It is particularly requested that nuts should not be gathered until they are fully ripe, so unripe nuts are of no value for the purpose.

Let us be glad that a patriotic use has been found for the horse chestnut. Heretofore it has been available only for purposes of juvenile ornamentation, or, when carried in the right-hand trousers pocket, for adult rheumatism. Not even pigs will eat horse chestnuts. But how many millions of them could easily be gathered in New England! Do you want the New England horse chestnut crop, Mr. Baker? If so, you have only to ask for it.

An Indian Turkish Bath.

The Indians made a Turkish bath. Of course they did not call it that, but it amounted to the same thing, in this fashion. They built a round-topped hut about five feet across and five high, covered with blankets. At one side a small pit was dug.

Stones were heated in a fire near by and put into this pit. The bather went inside with a vessel of water and something to dip it with. By poring the water on the hot stones he could fill the hut with steam, the more water the more steam. Herbs and aromatic leaves were sometimes put upon the stones to make the bath more effective.

Patience without push is not a virtue but a vice.

Not So Fierce.

The class had been studying about the house fly, says Good Health, and the teacher had made much of the danger with which the germ-carrying habits of the insect threaten the public health. The lesson sank deep into the mind of little George, who later was asked to write a composition on the subject. "The fly is a insec," he wrote with difficulty; "he has six legs, he is more dangerous than a lion, but I had rather a fly would bite me than a lion."

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

Famine to Follow War.

"After the war the world will be weary, cold, and hungry, and if we are to avoid famine and revolution something will have to be done at once," said Sidney Webb, a political economist, in a paper at the London School of Economics. He asserted that peace would come suddenly and unexpectedly and then the world would be forced to face a great shortage, signs of which were already visible.

The wheat stocks of the world, he said, had been reduced to the smallest amount ever known and there would be a shortage of one pound of meat a day to each person. Flocks and herds all the world over would be much diminished. Even the fish was rapidly disappearing. Metals, coal, timber, hides, and leather and all building materials would be a famine scarcity.

One-eighth of the world's population, he declared, was engaged in non-productive work. The economy that could be set up against that was very small.

There would be a long interval between demobilization and the repairing of the devastation and waste. During that interval there would be unemployment in all the countries causing an unproductiveness that would mean rather a money famine than a food famine.

"We should now be making preparations to restock the world if we are to avoid a shortage developing into a famine," said Mr. Webb.

Nationalization of American Railways

THE action of the United States Government in taking over the control of the railway systems of that country emphasizes the advantage of being a daily reader of THE GLOBE. Through its exclusive arrangement with The New York Times, this action of international moment was forecasted in The Times and THE GLOBE the day before the official announcement was made.

CANADIANS have always shown a lively interest in American affairs, but never more than now, when Uncle Sam is speeding up for the war.

THROUGH THE GLOBE'S enterprise, the citizen of Canada lives as close to the American news of the day as the man in Washington or New York, for THE GLOBE'S American news service is complete and almost instantaneous.

The nationalization of Canadian railways has been persistently advocated by THE GLOBE, through its editorial columns and special articles by experts.

Peril Far More Acute In the Napoleonic Wars, Says Oxford Professor

DR. C. H. FIRTH, Regius Professor of Modern History at the University of Oxford, recently spoke on "England During the Napoleonic War—an Historical Parallel."

Professor Firth said that the events, incidents, and speeches of the last three years had recalled to his mind repeatedly the resemblances and the differences between the present war and the Napoleonic war. He thought that we could derive from the past comfort for the present. Then we concluded a precarious peace. In 1803 we were in a better position, both for attack and defence, than we were in 1793, but in 1803 we no longer had any allies. Our former allies were then neutral. The French navy had been destroyed, and in 1803 and 1804, owing to the miscalculations of Napoleon, the danger of invasion was not serious. It became a real danger in 1805, when Napoleon aimed at becoming master of the channel, but that danger also passed. On the other hand, the war on land went steadily against us. The years 1807 to 1812 were the critical period of the struggle, but it was noticeable that contemporary utterances indicated rather doubt concerning the capacity of our rulers than the fear of the enemy. In those days there was no party truce, and no Ministry enjoyed the full confidence of the country. Carping criticisms and pessimistic prophecies were continually heard in both Houses of Parliament, and as regularly reproduced by Napoleon in Le Moniteur.

Of the revenue derived from taxation to-day three-quarters was obtained by direct taxation, but a hundred years ago it was the reverse. Again, during the Napoleonic war we had to import less than three weeks' wheat supply, and at present we had to import 40 weeks' wheat supply. Napoleon's object in establishing his Continental blockade was not to starve us, but to prevent us from obtaining money to carry on the war by closing our markets.

In conclusion, Dr. Firth said there were fiercer extremes of good and evil in that war than we had experienced so far in this. We had fought for just over three years. Our ancestors did not lay down their arms for 21 years. If we equalled the effort that they made we should not be doing badly.

Hon. H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education, in moving the vote of thanks to the lecturer, said that in the time of Pitt the peril was far more acute than it had been in this war, except in the first weeks, when the superb achievement of Lord French, which had never been adequately recognized, saved us. Yet, the repose of English society then was far more profound than it was to-day, and that in spite of the additional fact that, while to-day wealth was more equally distributed, and the working classes were more prosperous than ever before, the reverse was the case in the time of Pitt, when the conditions were well calculated to drive the people to revolution. For every member of Parliament who, in the days of Pitt, was adequately instructed in the A B C of politics, there were 20 now. In one respect there had been little change—the temper of the Prussian people was the same then as it is now. In 1813 a Prussian writer advocated the destruction of Rheims cathedral. It had been reserved to the Prussians of to-day to give effect to the suggestion.

Japan's Rice Lands.

Twelve thousand square miles—7,680,000 acres—constitute the rice land of Japan which feeds a nation of about 50,000,000 people on an average of a pound a day for each person. It takes 135 days to grow a crop of rice, and in Japan the laborious work of cultivation is done almost entirely by hand.

Mudholes.

Whatever has been said at one time or another about mudholes, it has remained for Arthur F. Killick (Fatty Lewis) to define one. Says Killick: "A mudhole is a body of water, irregular in size and shape, that failed to get from one side of the road to the other."—Kansas City Times.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

REBELS TAKE YANGTSE CITY.

Peking. — Yochow, the strategic key to the Upper Yangtse-kiang, has been captured by the Southern revolutionists, according to a report from Hankow.

It is believed here that the activity of the revolutionists brought about the southern journey of Acting President Feng Kuo-chang, nad that he will make an effort to effect a compromise on the basis of reconvening the old Parliament. Feng Kuo-chang is expected to arrive in Nanking to-day.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast

Just as coal when it burns leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown, above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism, or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means of magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug-store, but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of lime phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity.

STARS IN BASEBALL.

They Are Really Essential to the Success of a Club.

It is absolutely necessary for each and every major league club to have at least one unusually brilliant performer on its roster to be a good gate attraction, and more often than not these stars are pitchers.

Remember the Chicago White Sox of 1906? Ed Walsh was the star who did most to place that team in baseball history, though he received not a little assistance from Doc White. Who made the Giants of a few years ago the most talked of team in baseball? Why, Christy Mathewson, to be sure. He was a star of stars, and in fair or foul weather it was he whom the rooters paid to see. Plank, Coombs and Bender did more to make the Athletics famous than did all of the other great players on the team put together, though the $100,000 infield, consisting of McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker, was a first class attraction in every sense of the word. But few other clubs in the game's history ever had anything approaching this evenly balanced outfit in its best days.

Bill James in his time came pretty close to making the Braves, and Bill Donovan, Ed Reulbach, Mordecai Brown, Babe Adams, Joe Wood and Grover Alexander all have played leading roles as gate attractions.

What would the Senators have been for years without Walter Johnson? Is it the Tigers or Ty Cobb whom the fans want to see at play? Hal Chase featured the Yankees for years, for many seasons Speaker has been the leading figure with the teams with which he played, and Joe Jackson, Marquard and Lajoie all had large individual followings.

Today a new crop of stars has just about "arrived" and are pulling the crowds

Soldiers' Chance of Life.

If you, a drafted man, believe that statistics tell the truth, you will feel as safe in France as you usually do in the streets of New York. So says Roger W. Babson, the eminent statistician, according to Popular Science Monthly. Furthermore, he says that the man who is connected with the heavy field artillery is no more likely to be killed than one in the employ of a railroad. However, he does not hold out such high hopes for the lieutenants, sergeants and corporals, the death rate being very much greater among officers than among privates. Also, the mortality is higher among volunteer corps than among drafted men. Sixty men per thousand are now being killed in the war, and about 150 men out of each thousand are wounded.

Changes in Belfast.

It is changed times indeed in Belfast, the Ulster Belfast. Four years ago it would have been a hardy man indeed who would have so much as mentioned Joseph Devlin, on the Shankhill, or Captain Craig, in the Falls Road. And yet, to-day, Joseph Devlin and Captain, now Colonel, Craig, work side by side on special government tasks in Belfast. And Colonel Craig may take a walk down the Falls Road, and find himself as welcome as Joseph Devlin would surely be on the Shankhill. Other times, other manners, once again.

Read Candidates' Bumps.

A proposal that all candidates for Parliament should submit to examination by a phrenologist and "have their bumps told," is one of the features of the annual report of the British Phrenological Society.

"The state's need o phrenology is evident in nearly every department of government administration," said one of the speakers at the convention. "Particularly in the election of members of Parliament, it seems to us that the best-fitted candidates, according to the formation of his head and the volume and quality of his brains, is not always elected. A phrenological examination of all candidates would save an immense amount of unnecessary misunderstanding, blundering and expense.

"The system which we propose was tried on some candidates for the Brighton Town Council recently with satisfactory results. Phrenology should be utilized in this way in every town and city.

"We have heard a good deal lately in political circles about brain efficiency,' but it has all been talk, because the authorities have no scientific formula by which they can calculate a candidate's brain capacity or his intellectual grip and ability, nor will they ever have it until they call us phrenologists to their assistance.

"Cabinet ministers ought to be all selected according to the formation of their heads, and not merely upon personal influence, credentials, or reputation.

"Phrenology ought to be taught in our schools—instead of German."

FURS FOR MOURNING.

For those who prefer black furs to all others, or for those in mourning who find something incongruous in the brown or gray furs associated with crepe trimmed garments, there are lovely pelts of black lynx, broadtail, black fox and seal-skin made into conservatively modish muffs and scarfs and appropriately lined. The linings, by the way, have a good deal to do with the consistent attractiveness of these mourning furs. Generally they are of dull finished crepe silks beautifully applied; or the linings may be of white satin veiled with black Georgette crepe or chiffon. Occasionally gray chiffon or a gray brocaded satin is employed, but these are exceptions.

British Campaign In The Holy Land Was A Great Military Success

Gen. Allenby's Initiative and Determination Achieved Much—Ten Turkish Divisions Are Routed, 12,000 Prisoners Taken in 42 Days

COL. REPINGTON REVIEWS FIGHT

LONDON, Feb. 5. — "Whatever views we may entertain of the wisdom or the reverse of the policy which led the War Cabinet to change our defensive attitude on the borders of Egypt into a war of offensive movement of an ambitious character, writes Col. Repington, military critic of the Morning Post, "we must all admit that the plan, preparations and execution of the Palestine compaign have reflected great credit upon the Generals, staffs and troops, and that were not our other anxieties so pressing, the British world would be ringing with the fame of a considerable martial achievement.

"Sir Edmund Allenby, in his despatch of December 16, 1917, naturally restricted himself to the operations for which he personally was responsible, but it is only just that we should acknowledge, when we sutdy his campaign, the great debt we owe Gen. Sir Archibald Murray, the man who freed Egypt from its enemies, east and west, conquered the Sinai desert, and by skillful organization of the broad-gauge railway and pipe lines, enabled the British army to concentrate on the borders of Palestine with a hostile army in its front and a wholly unproductive desert at its back.

"This fine feat of prudent organization and leadership, including as it did many hard blows dealt to the Turks and their German leaders, is one that deserves our grateful acknowledgement, and when Gen. Murray's last despatch is published in its entirety we shall be in a better position to judge the character of the orders which he received, the weakness of his force, and the serious difficulties which he had surmounted with sparse means.

Justice will then surely be done to this fine leader and responsibility for his difficulties will be laid on the right shoulders. It was on the experience of the new Moses that the new Joshua made his plans. Gen. Allenby examined the position, recognized the improbability of success with the force Gen. Murray had, and sent in his estimation and reinforcements required. He refused to move until all had come, and the General Staff at home refused to hurry him, but when all the men, guns and munitions had reached him he struck hard and justified by his wise and vigorous leadership the confidence reposed in him.

Turks Cleverly Posted.

"To attack some ten Turkish divisions, deeply intrenched and provided with over one hundred heavy guns, can never be child's play. The Turks were cleverly posted on the line of Gaza-Beersheba in a series of strong works and fortified localities about a mile apart; on a front extending some thirty miles with good lateral communications.

"Owing to difficulties in obtaining water, Gen. Allenby was unable to get at the enemy except on the Gaza front. His first work, therefore, was to organize a water supply and a transport service, and only when this was done could he begin to execute the project of striking the left flank of the main Turkish position at Hereira and Sheria.

"Here the defences were less formidable than elsewhere; they were easier of approach and allowed play for the superiority in mounted troops from which, throughout the campaign, the British forces so conspicuously benefitted.

"This plan entailed a preliminary operation against Beersheba to secure its water supply and allow the British force alloted to this task to deploy on the hills northwest of Beersheba for an attack on the Hereira line.

"It also was necessary to make a strong demonstration against Gaza in order to hold the Turks there in position and to use up their reserve. It was a serious business in such a country to enable the Beersheba column to move, fight and remain supplied at a distance of twenty miles from a rail head, and almost the whole available transport, including 30,000 pack camels had to be used for this purpose. Railways were also pushed forward, and a water supply developed at the jumping off place of various columns.

"On October 27, the Turks made a strong reconnaissance against Kaun, where our yeomanry resisted valiantly until reinforcement by the 53rd Welsh division, when the enemy retired. On the same day the bombardment of the Gaza defences began by sea and land. On the night of October 30, the two divisions of mounted troops and the camel corps destined to capture Beersheba moved into the sition and on the morning of October 31, Beersheba was attacked from the south and east, and was captured with a loss to the enemy of 2,000 prisoners and 13 guns.

"When it became known to him that Beersheba had been captured, Gen. Allenby attacked Gaza by land, and reached nearly all his objectives, and attained his purpose of attracting the enemy's reserves.

"The main operation then began. The Turks used all their available troops for a counter stroke far to the east, hoping to disarrange Gen. Allenby's plans, but they failed to do so. On Nov. 6th the Yeomanry of the London and Irish troops assaulted the Hereira-Sheria lines with complete success, taking 600 prisoners besides some guns. The Welsh troops were heavily engaged at Tel-El-Huweilfeh on the same day and defeated the enemy opposed to them."

After further reviewing the campaign Col. Repington says:

"In his brief and completely successful campaign of 42 days, Gen. Allenby routed ten Turkish divisions, and captured 12,000 prisoners and 100 guns. We must ascribe the main merit to his vigorous leadership and to steady adherence to the course of action which he had laid down for himself.

"From first to last he seized and maintained the initiative, gave the enemy no rest and dominated the little theatres of war. All who know General Allenby felt sure that in an independent command his strength of character, boldness and perseverance, would mark him out as a great leader. He had the chance and most worthily has he taken it."

To Stop a Persistent. Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HUNGARY'S ATTITUDE ON PEACE QUESTION

Government Has Succeeded in Keeping Its War Aims Well Camouflaged —Do Not Believe in Peace on the Basis of the Status quo ante

GENEVA, January 5th.—Up to very recent times the Magyar government of Hungary has succeeded in keeping its war aims pretty well camouflaged. In the Entente countries it was generally believed that all of the annexationists of the Dual Monarchy came from Austria, and that the Hungarians were more than anxious to conclude peace on the basis of "no annexations, no indemnities," or on the basis of the status quo ante. What the statesman of Hungary meant by these general phrases is gradually becoming known. The following few quotations taken from some of the leading newspapers of Hungary will shed considerable light on the situation.

Several days ago Count Tiszas organ, the "Budapesti Hirlap," wrote as follows:

"We want 15,000 kilometers of Roumania and 10,000 square kilometers of Serbian territory; that is ours."

In the Magyar Hirlap of December 2nd Count Julius Andrassy wrote the following article,

"More than once I have already declared that in foreign affairs I am no friend of the idea that we should commit ourselves to a principle, and especially not at a time when the governments are about to negotiate peace. At such times it is most advantageous to have an entirely free hand. The position of a card player who must spread out his cards on the tables is very weak indeed, as against a player who is in the habit of keeping the value of his cards secret. As I have already said a number of times, I disapprove the view that we have no right to make conquests and to demand indemnities for the enormous sacrifices that we had to bring in this way. Neither did our enmies bind their hands — under such conditions we have a moral right to make conquests and to demand indemnities. It all depends on whether or not we have the opportunity to make use of that right. This will essentially depend on the military situation and political circumstances.

"It would be a great mistake; it would be asking for the impossible to request that we bind ourselves to the status quo ante—I take it to be perfectly obvious that Serbia cannot be restored after the war to the extent that she existed previously. To pass a resolution to the effect that we do not aim at any conquest would be the equivalent to condemning the claims of our Allies, with which we are thoroughly identified. Such a course would be decidedly insincere and impolitic."

The above article attracted a wide comment throughout the Magyar papers, and received the unqualified praise of a great majority. The "Pesti Hirlap" characterizes the article as follows,

"The eminent Magyar statesman treats the question from a Magyar national standpoint. He never loses Magyar soil from under his feet. In its essential aspects, Andrassy's conception does not differ from that of Czerin. Andrassy only supplements the latter."

Count Andrassy's organ thoroughly approves the article, and underlines the phrase that "it would be a mistake, an impossibility, to bind ourselves to the status quo ante. The organ of the Party of National Work, the "Az Ujsag," writes of the article that "Andrassy's article deserves attention, even if considered abstractly. Now that the delegation is dealing with topics of the day, Andrassy's exposition of foreign policy only serves to increase our interest therein."

If there be any person in the Entente countries who still believe that in Hungary there are any friends of a democratic peace, we should commend the foregoing article to their earnest attention. Many others of similar content are daily published by the Hunarian press.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 2 cars, with 36 cattle, 2 calves, 12 hogs and 2 sheep and lambs.

There were but two cars of stock delivered at the Stock Yards yesterday. Traffic is once more completely tied up, so far as the transport of live stock is concerned. Railroads are absolutely refusing to accept live stock for delivery while the present cold snap lasts. Had it not been for the fact that about 800 to 900 head of cattle were held over from Monday, there would have been no market yesterday. With the prospect that probably nothing woul be arriving at the market for the next day or two, buyers from the packing houses went in to clean up the few cattle available. The result was a short but moderately active market. Anything of fair to good quality sold about steady with Monday's prices. Considering that the held over cattle were pretty full, prices were better than might be expected. Packers are still confronted with the difficulty of being unable to ship out their beef.

There was practically no hog market, and no quotations are possible under existing conditions.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

The 7th picture was a photograph of a corner of Mrs. Doremus's living-room, showing a window opened wide upon the darkness; the eighth was a window in the same position on the screen, but viewed from the outside, and barred with the iron of a prison.

Then came in regular sequence a view of the Manhattan Bridge; a little cottage with boards across door and windows; a railroad train; an open box of roses, and a card, with the word "Jack" plainly written upon it; a photograph of the glass cabinet in the corner of Mrs. Doremus's dining-room; a printed copy of the oath administered to witnesses at the coroner's inquest, and finally an enlarged photograph of the finger-prints on glass.

This drew from McCarty a loud and unconscious ejaculation of satisfaction as he realized it must be the impression he had asked for, but his exclamation was lost in a wild, hysterical outburst from the woman on his right.

"Let me go! Let me leave this horrible place! I am fainting, I cannot endure any more——"

"Lights, Bassett!" It was Terhune's authoritative tone. "The experiment is over."

The room burst into brightness once more and the detective went rapidly down the line, releasing the spring which held each tablet of paper in place and tucking them under his arm. "You are all at liberty to go now, but I need not request you to hold yourselves in readiness to return again if you are notified. You may be interested in knowing that you have each irrefutably recorded your emotions by the pulse beats in your wrists, in pressing upon the pneumatic cushion."

"What ridiculous child's play is this?" exclaimed Grafton Foxe angrily. "I for one shall pander no further to your absurd chicanery. There's nothing in the law which holds me amenable to such preposterous, so-called tests, and you can count my wife and me out in the future!"

"Come, oh come!" Mrs. Foxe dragged at his arm. "I am afraid——"

Stephen Quimby bowed and departed with an ironic smile. Mrs. Doremus, still trembling with hysteria, had already gone with her maid, and Mr. Steurtevant and the aviator followed.

George Allen, who had ignored the presence of his former wife, lingered for a moment at the door.

"That was mighty interesting, Mr. Terhune," he remarked. "I suppose you've no use for me here any longer, but I'd like to know what you can get out of the experiment. Will you try to find time to look me up at the hotel later?"

"I'll make the time, Mr. Allen," the detective responded heartily.

"Thanks for your co-operation."

His voice and the slight flush upon his ascetic face denoted an unwonted excitement and elation, and when they were alone with the assistant he beckoned to McCarty.

"Come and have a look at the papers," he invited. "Here is a list of the pictures in the order in which they appeared. Now let us see what suggestions they gave our friends."

McCarty glanced at the list the other had placed in his hands. It read: 1. Photograph of Marion Rowntree. 2. Collection of gifts. 3. A wedding. 4. A funeral. 5. Scene in an asylum. 6. A will. 7. An open window. 8. A barred window. 9. Manhattan bridge. 10. Closed cottage. 11. Railroad train. 12. Roses and card "Jack." 13. Glass cabinet. 14. Witness's oath. 15. Finger-prints.

Terhune was rapidly sorting the papers in his hands, which trembled exultantly.

"Ah! Here are some highly significant indications!" he cried. "There were cool heads here to-night, with alert, cautious minds inside of them, but we've broken them down, Mac! In spite of their efforts at concealment we have dragged their secrets from them! I told you that science could not fail! The mind of man may become confused, may be side-tracked by conflicting evidence and false clues, but science places its finger upon the truth invariably.

"It is the greatest, the only flawless detector! Each of these records bears interesting testimony and reveals very curious admissions, but in this one, Mac, we have the crux of the whole matter. It is an absolute betrayal of guilt, a veritable confession.

"How unconsciously yet irretrievably he has revealed his crime—for it is a man's handwriting, of course. Listen: Number one: The girl. Two, Cat, books, rings. Three, Bride she might have been. Four Her corpse. Five, Cray. Sir. Her mother's will. Seven, The window. Eight, Prison. Nine, The bridge. Ten, The House in Steinway. Eleven, The girl that went away. Twelve, Blank. Thirteen, The hiding place. Fourteen, The oath. Fifteen, My marks."

McCarty's lips parted, but no word came, and Terhune shook the incriminating paper aloft in triumph.

"What did I tell you? Science is omnipotent! See how he gives himself away!

"'The bride she might have been'—but for him! 'Her corpse'—for which he was responsible! Her mother's will'—how well he knew! 'The window!' He could not bring himself to be more explicit. Twelve is blank, because he knew nothing of the roses or the card. The glass cabinet was instantly recognized, and then in the end, his self control shattered, he damned himself by an unequivocal confession. 'MY marks!' The record is numbered six, and the hand that penned it is the hand that sent Marion Rowntree to her death! Bassett, what is registered on the cylinder?"

The voice of the assistant came from behind the screen:

"Every section shows agitation and excitement but nothing but normal in the circumstances except number six. That jumped spasmodically all over the chart and finally touched the maximum point the cylinder records!"

McCarty's face was a study.

"Number six is my own!" he announced meekly. "I only put down what the pictures meant to me, like you told us. Twelve is blank, for I am not any too handy with a pencil, and the whole business was going so fast for me, and I wrote 'my marks' because they were the very finger prints on my mind, that I'd asked you to let me see. Science had better take another guess, Mr. Terhune."

CHAPTER XIV.

AN UNEXPECTED DEPARTURE.

"'Tis the mercy of God that you were not electrocuted on them wires!" Dennis averred, when McCarty told him the next day of the scientific experiment. "For what did he put you through the jumps if he did not expect you to show what you thought the same as the rest? 'Tis a marvellous thing, though, that Mr. Terhune with a bit of machinery could make you give yourself away like a black-hand informer, you that's as close-mouthed as the confessional!"

"Marvellous it may be, but we are no nearer the truth than we were before Terhune got together a lot of remarkable facts, including a motive, but he hasn't got the man!"

"Sure the motive points to Quimby, all right, and you knocked his alibi into a 'cocked hat!'" reminded the other. "That is a good step of the way."

"It is that! A good step in the wrong direction, if it's not the real motive at all, and a false alibi don't necessarily mean guilt. The whole thing don't hit me right, somehow. Money is a mighty poor excuse for murder, to my thinking. Now, I'd never murder you for your money, Denny——"

"If you did," interposed McCarty, equably, you'd be a disappointed lad, the day."

"But I might kill you McCarty pursued in a hot rage of jealousy or revenge, or fear, that you would maybe squeal on me about something."

Dennis betrayed symptoms of alarm.

"I'm no squealer," he affirmed. "And as for jealousy I've no interest in any woman, as you well know."

"I'm using you as a figure of speech, you mullet head! Money is an incentive to do most anything in this world, but rarely to kill, as the records of the department will show. That is, outside of hold-ups, and then it's accidental like. Even housebreakers caught turning a trick will run in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, before they'll shoot and take a chance of going to the chair.

"When I was on the force, we handled all kinds of murders, in the Eyetalian quarter to aristocratic killings in the best circles, and you can take it from me, Denny, when you get down to the motive there wasn't much difference. It don't matter whether you live up an alley or on the avenue if your blood is hot and some fellow steals your girl or gives you a rotten deal that you have got to get even for. Not five per cent. of the murders you come across are premeditated—you can bank on that; they are done when a fellow sees red, and can't think of anything but stark destruction."

"That's so. This brainstorm thing ain't just a lawyer's excuse," Dennis reflected.

"No more it is. Now take this Rowntree case. Does it look to you as if it had been planned ahead" asked McCarty.

"Well, if I'd made up my mind to put the girl out of the way I'd do it more private, I'm thinking, than to heave her out of the window and down in the middle of the street."

"Just so," McCarty nodded. "Terhune's a smart man, but he is so chuckf l of science he despises the brains that God gave him."

"'Tis thorough he is, for a fact."

"True for you! And so am I when there's a good reason, but I don't need a spyglass to tell me a coal hole is open in front of me! Now if this murder had been done by means of some new, outlandish invention, it would take some one up in those things to find out the truth, but it's as elementary as a Saturday night bar-room scrap."

"There's more behind it nor that, Mac," Dennis shook his head. "Do you mind that book that I told you about—the 'Darting D'ath,' it was——"

HEALS INFLAMED ITCHING SKIN

A Home Treatment Which Relieves and Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Itching Skin Diseases, and Leaves the Skin Soft, Smooth and Natural.

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 9.—As a means of allaying inflammation, relieving the dreadful itching and healing and curing itching skin diseases, ulcers, and eruptions, we believe that we can prove that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most potent preparation that it is possible to obtain.

So many extreme cases have been cured, so much intense and continued agony has been relieved, and such a host of people have volunteered their evidence in this regard that we challenge anyone to produce like endorsement for any Ointment or any preparation which is recommended for such diseases.

Dr. Chase's Ointment certainly stands alone, unapproached, and unrivalled as a healer of the skin, and positive cure for itching skin diseases. From pimples to eczema, from chilblains to ulcers, each and every form of itching skin disease have been cured by this great ointment.

Mrs. J. Chapman, 408 Dundas Street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I suffered greatly from an awful rash and irritation of the skin on my chest and back. It could not bear to touch it, and had to wear very loose clothing so nothing would rub against it. At night when I would lie down, I could get neither sleep nor rest. I tried different remedies and doctors' treatments, but never got any relief. At last my daughter advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I did so, and after the first application I was able to get the first night's good rest that I had for a long time. I continued using the Ointment until I was completely cured."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is known in almost every community. Ask your neighbours about it. There is probably a marked cure at your door which you can investigate. The cures made by this preparation will stand investigation. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

HINTS FOR PIE BAKERS.

The next time you bake pies, especially juicy pies, try adding a little cornstarch to the crust. One teaspoonful to a pie will prevent the undercrust from being heavy. Try mixing the sugar and flour and adding it to the fruit before putting your pie together. The pie will be more evenly sweetened and you will not bite into any lumps of flour. Do not stretch the crust tight. In pressing the edges together push the edge of the top crust toward the centre of the pie. This allows plenty of room for the fruit to cook and prevents the crust from bursting open and the juice escaping. Save an ounce of juice or an ounce of meat or potato.

The idea of a "tonic"
For baldness that is chronic
Is manifestly quite absurd.
But when your hair is falling
In quantities appalling,
There's hope in that reassuring word.

LABOR IS HIS JOY

Wealth Not Worth While, Declares Owner of a Gusher.

Riches, Minus Toil, Do Not Appeal to Man Whose Farm Is Saturated With Oil.

Two men were riding through one of the newly discovered oil fields of the Southwest. On each side of the train rose an ugly forest of derricks, covering the rolling prairie with an unnatural growth. The ground under those leafless timber trees was black with crude oil. Refuse oil was burning, and enormous clouds of black smoke rolled up into the sky.

Suddenly the train swept by a quarter-section farm that lay like a great white square between the bristling derricks and the black soil. The little farmhouse was surrounded by a cottonwood grove. Two men with a team at work, stacks of grain and alfalfa and a herd of quiet cattle completed the picture.

"Look!" one of the travelers exclaimed. "Isn't that queer! That must be a dry section!"

A man across the aisle who overheard spoke up:

"On the contrary, that quarter is perhaps the richest oil land in the field. See that one derrick close by the house? It was a gusher and ran more than eight hundred barrels a day. Philip Ross, his wife and two sons live on the White farm, as it is called. When the gusher was struck, Ross' older son rushed into the house with the news. Ross and his wife were there.

"'Father,' he cried, 'the oilmen say it's the biggest drill in the state! We can lease the whole farm for a million! Hurrah!'

"The father calmly looked at the son.

"'What of it?'

"'What of it! We are rich! We can go to New York or Chicago and live without working!'

"'Live without working?' said Ross. 'What sort of life is that?'

"They say Philip Ross brought his hand down on the kitchen table where he sat and said, 'Call in Duncan.' That is the younger son. Duncan came in, and the family sat there together.

"'I let the oilmen drill to test our farm because you boys asked it,' said Ross. 'The result will give us a million without a stroke of work. But it will ruin our quiet home and unfit us for life's real tasks. It has already spoiled scores of our neighbors, as you and mother know right well. I think too much of you boys to let you grow up with money you never really earned. We are healthy, and daily work is a joy. We can't afford to be rich.'

"He turned to his wife and said, 'Janet, thank God that we are able to work, and do not want to live without it.' And the wife and the boys bowed their heads while the sturdy old Scotchman prayed.

"The oilmen were frantic at his refusal to sell or lease. They offered fabulous prices. They threatened and tried to scare him into yielding. But the White farm is still there, and Ross and his wife and sons are working on it happily, surrounded by the forest of rigs and the black stretch of ruined prairie soil.

The train was again passing through the tangle of derricks and black soil. But in the memory of the two travelers the White farm dwelt, a picture of rare conscience and conviction and resistance to the prevalent desire to make a fortune and live without working.

There is no real life without working. When will Americans learn that lesson, and be content to live and work on the White farm?

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

JOURNALISM THE JAPAN WAY

One Publisher Finds Suppression of Sensational News Does Not Meet With Approval.

To ascertain the tastes of his readers with regard to sensational stories, according to the East and West News bureau, Motono Ekichchiro, editor of the Yomiuri, recently "held out" the story of the double suicide pact between the daughter of Count Yoshikawa, vice president of the privy council, and her chauffeur, with the result that the following day he was deluged with letters from indignant readers of his paper, many of them charging him with accepting bribes from the Yoshikawa family. Every other newspaper in Tokyo printed the story American fashion.

Ekichchiro based his action on a desire to protect the public from scandalous conduct. It is said the young editor is now convinced of the truth of the saying of the late Charles A. Dana that, "whatever the Almighty permits to happen is fit to print." To deny the insinuation that the Yoshikawa family paid him to leave out the story, he printed: "The Yoshikawa family at once engaged a press agent and supplied the paper with complete details of the affair."

He later indulged in a long article about the aims of a newspaper, admitting that his attitude was a daring one. He confessed that if he followed the advices of the very few readers who approved his course, "he would have no hope of continuing in business."

Still Owns Violet Shop.

In the French chamber of deputies the lawyers and doctors are most numerous; but one deputy is a veterinary, another is a news agent, another is a miner, another a comedian, another a tinsmith, another makes wooden shoes, another is a confectioner. Others are professors, and one, who represents Upper Garonne, is a dealer in violets. Time was—and it is a long time ago—when he sold those sweet and modest flowers over the counter in person. Now, with a modesty equal to that of the violet, he has withdrawn himself from so public a position. But he still owns a shop alongside the Hotel de la Poste in Toulouse, a shop where violets, and only violets, are sold.

Women, Prepare!

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send 10c for trial package to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont.—"When I reached the critical period I was a nervous wreck and suffered with hot flashes and dizzy spells. 'Favorite Prescription' relieved me of all these ailments and brought me through this trying time safely. For woman of middle age there is no tonic equal to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and I never hesitate to recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Annie Soules, 41 Hess St. N.

Stratford, Ont.—"I was greatly benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; it was before twins came. I had become all run-down, was nauseated, very nervous and weak, and suffered with backache. Was not able to do anything for three months, when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' It soon gave me relief and it was not long when I was strong and healthy. 'Favorite Prescription' was surely a great help to me and I am glad to recommend it."—Mrs. L. J. Mantle, 61 East Lane.

Announcing the new bigger Comfort bar

The Comfort Soap bar is now much larger. It's the same soap absolutely, but we are giving you a bigger bar for the same money. We do this because we are withdrawing all premiums as it is now impossible to get satisfactory premium goods owing to the war.

No Premiums -but more Soap

Dozens of factories from which we used to buy premiums are now making more necessary war supplies. Others again cannot ship, being across the ocean. The new premiums being offered us are away under Comfort Soap standards so when our present stock is exhausted we will not issue any more—certainly not until after the war.

But we can still buy the splendid materials that go into Comfort Soap, so we have decided to make the Comfort bar materially bigger, right away. There's where we can give you the same, old splendid-quality soap—only more of it.

We can't give you good Premiums but we can make it up to you in Soap.

All Comfort wrappers now out in the stores will be redeemed as heretofore but the wrapper on the new big Comfort bar will not be good for premiums.

You will meet the bigger Comfort bar any day now at your grocer's. Give it a friendly reception. It means more value in the wash tub. For a while yet you may be getting the old bar—it's just as valuable, the wrapper being still good for premiums.

WILL USE HORSE CHESTNUTS

Heretofore Ignored, Well-Known Nut Is to Have Place With Other War Munitions.

"Horse chestnuts for munitions." It is a sober headline in the English papers. Hooray for the horse chestnut! but they are not going to shoot it at the Germans, declares the Boston Transcript. The horse chestnut crop is being harvested in England under the orders of the "director of propellant supplies"—direful title!—for use in the place of large quantities of grain used in connection with munitions, which grain is hereby released for use as food.

We are not told just how this released grain has been used in the manufacture of munitions. That would be giving information to the enemy. But in any case, horse chestnuts will do the business, and all England is put at work by government circular collecting them. Collection will be carried out by local committees formed in connection with the schools. It is particularly requested that nuts should not be gathered until they are fully ripe, so unripe nuts are of no value for the purpose.

Let us be glad that a patriotic use has been found for the horse chestnut. Heretofore it has been available only for purposes of juvenile ornamentation, or, when carried in the right-hand trousers pocket, for adult rheumatism. Not even pigs will eat horse chestnuts. But how many millions of them could easily be gathered in New England! Do you want the New England horse chestnut crop, Mr. Baker? If so, you have only to ask for it.

An Indian Turkish Bath.

The Indians made a Turkish bath. Of course they did not call it that, but it amounted to the same thing, in this fashion. They built a round-topped hut about five feet across and five high, covered with blankets. At one side a small pit was dug.

Stones were heated in a fire near by and put into this pit. The bather went inside with a vessel of water and something to dip it with. By poring the water on the hot stones he could fill the hut with steam, the more water the more steam. Herbs and aromatic leaves were sometimes put upon the stones to make the bath more effective.

Patience without push is not a virtue but a vice.

Not So Fierce.

The class had been studying about the house fly, says Good Health, and the teacher had made much of the danger with which the germ-carrying habits of the insect threaten the public health. The lesson sank deep into the mind of little George, who later was asked to write a composition on the subject. "The fly is a insec," he wrote with difficulty; "he has six legs, he is more dangerous than a lion, but I had rather a fly would bite me than a lion."

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughnes of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

MR. HANNA FOR PERU.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, who resigned the office of the Food Controller recently, will leave for Peru this week for the purpose of adjusting some matters between the International Petroleum Corporation and the Peruvian Government. Mr. Hanna is a director of the International Petroleum Corporation, which produces a considerable amount of crude oil in Peru.

Famine to Follow War.

"After the war the world will be weary, cold, and hungry, and if we are to avoid famine and revolution something will have to be done at once," said Sidney Webb, a political economist, in a speech at the London School of Economics. He asserted that peace would come suddenly and unexpectedly and then the world would be forced to face a great shortage, signs of which were already visible.

The wheat stocks of the world, he said, had been reduced to the smallest amount ever known and there would be a shortage of one pound of meat a day to each person. Flocks and herds all the world over would be much diminished. Even the pig was rapidly disappearing. Metals, coal, timber, hides, and leather and all building materials would be at famine scarcity.

One-eighth of the world's population, he declared, was engaged in non-productive work. The economy that could be set up against that was very small.

There would be a long interval between demobilization and the repairing of the devastation and waste. During that interval there would be unemployment in all the countries, causing an unproductiveness that would mean rather a money famine than a food famine.

"We should now be making preparations to revictual the world if we are to avoid a shortage developing into a famine," said Mr. Webb.

One Year to Travel 25 Miles.

Rudolph Manderson, chief of the Southern party of Stefensson arctic expedition, has received a letter from Rev. H. Girling, Emanuel, Saskatoon, who for the last three years has been trying to reach the so-called blond Eskimos. The little boat in which three missionaries comprising the party were traveling was blown up by an explosion last spring, and they lost the greater part of their supplies. In a year's time the party had succeeded in traveling only 25 miles along the coast, so great were the difficulties experienced.

The

Nationalization of American Railways

THE action of the United States Government in taking over the control of the railway systems of that country emphasizes the advantage of being a daily reader of THE GLOBE. Through its exclusive arrangement with The New York Times, this action of international moment was forecasted in The Times and THE GLOBE the day before the official announcement was made.

CANADIANS have always shown a lively interest in American affairs, but never more than now, when Uncle Sam is speeding up for the war.

THROUGH THE GLOBE'S enterprise, the citizen of Canada lives as close to the American news of the day as the man in Washington or New York, for THE GLOBE'S American news service is complete and almost instantaneous.

In Canada

The nationalization of Canadian railways has been persistently advocated by THE GLOBE, through its editorial columns and special articles by experts.

REBELS TAKE YANGTSE CITY.

Peking. — Yochow, the strategic key to the Upper Yangtse-kiang, has been captured by the Southern revolutionists, according to a report from Hankow.

It is believed here that the activity of the revolutionists brought about the southern journey of Acting President Feng Kuo-chang, nad that he will make an effort to effect a compromise on the basis of reconvening the old Parliament. Feng Kuo-chang is expected to arrive in Nanking today.

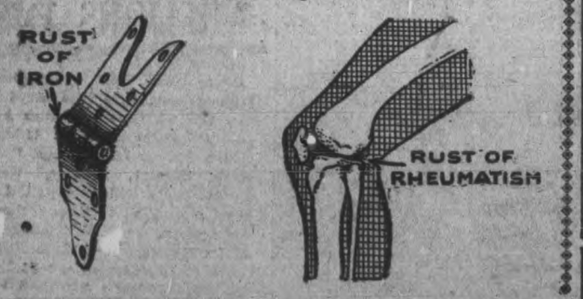
DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast



Just as coal when it burns leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it contin es to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism, or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means of magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug-store, but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of lime phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity.

STARS IN BASEBALL.

They Are Really Essential to the Success of a Club.

It is absolutely necessary for each and every major league club to have at least one unusually brilliant performer on its roster to be a good gate attraction, and more often than not these stars are pitchers.

Remember the Chicago White Sox of 1906? Ed Walsh was the star who did most to place that team in baseball history, though he received not a little assistance from Doc White. Who made the Giants of a few years ago the most talked of team in baseball? Why, Christy Mathewson, to be sure. He was a star of stars, and in fair or foul weather it was he whom the rooters paid to see. Plank, Coombs and Bender did more to make the Athletics famous than did all of the other great players on the team put together, though the $100,000 infield, consisting of McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker, was a first class attraction in every sense of the word. But few other clubs in the game's history ever had anything approaching this evenly balanced outfit in its best days.

Bill James in his time came pretty close to making the Braves, and Bill Donovan, Ed Reulbach, Mordecai Brown, Babe Adams, Joe Wood and Grover Alexander all have played leading roles as gate attractions.

What would the Senators have been for years without Walter Johnson? Is it the Tigers or Ty Cobb whom the fans want to see at play? Hal Chase featured the Yankees for years, for many seasons Speaker has been the leading figure with the teams with which he played, and Joe Jackson, Marquard and Lajoie all had large individual followings.

Today a new crop of stars has just about "arrived" and are pulling the crowds.

Soldiers' Chance of Life.

If you, a drafted man, believe that statistics tell the truth, you will feel as safe in France as you usually do in the streets of New York. So says Roger W. Babson, the eminent statistician, according to Popular Science Monthly. Furthermore, he says that the man who is connected with the heavy field artillery is no more likely to be killed than one in the employ of a railroad. However, he does not hold out such high hopes for the lieutenants, sergeants and corporals, the death rate being very much greater among officers than among privates. Also, the mortality is higher among volunteer corps than among drafted men. Sixty men per thousand are now being killed in the war, and about 150 men out of each thousand are wounded.

Beauty and Good Digestion Go Hand in Hand. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Insure Both.

Ugh! Heartburn; sour risings, gas, rumblings, then coated tongue, restless nights, corners of the mouth drawn, a haggard expression and a ruined complexion.

You need something in your stomach to supply the digestive juices which are scanty and to give power to the weak gastric juices. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing.

They actually digest your food for you. Besides, they increase the flow of gastric juice, just what you need to get all the good possible out of everything you eat. You will never have that "lump of lead" in your stomach. Then everything you eat will be digested, it will give you strength, vim, energy and a rosy disposition. You'll feel good all around your waistline after every meal and it will make you feel good all over.

Peril Far More Acute, In the Napoleonic Wars, Says Oxford Professor

DR. C. H. FIRTH, Regius Professor of Modern History at the University of Oxford, recently spoke on "England During the Napoleonic War—an Historical Parallel."

Professor Firth said that the events, incidents, and speeches of the last three years had recalled to his mind repeatedly the resemblances and the differences between the present war and the Napoleonic war. He thought that we could derive from the past comfort for the present. Then we concluded a precarious peace. In 1803 we were in a better position, both for attack and defence, than we were in 1793, but in 1803 we no longer had any allies. Our former allies were then neutral. The French navy had been destroyed, and in 1803 and 1804, owing to the miscalculations of Napoleon, the danger of invasion was not serious. It became a real danger in 1805, when Napoleon aimed at becoming master of the channel, but that danger also passed. On the other hand, the war on land went steadily against us. The years 1807 to 1812 were the critical period of the struggle, but it was noticeable that contemporary utterances indicated rather doubt concerning the capacity of our rulers than the fear of the enemy. In those days there was no party truce, and no Ministry enjoyed the full confidence of the country. Carping criticisms and pessimistic prophecies were continually heard in both Houses of Parliament, and as regularly reproduced by Napoleon in Le Moniteur.

Of the revenue derived from taxation to-day three-quarters was obtained by direct taxation, but a hundred years ago it was the reverse. Again, during the Napoleonic war we had to import less than three weeks' wheat supply, and at present we had to import 40 weeks' wheat supply. Napoleon's object in establishing his Continental blockade was not to starve us, but to prevent us from obtaining money to carry on the war by closing our markets.

In conclusion, Dr. Firth said there were fiercer extremes of good and evil in that war than we had experienced so far in this. We had fought for just over three years. Our ancestors did not lay down their arms for 21 years. If we equalled the effort that they made we should not be doing badly.

Hon. H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education, in moving the vote of thanks to the lecturer, said that in the time of Pitt the peril was far more acute than it had been in this war, except in the first weeks, when the superb achievement of Lord French, which had never been adequately recognized, saved us. Yet, the repose of English society then was far more profound than it was to-day, and that in spite of the additional fact that, while to-day wealth was more equally distributed, and the working classes were more prosperous than ever before, the reverse was the case in the time of Pitt, when the conditions were well calculated to drive the people to revolution. For every member of Parliament who, in the days of Pitt, was adequately instructed in the A B C of politics, there were 20 now. In one respect there had been litle change—the temper of the Prussian people was the same then as it is now. In 1813 a Prussian writer advocated the destruction of Rheims cathedral. It had been reserved to the Prussians of to-day to give effect to the suggestion.

Head Candidates' Bumps.

A proposal that all candidates for Parliament should submit to examination by a phrenologist and "have their bumps told," is one of the features of the annual report of the British Phrenological Society.

"The state's need o phrenology is evident in nearly every department of government administration," said one of the speakers at the convention. "Particularly in the election of members of Parliament, it seems to us that the best-fitted candidates, according to the formation of his head and the volume and quality of his brains, is not always elected. A phrenological examination of all candidates would save an immense amount of unnecessary misunderstanding, blundering and expense.

"The system which we propose was tried on some candidates for the Brighton Town Council recently with satisfactory results. Phrenology should be utilized in this way in every town and city.

"We have heard a good deal lately in political circles about brain efficiency,' but it has all been talk, because the authorities have no scientific formula by which they can calculate a candidate's brain capacity or his intellectual grip and ability, nor will they ever have it until they call us phrenologists to their assistance.

"Cabinet ministers ought to be all selected according to the formation of their heads, and not merely upon personal influence, credentials, or reputation.

"Phrenology ought to be taught in our schools—instead of German."

Changes in Belfast.

It is changed times indeed in Belfast, the Ulster Belfast. Four years ago it would have been a hardy man indeed who would have so much as mentioned Joseph Devlin, on the Shankhill, or Captain Craig, in the Falls Road. And yet, to-day, Joseph Devlin and Captain, now Colonel, Craig, work side by side on special government tasks in Belfast. And Colonel Craig may take a walk down the Falls Road, and find himself as welcome as Joseph Devlin would surely be on the Shankhill. Other times, other manners, once again.

Japan's Rice Lands.

Whatever has been said at one time or another about mudholes, it has remained for Arthur F. Killick (Fatty Lewis) to define one. Says Killick: "A mudhole is a body of water, irregular in size and shape, that failed to get from one side of the road to the other."—Kansas City Times.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

THE BRITISH TRANSPORT TUSCANIA SUNK WITH HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE

Three Hundred United States Troops Drowned When Troopship Goes to the Bottom Off the Coast of Ireland---Opening of the Long-Expected Drive Against American Transport Service.

MEN FROM SCATTERED UNITS

WASHINGTON FEB. 7 th. British Transport Tuscania 14,000 tons conveyed by British Warships was Sunk of the Coast of Ireland and Three Hundred United States Troops Were Drowned.

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The sinking of the United States' Troopship Tuscania, with a loss of 300 American soldiers, has marked the opening of the long expected U-boat drive against the increasing lines of United States' troops being sent to the French front—and Germany's greatest stroke of war against this country. The Tuscania, which was a British Cunarder pressed into the transport service for the American War Department, carried scattered units of headquarters and companies D.E.F., of the 20th Engineers, 107th Military Police, 107th Supply Trains, 100th, 15th and 23ist Aero Squads and Replacement Detachment, and 51 unassigned officers of the 32nd Division. The last included Michigan and Wisconsin National Guardsmen and Regular Army Engineers. The Twentieth Engineers are foresters recruited for pioneer and communication work behind the battle lines. The regiment is the largest in the service and its members are drawn from every National Guard and National Army Division as well as from the Regular Army and general recruiting channels. The troops have been in training for their special work at the University at Washington. A large number of College men, including experts in forestry, are in the regiment. The aero squadrons were drawn from the various divisions. The remaining troops, comprising more than two-thirds of those on board, were Michigan and Wisconsin Guardsmen. The 107th Engineers Train was composed of former First Battalion of Michigan Engineers and 107th Military Police was drawn from the Fourth and Sixth Wisconsin Infantry. The 107th Supply Train was drawn from the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Wisconsin Infantry.

SURVIVORS TAKEN TO BELFAST.

The report from the War Department pointed out that the Tuscania was a British steamship and not an American transport. This was taken to mean that the recent agreement of the British to put all shipping facilities possible at the disposal of the United States for carrying soldiers, munitions and supplies, already has been put into effect. Reports that the survivors were being taken to Belfast, led to the supposition that the Tuscania was bound for Liverpool by way of the North Irish Coast. It was suggested by officials that the rough seas may have separated the vessel from its convoy. Fear that the survivors may be suffering acutely from exposure is thought to have prompted the American Embassy at London and Belfast officials to hasten plans for the immediate relief of troops on their arrival at the Irish port. It was a grim coincidence that the news of the Tuscania disaster would follow rapidly on the heels of a statement by Secretary of the Navy Daniels that "the war against the U boat is being won." It also followed the announcement in London that the United States is waging a "successful" campaign against the U boat "with new devices." Owing to the fact that the Tuscania was a British ship, it is believed the United States Navy did not have vessels in her convoy. The first word of attack indicated a thousand Americans had been lost, reached here late last night.

MAY HAVE BEEN A FIGHT.

Secretary Baker and Secretary Daniels were both in their offices when the news came in. It was held up for some time in the hope that later advices would show a great number of survivors. President Wilson was at the theatre when news broke over the city. Shouted extras announcing a heavy toll in American lives reached him as he was in the Foyer with Mrs. Wilson.

Reaching the White House he called both Baker and Daniels for a full account of the disaster. The fact that the transport was under convoy leads to the belief here that a sharp fight with the enemy may have occurred before or after the Tuscania received her death blow. Great preparations had been made for German assault on transports for some time. Lord Northcliffe warned of German preparations several months ago. Early last week army officials here anticipated concerted U boat effort when the Germans withdrew their submarines for refitting. Last Monday Secretary Baker, in his weekly review, declared that the drive against Pershing's transports was impending.

A LATER REPORT.

LONDON, Feb. 7.— Admiralty reports this morning the loss of United States' soldiers in the sinking of the Tuscania at about 210, and the rescued, including 78 military officers, about 1,935 men. Several officers and men of the crew were lost.

Hogs were sold at $18.75, fed and watered, though quotations are still purely nominal.

Speeding Up In United States In Every Direction

War Preparations Being Made on Immense Scale For Six Years—Appropriations Will Be on Lavish Basis, It Is Announced

SHARP MEASURES FOR ALIENS NOW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The United States to-day is developing its greatest punch of the war. Americans are now pitted, man to man, against the Germans along a section of the Lorraine front, meeting steel with steel.

The Allied Council at Versailles has rounded out a definite plan of co-operation by which the American and Allied war chiefs will meet von Hertling's "peace camouflage" with the thunder of ever-increasing guns.

To-day throughout the nation this Government is registering aliens—names, ancestry, business, thumbprints, etc., as a precautionary measure preliminary to what is to be the crucial effort in the great war.

There are to be no half-way measures. The President has decided that on whichever side the greatest effort this made this year victory will fall. (Neutrals may expect sharp measures when they are deemed vital to this country's success.

New evidence of grim determination to end the struggle in 1918 or soon after by making a herculean effort this year is manifest on all sides. Once more it is felt the developments have swung back out of the hands of diplomats and into the hands of the military.

The Allied War Council has said in answering to Hertling:

"Until you come from behind your mask we must go ahead."

And working to that end complete agreement is reported on plans for the conduct of the war. The military chiefs of the United States and the Allies will be given wide authority to act without delaying any vital move for reference to and approval by home Governments.

The casualty lists of American dying on the field of battle has brought home to this country the realization that our participation in the war is now in deadly earnest.

More and more men are to be sent across. And while thus far fortune has remained at the side of the transports, officials point out that any day may see one lost, the victim of a U-boat that has eluded the American guard.

The Kaiser's papers have scoffed at the American soldier. They have laughed at our officers, "men upon whom," they say, "Secretary Baker has sewed epaulets." But these men, after months of patient training, are answering the German fire in front line trenches with guns today.

Ships Continue Pressing Need.

It is now deemed unlikely America can contribute more than 3,000,000 tons of shipping this year, although Mr. Hurley, chairman of the Shipping Board, is still confident of five million tons.

The shipping lack, however, has compelled sharp measures with neutrals. Already Holland has agreed to turn over a percentage of all of her cargoes to Belgium relief supplies that other ships may be released from this work. Negotiations are pending with Spain to insure safe shipment and delivery across her borders of other supplies needed by the American army in France. Pending adjustment of this, Spanish ships continue held up in American harbours.

The American embargo will be employed ruthlessly when needed. The great punch must be developed this year. President Wilson says. America will turn every weapon to accomplishment of this end.

The Allies are calling for more ships. The best of the first draft will be summoned to camp by February 15, it is planned to-day, and the next draft will be called when facilities at the training camps are such as to permit a new influx; in other words, when the first men drafted have been sent across in such numbers as to permit the entrance of more.

Planning For Six Year War.

The measures that will provide the vast amount of money needed for America's war work during the next fiscal year are being framed on the basis of the war lasting six years.

A lot of them were fishing close to a railway bridge when suddenly a lad of the party lost his balance and fell into the river. Immediately an old fisherman standing by threw off his coat, plunged into the stream, and after a struggle brought the boy safe to land.

"Noble individual!" cried a gentleman who was passing by at the time of the accident. "Generous preserver!" But for thy timely help yon poor boy's spirit would now be in the land of——"

"Stow that, guv'nor!" interrupted the old fisherman. "I didn't care nuffin' 'bout the boy. But the young beggar has 'got all the bait in his trousers pocket."

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. "THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"In the detective stories you improve your mind with, Denny, my lad, where the stunt is pulled off by the pinprick of one poison nobody ever heard of, or the bite of a foreign bug that has never been classified; I have no doubt it takes as much machinery to prove it as would run a boiler factory. In this case it was black rage and a fist that shoved her through the open window into eternity. The job now is not to find the motive behind the crime but the man behind that fist, and Terhune will not be doing it with a microscope and chemicals nor yet with a doctor sheet or recorded emotions."

"And after the help you were to him yesterday, Mac, I don't think he will include you in any more seances" —Dennis grinned—"or be trailing you along with him in the investigation, either."

"Small blame to him," admitted the other. "But for all that, Denny, I've made up my mind to be in at the finish. The game has got me, and I'm feeling the old thrill of the hunt as if I was still on the force. The way this thing landed in fro t of me, so to speak, as if it was a dare to me to try my hand again, makes me bound to see it through."

"I knew that from the start!" Dennis spoke with immense satisfaction. "But without Terhune—"

"I don't want to be on this with him," interrupted McCarty. "He's a great man, with a grand reputation he is well entitled to, but with all due respect to him he's got his way of working and I have mine, and they are no manner of means the same. I want to go it alone."

"But don't forget, Mac, you're no longer on the force, and you can't butt in."

"Can't I?" McCarty triumphantly produced a folded paper and displayed it before his friend. "Inspector Druet asked me the night this thing happened why I did not take up the work again so I had a little talk with him to-day, and then saw the commissioner. I'm a special officer, Denny, detailed to rubber around all I've a mind to and report results when I see fit.

"Terhune has full charge of the case, of course, but I'll take good care he does not run into me till I've hold of something that will be useful to him. He'll not kick then, and if he should, the commissioner can tell him I'm just a tiresome old has-been that was given papers to get me out from under foot."

"Well, it's glad I'm to see you back where you belong, once more, Mac!" Dennis's voice was roughened with feeling as they shook hands solemnly. "And now, Special Officer McCarty, what are you going to do?"

"Swear in a deputy named Riordan, and take him along with me to look over the ground," returned McCarty, with studied carelessness.

"That is, unless he's wishful to take a nap!"

"One second till I get my coat!" Dennis jumped excitedly to his feet. "And you wasting an hour here with your palaver. I've only been waiting a chance to have a look in on this myself!"

On their way to the Glamorgan, Dennis ventured a remark concerning the record slips the others had made of their impressions the night before the test, and voiced a desire to see them.

"You can," McCarty assured him. "I have copies of all of them at home. I got Terhune to give them to me after he had calmed down a little from the shock of having his scheme go back on him. We'll look them over the first chance that we get. It's different evidence I'm after now."

A word with the superintendent on arrival put them in possession of the key to Mrs. Doremus's apartment. Within everything was in confusion, as when McCarty had last seen it in company with Wade Terhune. Evidently Mrs. Doremus and her maid had taken only a few bags containing immediate necessities in their removal to the hotel, although trunks and barrels half filled with china and ornaments, and pictures stacked against the wall bore testimony to the wholesale departure planned.

The cook's bed room was quite bare of any personal belongings. Not even a torn envelope rewarded their search, but in the room which had been occupied by Mary there were traces of hasty and indiscriminate packing, a scattered disarray of garments, and the bed and chairs were similarly littered.

"Look here, Denny!" McCarty dived in the closet and reappeared with an armful of costly gowns, frothing with laces and heavy with spangled sequins. "These don't seem like the clothes of a servant girl, do they?"

He laid them out on the bed, and Dennis examined them gingerly.

"They do not," he agreed. "I'm not up in the fashions, Mac; but any one can tell with half an eye that she wouldn't be able to pay for one of them with a year's wages. Do you suppose she stole them?"

"Not she! Mrs. Doremus gave them to her. They're almost new, too; not a speck on them; and no lady would be giving her clothes away like that if she didn't have to. It is not bribery, I don't know what it is. You'd think there'd be letters around, wouldn't you? There's not even a postal card."

"Maybe she's locked them up." Dennis's eyes were on a large, square trunk under the window. "I wonder what she has got in there?"

McCarty tried the lid but it was securely fastened down.

"We'll soon see!" he remarked. "'Tis in the name of the law, Denny. Hand me that button hook."

The lock yielded to expert persuasion but the top tray displayed only a confusion of collars, undergarments, and bits of ribbon. McCarty lifted it out and laid it across a chair, and Dennis gave an excited grunt.

"Letters all right, a whole slue of them. And what's this" He unrolled a small package wrapped tightly in an old silk blouse and came upon a small Morocco jeweler's case. Within a diamond brooch of exquisite workmanship glistened up at them as the facets of its flawless stones caught the light.

"Holy saints!" gasped Dennis. "More bribery, do you think?"

"Not this time!" responded McCarty grimly. "I learned a bit about diamonds in that big jewel robbery, and this pin is worth a couple of thousand if it is worth a cent. I guess we have got hold of something now that will put Mary out of the way for some time to come. I'll just keep this until I've found out one or two things that's bothering me, and then I'll turn it over to Terhune."

"You're not going to see it through yourself Mac?" There was regret in Dennis's tone.

"No. This is Terhune's lay. He's after Mary and Mrs. Doremus, and the man behind the cabinet. I'm after the man that killed Marion Rowntree; and in spite of the motive and the alibi, I don't think it will prove to be her stepfather, though who it is I've not an idea."

The letters disclosed nothing being for the most part laboriously scrawled missives of a sentimental nature, but upon the back of an envelope some figures had been jotted down.

"Ten," read McCarty. "Twenty-five, a hundred, fifty, five hundred! And dollar signs! Phew! Six hundred and eighty-five dollars. That's quite a jump from the first ten. I guess I'll just keep this envelope, too."

"Here's a little old bank-book," announced Dennis, who had been rummaging industriously. "The accounts have been torn out of it, but there's a lot of writing, sentences like, all jumbled together."

"Let me see it." McCarty had slipped the envelope in his pocket and turned. "It is sentences. Why, it looks as if someone had been taking down a conversation word for word. Listen:

"But I don't see why we should wait till August. I've waited two years, S., and I am tired. So am I. Of me, you mean. After all I have sacrificed? Oh, no, don't be foolish. But we must go slow. Remember I never promised. No? I fancy your letters won't bear out that statement."

And here again on the next page:

"I tell you I will, but there's no use hounding me now. I'm in too deep as it is, in something you know nothing about and there is only one way out that I can see. You may hear something that will surprise you, soon."

"They're dated, too. The first is June 22nd, and the last is July 8th, and there are a lot more entries before those two. Denny, the girl has gone in for blackmail, all right, and she has listened and written down what might be useful to her. They must be things she's heard pass between Mrs. Doremus and the man, and maybe that sum on the back of the envelope is what she's got out of them already."

They searched energetically, but the trunk gave up no further secrets, nor did Mrs. Doremus's room to which they presently passed, yield anything whatever of a private nature. The pigeonholes of the dainty desk in the living room contained only receipted bills and circulars and the drawer disclosed nothing but household accounts.

"She's more clever than Mary, for all her flightiness," remarked McCarty. "I guess there's nothing else here. We had better be going on up stairs, Denny. I want a word with Mrs. Grafton Foxe."

A frowsy negro maid, with a cap askew and a soiled apron admitted them and promptly became incoherent when McCarty revealed his identity and errand. As he stood parleying with her a door at the end of the hall opened, and Mrs. Foxe appeared.

"What is it? Oh!" She recognised McCarty. "Did you want to see Mr. Foxe He's not here."

"Well, ma'am, it will do just the same if we can talk with you." McCarty smiled ingratiatingly. "You've been put to a lot of bother, I know, over this case, but I won't keep you long. This is Deputy Riordan."

She nodded, and Dennis flushed a bright pink as he bowed.

"Come in, then. I wasn't expecting anybody——" She glanced down at her gorgeous but frayed kimono. "Indeed, I thought that after the test last night he would be left in peace."

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

WHY RUSSIA WANTS REPUBLIC

Any Other Form of Government Would Present Many Difficulties, If Not Impossible.

A last point to which I wish to call attention is that from the first hour of the revolution the republican idea made extraordinary progress in the minds of all classes, writes "Captain X" in Scribner's. I live among Russians and could therefore watch its growth day by day. Men of letters and men of business, merchants, financiers, lawyers, professors—I saw them, one after another, come to the same way of thinking. For the first weeks it seemed impossible to many of a conservative turn of mind that there should be a Russian republic. They said:

"Our country is not ripe for one. Think of all the hard experiences which you French went through before the republic was really at home in France, and yet your people are highly developed, while ours are not." And so on. These same men have now come round, little by little, to the republican idea. One reason is that any other form of government would present many difficulties, if, indeed, it is not impossible. The Romanoff dynasty is discredited, to say the least; it is not conceivable that it should be reinstated, and there are no other available aspirants to the throne, even supposing that the nation wished to return to a monarchy.

Anyone who feels inclined to pronounce judgment upon the Russian revolution should bear this in mind; the old regime was so detestable that any new one, even if far from perfect, cannot be worse. From the military point of view, which is of course what is most interesting to Russia's allies, the former system, or want of it, had so disorganized the whole country that it was becoming more and more difficult to carry on the war. It is hard to see how now either the Russians or we of the allies can suffer by the change, because what has been thrown away was absolutely worthless. That should always be in our minds when we are inclined to criticize Russia, in order that we may keep our proper mental perspective and see things as they really are.

MEN KNITTING FOR SOLDIERS

Show Remarkable Ability at Clicking the Long Needles—One an Expert at Tatting.

The art of knitting has long been considered exclusively a feminine accomplishment, but the theory that man has not patience or inclination to spend his leisure hours in clicking the needles has been exploded in California, where wonders never cease.

A dispatch from Red Bluff, Tehama county, records that Gorham King, manager of a department store there, has almost completed his first knitted set, consisting of a sweater, muffler wristlets and a pair of socks, for some soldier in France.

King spent his vacation at Moonstone Beach, and there he learned to knit in an effort to forestall a threatened nervous breakdown. His sister and mother have vouched for his proficiency in the art, and say, besides, that knitting has cured him of much of his nervousness. It is no uncommon sight, say the natives of Red Bluff, to see him drop his work at the store and sit down for a "spell" at knitting.

W. F. Baird, assistant cashier of a bank at Woodland, Cal., is another convert. He is said to have won the plaudits of the fair ones in that city since his wife disclosed the fact that "Will is the best tatter in Woodland." With knitting now in vogue it develops that the banker has also mastered that art. Baird is widely known in baseball circles.

Oldest Bank in Spain.

England has been the banking nation of the world for many years, and London, until very recently, was the world's financial center. That honor for more than a year has devolved upon New York. The first bank in England was established by Francis Child, a London goldsmith, who died October 4, 1713. This pioneer financial institution was opened in 1663, and a number of rival goldsmiths soon opened similar concerns. The mint in the Tower of London had been the depository for the cash of the merchants until Charles I seized the money as a loan. Then the traders began to deposit their cash with goldsmiths in Lombard street. The first bank in the world was established in Italy in 808 by Lombard Jews. The oldest existing bank is the Bank of Barcelona, Spain, which was founded in 1401.

Gigantic Task of British Navy

WHEN Lord Salisbury traded the island of Heligoland to Germany, it may be at the suggestion of Queen Victoria, he made the present war possible. If this rock had remained in our possession Germany would never have run the risk of fighting Great Britain. The island is some 30 miles from the German naval bases, and in British hands would command them. Possibly, if the island had remained British, Germany would have chosen some other port than Wilhelmshaven as her chief naval base, but this would have entailed grave disadvantages. Today this tiny island, about one square mile in area and rising to a height of 200 feet above sea level, is priceless to Germany, for it is not only powerfully fortified, but it and an adjoining sandbank have been made into a harbor and shelter for submarines, destroyers, light cruisers, zeppelins, and aeroplanes. The nearby waters are shallow enough to be effectively mined to the coast and make it absolutely impossible for enemy vessels to pass except at considerable loss. Undoubtedly one of the terms of peace will be that Germany shall lose possession of Heligoland.

This island and others along the coast give Germany a great advantage in the war game against Great Britain. Writing in the New York Tribune, Mr. Gherardi Davis says that the guns on Heligoland would be exceedingly difficult for hostile ships to deal with. On the other hand, there are no such flanking islands on the British coasts which are exposed to German attack, and the configuration of long stretches of the English coast makes it impossible to be successfully protected by mines. Thus, if German cruisers choose to take the risk of encountering British fighting ships they need not fear mines in a dash to bombard certain English coast towns, especially those that are not adjacent to military ports. It is true that there are thousands, perhaps millions, of mines laid by the British in the North Sea, but they are in certain zones, and not turned lose promiscuously. If these particular safe channels are known to Swedish and Dutch sea captains, there is not the slightest reason to suppose they are not equally well known to German naval chiefs.

Why the Germans have not done more bombarding of the undefended English towns is not clear to Mr. Davis, unless, as he supposes, German losses in the Jutland fight seriously reduced her supply of vessels suitable for these attacks. He notes the tremendously more difficult work that has fallen upon the British navy compared with the duties of the German navy. The latter are comprised almost exclusively in the words "safety first." The chief business of the German navy is to keep from being sunk; the duty of the British navy is to keep the North Sea clear. English mine-sweepers, patrol vessels, destroyers, and light cruisers are constantly on duty well off shore toward Germany, and even the battleships are at sea. They are not protecting British coasts by hugging them! they go as near the German navy as the mine fields will permit. Only on one occasion was the whole German fleet out, and then followed the Jutland battle, about which controversy continues to rage, the Northcliffe press, for example, considering the result as unsatisfactory to Britain.

Mr. Davis does not pass judgment on this fight, but remarks that "on every occasion where the Germans have met the English on even fairly equal terms, the Germans have never fought it out." There seems to be no doubt that their conception of the average British naval commander is that of a bull-headed fighter whose sole ambition is to get next a German ship and throw out his grappling-irons. They hope that this blind fighting spirit will lure British ships over carefully-planted mine-fields and that their destruction will follow. There is in England a certain school of patriots who insists that it is the business of the British navy to assume the offensive, to "dig them out like rats," as Winston Churchill said. They regard the matter much as though it were a question of a terrier drawing a badger, whereas the situation is as though the terrier were obliged to crawl for a hundred yards through a lethal chamber before he met the badger.

Mr. Davis points out that while the British have had command of the sea since the beginning of the war, the entry of the American navy not making that command more absolute yet it has been warmly welcomed by the British. The British navy has kept sleepless vigil in the North Sea for more than three years. The mental strain has been terrific; the material strain has been great. Many of the British destroyers must have become pretty well worn out in the past three years. Undoubtedly the British navy will have an easier job now that Admiral Sims is there. The strain will be relaxed. As far as the German navy is concerned, Mr. Davis believes the mental pressure must be increasing. The submarine campaign, and the secrecy surrounding it, has sent many a German sailor mad. The long inaction of Germany's major ships must have seriously undermined the morale of the crews and will tend to make them nervous and fearful on the rare occasions when one of the larger ships ventures into the open sea. Should ever there come "der tag" on which the whole German fleet steams forth it will be manned by crews whose morale has been enfeebled by inaction that must by this time have become an established habit.

The Mutual Life
Assurance Company of Canada
48th Annual Report

The following is a summary of the forty-eighth Annual Report submitted to the policyholders at the annual meeting, held at the Head Office, Waterloo, Thursday, February 7th, 1918.

SUMMARY STATEMENT

Income	$ 6,424,515	Gain over 1916	$ 811,242
Paid to Policyholders	2,513,991	Increase over 1916	57,384
Assets	32,165,432	Gain over 1916	2,803,469
Surplus	4,763,400	Gain over 1916	168,249
New Assurances	20,124,563	Gain over 1916	4,748,186
Assurances in Force	123,510,899	Gain over 1916	13,865,318

THE YEAR'S OPERATIONS

The inherent strength and solidity of the Company has again been demonstrated by the results of its operations during the past year. For, notwithstanding the burden imposed by the war, the surplus fund has increased to $4,763,399.68.

EXPANSION OF BUSINESS

One outstanding feature of the year was the large increase in new business. The total new assurances placed on the books was $20,124,563, an amount which is over 30 per cent. greater than for the preceding year.

STABILITY OF THE BUSINESS

Another very favorable feature is disclosed by the unusually low rate of termination of assurances through lapsation and surrender. Both of these items show a decrease, thus excelling the fine record of 1916 in this respect.

INVESTMENTS

The major portion of the surplus income was invested in Dominion Government War Bonds. Policyholders will approve our course in assisting the Government, as we have done, to the utmost of our ability in financing the war, to win which is of paramount importance.

DIVIDENDS TO POLICYHOLDERS

Summing up the results of the year's operations, it is gratifying to announce that the surplus earnings were such as to make it possible for the Company to continue to pay to policyholders the same liberal scale of dividends as heretofore.

Feeding the Soldiers.

Although he would a great deal rather be taking part in cavalry raids Capt. John C. Pegram, for 15 years attached to the cavalry of the United States army, is now putting in some very hard strokes in the way of commissary preparedness, so that if an army travels on its stomach, as it does, according to tradition, the United States forces will be able to go very far indeed. Captain Pegram has been detailed by the war department to represent the commissary department at the camps of the eastern and northeastern departments. He has been in New York for some time co-operating with the hotel and restaurant men who are enlisting cooks for the new army.

Proved He Was a Driver.

"I left England a political slave; I shall return to it a free woman," remarked Mrs. Pankhurst recently at a meeting of Russian Suffragists.

"But," she continued, gravely, "it is not the possession of the vote that counts, it is the knowing how to use it." And in order to illustrate her contention she proceeded to tell the story of the pedestrian who had nearly been run over by a taxi.

"You don't know how to drive!" cried the angry man, as he brushed the mud from his clothes.

"Don't I?" cried the no less infuriated driver. "Here's my driver's certificate."

"I don't believe it's yours," was the retort.

"Not mine!" gasped the indignant driver. "Why, I bought it from a pal who's gone into the army, and paid him for it."

Teaching The Children To Farm

MUCH is being added to the attractiveness of life on farms, especially to children, by the children's competitions which have become a feature of the fairs and exhibitions in Western Canada during the past year. At every place at which these competitions were held they were the centre of interest, not only to the children themselves but also to adult visitors. In fact, many of the older exhibitors displayed a greater interest in the exhibits of the children than in their own.

These competitions are generally arranged by breeders' associations, sometimes with the assistance of the Department of Agriculture of the province and other public bodies. Usually they are confined to boys and girls between the ages of ten and fifteen, who are required to feed, care for and look after a calf, a pig or a lamb, as the case may be, for a certain period previous to the opening of the fair.

One of the most successful of these competitions was the baby beef competition held at the Calgary Winter Fair in December. The competition was for heifers, pure bred or grade, born in 1916, and fed between November 1st and the date of the show, by boys or girls between nine and seventeen years of age. Fourteen prizes from $25 to $100 were awarded. Altogether there were fifty-three exhibitors in the competition, including fifteen girls. The first prize was won by Samuel Heal, of Brandon, Manitoba. In the class of calves shown by girls the first prize was taken by M. A. Isabel Stewart, of Forestburg, Alberta, and the second by Florence Elva Boggs, of Daysland, Alberta. Both these girls were near the front in the open competition.

So valuable are these competitions considered to be in encouraging boys and girls to take an interest in live stock, and so great has been their success that no exhibition in the future will be complete without them. Already arrangements have been made to increase their scope and at the summer fair at Calgary this year there will be a sheep shearing competition, while at the winter fair there will be a lamb and pig feeding competitions, in addition to the baby beef competition, and the period during which the animals will be in sole charge of the youngsters will be extended to three months.

The production of baby beef is developing into one of the most important branches of farming in Alberta. For this result much credit is due to Dr. J. G. Rutherford, Superintendent of the Animal Industry Branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Dr. Rutherford has been largely responsible for making known to the farmers of Alberta the advantages of raising baby beef, some of which are greater gains made on the same amount of feed by the youngest cattle than those of more age; quicker turnover in the money invested in cattle, the greater stability of markets. On the Demonstration Farm at Strathmore, Alberta, under the direction of Dr. Rutherford, demonstrations in the raising of baby beef have been conducted for some years, with results that are entirely satisfactory from a profit-making point of view. The future of the baby beef industry in Alberta, and, in fact, throughout Western Canada, where conditions are extremely favorable to its success, is very bright.

Eliminate Little Worries.

When real disaster visits us we always, somehow, seem to gain a new courage, observes a writer. "It is the little foxes which spoil the vines"—'tis the little every-day fretting which wears away the stone and weakens the structure. The little things of life are not worth worrying about. There are two good reasons for this. One is that if we can remedy these things, and we usually can, we have no right to allow them to spoil our peace or the peace of those who are dear to us.

First Woman Journalist.

It is said that the first newspaper woman was an American, Mrs. Anne Royall, who was not only the first woman journalist, but the first woman to own and edit a newspaper. It is also curious that she is said to have originated the idea of "interviews." She was born in Maryland in 1789, put her first printing press on Capitol hill in Washington, D. C., and published a small weekly, first called the Washington Paul Pry, and later the Huntress.

"Kingdom" Fizzled Overnight.

Bolo Pasha's attempt to purchase control of a great French newspaper to further German propaganda was not the first international adventure this one-time hairdresser and later confidant of the deposed khedive of Egypt planned. Twenty-six years ago, says Captain Bourchardin, the military prosecutor, Bole returned from Buenos Aires with his pockets filled with 1,000 franc ($200) notes. He went to a little town in the south of France and took the most expensive rooms in the best hotel and his lavish expenditures attracted general attention.

Bolo asserted that he had received a grant of a large tract of land from the United States Government, that he intended to found an empire of which he would be the ruler, and that he desired to take with him as colonists workmen of all trades, farmers, wine growers and makers, and manufacturers of casks to contain the wines. Bolo soon had more would-be colonists than he needed. He announced that they would embark at Marseilles on the steamship Conqueror. He told them that he had unlimited capital.

One morning Bolo disappeared and he has never returned to the little town.

Bolo turned up in Venezuela in 1905, but not as an emperor.

Senator Charles Humbert, accused of having had dealings with Bolo Pasha, has left the Journal, of which he had been the director. He explained, in announcing his resignation, that he had been deceived twice, despite his utmost efforts to make "every page and every line of his paper testify" that he had been a good servant of his country. His resignation comes on the eve of action to suspend Senator Humbert's immunity so he may be tried for complicity in relation with the enemy.

READY-MADE TRANSPORTS

The German Boats Now Owned by the United States.

The great German liners, seized in United States ports, that were among the best afloat—before the war, were designed so that they could be easily converted into troop transports. Possibly the designers had in mind that some day they might carry troops westward across the Atlantic, perhaps to collect a great indemnity from the United States; perhaps to lay the foundations of a German overseas empire somewhere in the Western Hemisphere.

Certainly, they never dreamed the day would come when advantage would be taken of their plans to expedite the movement of American troops to Europe for the ultimate purpose of eliminating forever the dream of empire to be attained through blood and iron. But that is what fate has wrought. Thanks to German ships, the mighty blow of the republic will the quicker fall upon the German legions.

The Vaterland (now the Leviathan) alone was capable of carrying 20,000 soldiers at a trip. The first suggestion for her conversion was to fit her for carrying 12,000 men, but even that number was considered too many men to risk in one ship, and as finally reconstructed she has an actual capacity for 8,800 soldiers. The troop capacity of the sixteen German ships that have been turned into transports, as given by the Scientific American, is as follows:

Vaterland (Leviathan), 54,282 tons, 8,800 officers and men.
George Washington, 25,570 tons, 4,850 officers and men.
Amerika (America), 22,622 tons, 4,500 officers and men.
Cecilie (Mt. Vernon), 19,503 tons, 3,830 officers and men.
Kaiser Wilhelm II. (Agamemnon), 19,361 tons, 3,830 officers and men.
President Lincoln, 18,168 tons, 5,200 officers and men.
President Grant, 18,072 tons, 5,200 officers and men.
Cincinnati (Covington), 16,339 tons, 4,000 officers and men.
Grosser Kurfurst (Aeolus), 13,102 tons, 3,175 officers and men.
Barbarossa (Mercury), 10,984 tons, 2,620 officers and men.
Prinzess Irene (Pocahontas), 10,893 tons, 2,540 officers and men.
Friedrich der Grosse (Huron), 10,771 tons, 2,460 officers ad men.
Hamburg (Powhatan), 10,531 tons, 2,100 officers and men.
Rhein (Susquehanna), 10,058 tons, 2,000 officers and men.
Neckar (Antigone), 9,835 tons, 2,000 officers and men.
Koenig Wilhelm II. (Madawaska), 9,510 tons, 2,200 officers and men.
Total, 59,295 officers and men.

The English Soldier's Cane.

It is one of the regulations of the British army that every soldier when walking out must carry in his hand a stick in order to preserve a soldierly appearance and prevent anything like slouching in his gait. This rule applies to all ranks, and should any one seek to evade it he would find his progress barred by the sentry at the barrack gate or entrance to camp. Privates generally carry light canes or "swagger sticks," noncommissioned officers fairly stout sticks, and officers invariably go in for the more expensive kind. It is a question that has often been asked, Who first suggested the idea? But nobody seems to know. From the earliest times drill sergeants and drum majors have carried sticks, and the fashion may have come from that fact.

Speeding Up In United States

Mr. Dent and Mr. Kahn of the House Military Affairs Committee, say:—

"No thought of an early peace can be allowed to cut down America's war preparations," said Mr. Kahn to-day.

"They must be on an immense scale, for it is our hope that the immensity of these preparations itself wil hasten peace. The war is much a war of morale as of men, and the critical year of the war is at hand, as President Wilson said.

"We must show Germany that we are coming 100,000,000 strong, with emphasis on the strong, and this should have the psychological effect of bringing the German leaders to terms, but if it fails, we will be much better prepared to fight to the end.

"But a slackening up in the war work, so easy to come from the reports of German revolts, or in any way cutting down the war program, would be a most fatal mistake at this time. It can mean nothing but lengthening the war."

To help drive home to Germany the realization that the United States is throwing all its resources into the fight and will fight to the end, Mr. Kahn not only favours registering for the draft all who have become 21 since the draft of the first registration, but also training the young men from 18 to 21 so that they will be able to take their places in the army when they become of age. Likewise he favours listing the men above the draft age up to 45 to be used in industrial work, so that the Government by an order, can effectively speed up any branch of the war work.

Mr. Kahn is not dissatisfied with the record of the War Department, and he believes the war machine is rapidly developing speed and much greater efficiency. But he is particularly anxious that the whole programme be gradually increased and that peace rumours shall not act as a brake on the work.

The Military Appropriations Bill which will carry more for any division of the Government than any Bill ever reported, is fast being completed. Hearings will be completed early this week, Mr. Dent says, and little difficulty in reaching agreement over the various items is expected, for the committee is determined that any future delay in the war work shall not be charged up to an insufficient appropriation.

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but it is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION
From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NERVOUS DEBILITY SLEEPLESSNESS
Doctor Said He Could Do No More So Peterboro' Woman Turned to the Great Food Cure With Splendid Results

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church, or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies, and taken treatment from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box, I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and could go to places where there was a crowd or excitement, without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

It feeds the nerves. That is the great secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. That is why cures effected by this treatment are both thorough and lasting.

The great difficulty when the nerves become exhausted is to get enough nourishment from the food you eat to restore the nerves. By supplying the elements from which Nerve Force is created in condensed and easily digested form Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the wasted and depleted nerve cells back to health and vigour.

You feel the benefit obtained by renewed energy and ambition, pain and weakness disappear, digestion improves, the complexion takes on new colour, and in a score of ways you find the proof of the good this food cure is doing you.

When you have decided to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food make up your mind to give it a fair chance to cure you, and then insist on getting the genuine article, bearing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. Price 50 cents a box, full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Five Great Men in History.

In the generation that saw the birth and the earlier years of the republic five men stand out—George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton and John Marshall, says James Bryce in the Youth's Companion. Whether or not the last four of them were great men in the full sense of the word is a question on which people were not agreed in the lifetime of those four and are not agreed today; but everyone felt then as everyone feels now that Washington was great. He is a world figure. In mere intellectual power he was not superior to the other four. He had less originality and a less wide range of capacity than Franklin, less versatile activity of mind than Jefferson, less brilliant gifts for constructive policy and the exposition thereof than Hamilton, less logical grasp and penetration of thought than Marshall; but he rose superior to them all in a certain massive strength of character, in stately dignity, in a calm firmness of purpose that neither the smiles nor the frowns of fortune could divert from the course his judgment had approved. So his primacy was undisputed then and has remained undisputed ever since.

Japan Is Exporting Pulp.

Japanese imports of pulp have encountered obstacles, but, according to the Japan Chronicle, it is believed that the stocks held by paper manufacturers generally are sufficient to last until the end of this year, while the domestic manufacture of pulp, stimulated by import difficulties, has appreciably developed. As a result, efforts are now being made by some merchants to export home-made pulp.

The Chronicle states that this is not to be the disadvantage of those paper manufacturers who are suffering from the scarcity of imported pulp, for what they essentially want it not yet producible in this country. It finds that there is no excessive domestic pulp that is exported.

Our Army of Civil War.

During the first year of the Civil war the number of the regular army rose to 32,000. Lincoln's first call for volunteers, April 15, 1861, was for 75,000 men for three months. At the beginning of 1862 the number of volunteers in the field was about 550,000. During the next three years it was about 900,000. At the close of the war the Union army numbered 1,000,000 men. The total number of troops furnished was 2,850,000 men.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Big Things.

The greatest structure ever raised by the hand of man is the Great Pyramid of Cheops, founded 4,000 years ago, and measuring 746 feet square on the base and 440 feet high. It took 20 years in construction; 100,000 men worked for three months, and, being then relieved, were succeeded by an equally large corps. The massive stones were brought from Arabia, 700 miles away. The cost of the work is estimated at $145,000,000.

To Remove Grease Spots.

The removal of grease spots from a carpet or rug is not an easy matter. One of the most practical plans is to sprinkle hot cornmeal and whiting over the spots and leave for two or three days, brush off with a stiff brush and repeat till the spots are gone. Or, of there is not the least danger of fire, the powder may be covered with gasoline and rubbed hard till the gasoline evaporates. Then sweep clean.

Use Kites for Fishing.

Kite fishing is one of the latest sports taken up by fishermen on the Pacific coast. According to Popular Science Monthly, a fine corbina "hole" has been discovered at Seal Beach, off the pier, just far enough to be out of reach of the best casters. Instead of employing boats the fishermen find it greater sport to use kites, which carry the lines out to the desired spot.

Testing Times.

When everything is dark, that is the time to have faith in the light, to look forward steadfastly toward the dawn. The worst moments of doubt, of darkness in the soul, asserts a writer, can become priceless moments of testing and of development, if a man uses them rightly and learns their lesson.

BIG TRANSPORT TORPEDOED BY HUNS

2187 ARE SAVED FROM THE TUSCANIA

Bolsheviki Will Surrender To Huns Only As A Last Resort

Are Counting on a Revolution in the Central Empire to Save Them--News Received From the Brest Litovsk Conference Says Russian Delegates Refused to Accede to German Demand For Separate Peace.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Jos. Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6—(Delayed).—The greater portion of the Russian armies want peace—regardless of terms. But the Bolsheviki, adopting a "win or bust" policy, are determined to surrender to Germany only as a last resort. They are hoping that a revolution in Roumania, or possibly in the Central Empires, will save the situation for them. The Bolsheviki are counting so strongly on an Austro-German revolution, in fact, that they are already planning to delegate to the leaders of Socialists in the Central Empires the task of representing Russia in Berlin and Vienna after the war. They have picked Liebknecht, a German Radical, as the Russian representative at Berlin and Otto Bauer at Vienna. No news has been received at the Smolny Institute from Brest-Litovsk in the past 24 hours. The Germans have cut the wires to prevent the Russians receiving news of the general strike in the Central Powers.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—With the approach of the spring planting season, land distribution is becoming an acute problem. Unemployed workmen who are leaving the cities for their native villages to get land rapidly are spreading the economic struggle throughout Russia. Land-owning peasants as well as bourgeois are to be deprived of their estates. Premier Lenine to-day addressed a gathering of agitators, who are to depart soon for the provinces to lead a confiscation campaign. He urged them to make war on all village exploiters and peasants as they did on wealthy land-owners. The police are dead and buried, and the masses must take affairs in their own hands, he said.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6—(Delayed).—Thousands of war prisoners are starving in Russia, as a result of disorganized transportation, it was declared to-day. Russian officials admitted their fear of an uprising. Commissioner of Prisoners Mentzikovsky said he would "decline to take the consequences" arising from the serious situation. Efforts to move supplies to the prison camps and to transport the prisoners to points were foodstuffs have been stored have failed through lack of train facilities.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—Ensign Krylenko, the Bolsheviki commander-in-chief, has issued a decree, ordering that all supplies be cut off from the Polish legion in the Russian Army, and declaring its commander, Dovber Movsnitsky an outlaw. He also appeals to all the Bolsheviki to leave Polish commands.

A wireless despatch received at Berlin from Kiev, and forwarded to Amsterdam on Tuesday, said that Ensign Krylenko and his staff had been arrested by the Insurgent Poles.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6—(Delayed).—Russian delegates to the Brest-Litovsk Conference unanimously refused to accede to the Teutonic delegates' demands that a separate peace be signed immediately, it was officially announced here to-day. The negotiations are continuing.

SHOP ON FRIDAY

Householders are reminded of the new shopping regulations arising out of the three heatless days, commencing Saturday and ending Monday. Meat stores, groceries and other food shops will be open on Saturday until noon for the sale of food only, and also on Monday until noon. This may result in a big rush on the half-day period, and shoppers are urged to do as much shopping on Friday as circumstances will permit.

Ultimatum To Britain

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—The People's Commissaries are reported to have sent an ultimatum to the British Embassy, demanding recognition of M. Litvinoff, the Bolshviki Ambassador, according to London. If Great Britain continues in its refusal, stringent measures will be taken against British subjects, it is declared.

CENTRAL POWERS HAVE A DISPUTE

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

ZURICH, Feb. 7.—Austria and Germany have failed to reach an agreement on the division of Polish territory between them, according to German newspapers reaching here to-day. It is understood that Germany wants the industrial and mining regions, allowing Austria to retain only the agricultural districts.

CAMPAIGN TO INCREASE THE CONSUMPTION OF FISH

Letter Received To-day by City Clerk Armstrong Outlines New Programme

A SUBSTITUTE

The Food Controller's Department is starting a campaign to increase the consumption of fish to a pound a week per person. In a letter received at the city offices from the Fish Committee, it is said:

"In starting this campaign for the consumption of a pound of fish a week per person this committee is well aware of the fact that there are not enough of the so-called "luxury" fish to supply the demand for such a campaign, and for that reason other varieties, including cod, haddock, herring, tulibee, etc., should be brought to the front, and the fact that they can be prepared in just as palatable a manner impressed upon the public.

"In explaining the campaign for increased use of fish as a substitute for beef and bacon, it should be brought to the attention of the people living in Peterborough, through the local papers, that fish is the only animal food that does not consume and destroy during its growth food fit for human consumption. Hogs, sheep and cattle consume vast quantities of grain or other foods requiring manpower to produce. The reason for sending beef and bacon overseas is the scarcity of transportation facilities and the need for food in its most concentrated form. A pound of fish a week per person is not too much, and customers should cooperate with the fish dealers by placing a standing order for fish on Tuesdays and Fridays or other days so that the dealer would be able to place his order with the wholesalers without fear of loss.

"Yours, very truly,
"Canadian Food Control,
"E. O. Sawyer, Jr., for Fish Committee."

Big Bargains At Black's

Friday will be a busy day at P. Blacks Ready-to-wear store, corner of George and King streets. Many goods have been reduced in price, and customers will wonder at the sacrifices that have been made on men's and women's clothing, dry goods, underwear, hosiery, hats,caps, and millinery. You'll have to pay a good deal more for these things after this month. Now when you can buy at from one-third to one-half off the old prices you should crowd Mr. Black's store all day Friday. Remember the store is opposite Turner & Sons'.

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Feb. 7.—William Proudfoot, leader of the Liberal Opposition, resumed the debate in reply to the speech from the throne this afternoon, when the Legislature met. It is not expected the debate will be prolonged to a great length, but Hartley Dewart, the Liberal member from Southwest Tory Toronto, will have something to say before its conclusion.

GUNS ARE VERY ACTIVE

French Official Announcement States That the Artillery on Both Sides Have Been Very Busy in Many Sectors

RAIDERS REPULSED

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Feb. 7.— Heavy artillery fighting on the Aisne and Verdun fronts and in Alsace is reported in to-day's official communication. It follows: "Artillery on both sides was particularly active on the front north of the Aisne, in the region of Chavignen, Pargny and Filain, on the right bank of the Meuse, in the sector between Samogneux and Hill 344, and in the vicinity of Hartmans Weilerkopf. German detachments which attempted to approach some of the French posts north-east of Brays-En-Laonnois, in the region of Mortier Wood, were repulsed. In the Champagne, the French carried out a successful raid on the German trenches east of Teton. In Alsace, after violent artillery preparations, the Germans made an ineffective attempt to penetrate the French lines at two points near Banholz. Yesterday morning a German airplane was brought down by the fire of French anti-aircraft guns.

WOMEN ARE AGAINST AN ELECTION NOW

Special to The Examiner:

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, Feb. 7.— Mr. William Proudfoot, M.P.P., leader of the Opposition, has received a letter from the Women's Union Government League of Guelph, protesting against the holding of a Provincial Election at the present time. "There is no issue at the present time so vital as to require an election," read the letter.

A resolution was passed that, whereas an election would require an expenditure of money which is urgently needed for war purposes, and would also make demands upon time and labour which ought to be devoted to patriotic work, no election should be held.

The League also want legislation passed to permit women to become candidates for the Provincial Legislature and for municipal honours, and to give farmers' daughters the same rights in municipal elections as farmers' sons. This is the third letter that has been received by Mr. Proudfoot from women's organizations protesting against the Provincial Government holding an election at the present time. The other protests were from the Toronto Women's Good Government League and the Ontario Women's Citizens' Association.

210 LIVES ARE LOST IN THE TORPEDOING OF TUSCANIA

MORE THAN 213,000 SAMMIES IN FRANCE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—America now has more than 213,000 troops in France, according to revelations by Andre Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, at a banquet here. What America has done in the war was "magnificent," the Commissioner said, adding that the people should have that news "as a stimulant." Tardieu assured his audience that France will be able, before July 1, to manufacture enough artillery to supply twenty American divisions—approximately half a million troops—providing the United States supplies the raw materal, as agreed.

GENERAL ELECTION FOR THE PROVINCE MAY BE AVERTED

Probabilities Are That Ontario House Will Adopt a Resolution For the Extension of the Legislature For a Year

CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 7. — Indications multiply that there will be no general election in Ontario in the coming summer. It is not improbable that within the next ten days the leaders of both political parties will confer with the object of avoiding a war-time election, with the probable result that before the present session of the Legislature ends, the House will unanimously adopt a memorial for the extension of the statutory term of the present Legislature for the period of one year. If, when the Legislature reassembles in 1919, the war has not terminated, a further extension of one year may be granted.

Until yesterday a general election in May or June next was certainly on the cards. The Conservative members went into caucus yesterday with that fixed in their minds. But at the caucus there was, it is understood, some plain speaking. More than one member drew attention to the fact that a strong sentiment was sweeping the province against holding an election and detracting public attention from efforts to win the war. This sentiment had already found strong expression through influential women's organizations and the warning was sounded that it would be unwise to ignore the wishes of the women and risk lining many of them against the government which had given them the franchise, should an election for next spring be decided upon.

Premier Hearst, it is said, declined to express himself favourably or unfavourably to an early election, stating that the government would be guided by the opinion of the majority of its supporters in the Legislature.

Two other members of the Government, Hon. Mr. Lucas and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, are said to have favoured an election now, believing the chances of the Government being returned were brighter now than they might be later.

After an hour's discussion the caucus deferred consideration of the matter until another meeting. "It would be no surprise to me if there would be no election this year," stated one of the oldest Conservative members last night. "We will perhaps know what the Liberal members think about it before we again caucus on the subject," he significantly added.

Your correspondent has it on the authority of a Liberal member that previous to the conference of Liberal members and candidates, held in Toronto shortly before the last Federal election, the Liberals had been sounded upon becoming a party to an agreement to extend the life of the Legislature and avoid an election, but that the majority of the Liberal members and candidates present were at that time averse to committing themselves until after the result of the Federal election was known. Since the December 17th, election day, some Liberal members are more receptive to the idea. It would be no surprise, should overtures reach the Liberal camp from the Government benches, that the Opposition would now fall in with a proposal to continue the life of the present Legislature.

IMPORTANT REPORT ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BY JUDGE HODGINS

Christian Scientists Must Conform to the Public Health Regulations —Recommends a Fine or Imprisonment

AN IMPORTANT FINDING

TORONTO, Feb. 7.—"The Christian Scientists disclaim the practise of medicine, and rely upon faith and prayer. So far as the public health regulations are concerned there can be no doubt that whaever methods they adopt they should be required to conform to them, that is if they intervene in any way in the cure or alleviation of disease, as they unquestionably do when they become the medium for effecting the desired result." These observations are made by Justice Hodgins, in his report to the Government on the practise of medicine in Ontario.

"Whether they see the patient or not," he continues, "or whether they merely pray for him if their efforts or doctrine really and in practice, result in eliminating the regular practitioner, either because the patient desires it or because his friends do so then the interests of public health throw on them the responsibility for any possible mistake in the nature of disease. They should, therefore, conform to the present or future health regulations.

"Subject to that," says the Judge, "and in so far as what they do is solely the practice in good faith of their religion no satisfactory reason has been alleged for putting them or any church or body in the category of practising physicians."

There are, according to the last Municipal census, some 1,236 Christian Scientists in Toronto, and in Ontario, 6,000.

Justice Hodgins insists on maintaining the exeception that in the case of children necessaries shall mean and include medical attention by a registered physician. A penalty of fine or imprisonement, he said, should be imposed upon any one practising such religious tenets in reference to any person suffering from contagious or infectious diseases under the Public Health Act, unless therefore such practise is begun, notice is given in writing to the local health authorities of the presence of such disease."

Mr. Henry Cox Badly Hurt

Veteran East City Resident Falls on Icy Pavement

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Henry Cox, 496 Rogers Street, met with a serious accident. He fell heavily upon the sidewalk at the corner of Hunter and Queen Streets. He was removed to Nicholls Hospital, and an X-ray examination of the location of the injury showed an impacted fracture of the neck of the thigh bone.

Dr. Eastwood is in attendance, and the patient is doing as well as could be expected, though the nature of the injury and the sufferer's advanced age—80 years—do not admit of a very favourable prognosis.

Admiralty Announces That 2187 Men Were Saved—Former Crack Vessel of Anchor Line Hit Off the Coast of Ireland Was Carrying American Troops.

HAS HAD MANY ESCAPES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 7.— The Admiralty officially announced to-day that 210 persons were lost and 2,187 saved in the torpedoing of the transport Tuscania Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — A brief message from Admiral Sims at London early to-day said it was "believed" that the Tuscania was still afloat. He mentioned nothing of a convoy, but officials of the navy said either American or British destroyers had convoyed her.

HAD CARRIED MANY TROOPS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Thousands of American troops have been carried across the sea by the British steamer Tuscania, just fallen victim to a German submarine. She took the old sixty-ninth of New York to France. The Tuscania was of 14,138 tons gross. She was the crack vessel of the Anchor Line, under charter to the Cunarders. Her capacity was 2,500 passengers, but with alterations in her accommodations, she could carry many more troops. Captain Peter McLean was chief officer of the Tuscania. She had several encounters with submarines, and on one occasion rescued 45 American survivors of a U boat attack.

EARLIER REPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The Cunard Liner Tuscania, carrying 2,179 American soldiers, has been torpedoed and sunk off the Irish coast, and at a late hour to-night 1,912 officers and men had been accounted for in a despatch to the State Department from London.

News of the first disaster in the war to America's armed forces came in a brief despatch to the War Department.

It did not mention the possibility of further survivors, but hope was built here upon the fact that all of those rescued were landed at two widely separated Irish ports, and indications that relief vessels were at hand quickly.

DRAWN FROM EVERYWHERE.

The soldiers on board the Tuscania were small detachments from almost every section of the country. There was no distinctive military unit from any State, and for this reason War Department officials announced that it would be impossible to publish a list of those on board until complete reports had been received. Instructions were sent by wireless and cable by the War, Navy and State Departments to their representatives in England and Ireland, directing that every detail be forwarded at the earliest possible moment.

THE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

It was announced that the Tuscia was manned by British sailors, with a British naval guard, and was convoyed by British warships.

LONDON, Feb. 7.— The transport Tuscania floated for several hours after she was tropedoed in Irish waters Tuesday, it was learned to-day. It was stated that Americans aboard other vessels witnessed the torpedoing. The fact that the Tuscania remained afloat for a considerable period after attack is believed to account for the large number of lives saved. References to Americans aboard other vessels witnessing the torpedoing, might indicate that the Tuscania either was convoy-

SIGNS OF TROUBLE.

Germany claims to have overcome her domestic strike troubles, and makes light of them—they didn't amount to much anyway. But such strikes would be considered a tremendously grave thing if they happened in Great Britain or Canada or the United States, and they would be infinitely more grave if our governments concerned were capable of using the ruthless, slave-driving methods Germany naturally employed to put an end to the strikes. It would have been a mighty serious thing for the peoples of the Allied countries if their governments were capable of using the methods of Germany, and a mighty more serious thing if their peoples were to submit to them. Of course, the German methods of bulldozing her subjects into submission or subjection is quite the thing to be expected. They are a local application of the same methods of outrage and defiance of right Germany is attempting to impose on the world. But there is a difference; the world won't submit to these ideas of domination as tamely as the tyrant-ridden people of Germany, and hence his world war.

Germany may think she has killed the protesting spirit of her outraged, down-trodden and war-ridden people; but the leaven of discontent is working and manhood which cannot be thoroughly war-machined out of a people, even out of the German people, will, though ruthlessly repressed under more terrible suffering that is coming, reassert itself—the worm will turn with a vengeance.

Hindenburg's vaunt that he will be in Paris with his army by 1st April is a poisson d'Avril that will only amuse the French.

MARGARINE.

We have been told that the importation into Canada of margarine, or the manufacture of it in Canada, tends to injure the dairying industry. Possibly it might do, but the dairying industry must take its chances with other industries and the generality of Canadians in the matter of the effect of adoption of necessary war measures. The whole country has had imposed upon it in the interests of our war-winning activities, many restrictions. We have had to submit to meatless and wheatless days, and, saddest of all, beerless days, in order to increase the measure of our contribution to the provision of food for our allies. And now we have to face heatless days and shopless days. Stores and factories are ordered closed to conserve the fuel supply. These are hard measures; and only the vital necessity of doing our best justifies the measures taken, or can reconcile the people affected to as graceful compliance as possible with the hardships such drastic measures of necessity impose.

When we are all suffering so keenly—submitting to so much personal and business sacrifice, the dairy interests, especially after getting the rather tidy price of 21 3-4 cents a pound for a season' cheese, might come to the conclusion that it is not discriminated against in comparison with what other interests necessarily suffer in the way of sacrifice for the cause; and feel that margarine, though it may shave a trifle off butter prices and profits, is a benefit and even a boon to so many million Canadians who, in default of ability to buy butter, may avoid eating dry bread by the purchase of margarine.

The importance that Great Britain places upon margarine is shown by the following from the Journal of Commerce:

It is interesting to note that the British Government attach so much importance to the use of the article that they are requisitioning all vegetable oils and fats suitable for the production of it, and are making arrangements for the establishing of new factories for margarine making. Before the war Great Britain produced 100 million to 120 million pounds of margarine, and imported about 140 million pounds from Holland. And all the time we Canadians were taught to think that it was wicked to use such a thing! Now Great Britain, besides importing largely, is making five times the quantity produced before the war.

However, Canadians may be benefitted or injured by the fact, according as their interests lie, that the United States has prohibited the export to Canada not only of margarine itself but one of the chief ingredients which will prevent its manufacture in Canada of an article of food necessity that is a great benefit to millions of people whose means does not permit them to buy butter at the present high prices.

Food Controllers, whether in Canada, the United States or Great Britain, get more brickbats than bouquets.

CANADA'S "WHITE COAL."

Central Canada—meaning virtually Ontario—has no coal; but by one of nature's benign compensations, this province is favoured with immense potential water powers — meaning, with development, electric power, a magnificent equqivalent for coal produced steam power. The local possession of water power is a very distinct advantage. In Peterborough it gave an impulse to our manufacturing development long before electricity became a power factor, or before the Hydro-electric system provided for the regulation, conservation and distribution of electric power.

But our electric equivalent for coal must be conserved and further developed; and its immense possibilities made commercially and industrially accessible.

We have within easy reach of Peterborough important water powers that are every day wasting their fl w, contributing to scenic beauty more than to the immense utility inherent in them, if effectively developed.

Sir Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Conservation Commission of Canada, in his address at the ninth annual meeting, speaks interestingly of the great undeveloped water powers on the St. Lawrence, and points out that a situation exists in respect to them analogous to what existed in relation to Niagara power fifteen years ago. He says, "a large capacity for the development of power exists on the St. Lawrence." Some of it has been developed in the neighbourhood of Montreal, "but the greater portion of it still remains undeveloped."

To secure and save the power that can be developed in the interests of the people, and to prevent seizure in the interest of private monopolies, Sir Clifford declares that "the only sound and satisfactory method of developing these powers is by an international commission." Then an suitable division of the power will take place; and—

The governments concerned will be able to administer the power as the Hydro-electric Power Commission administers the power of Niagara—for the benefit of the people who are directly concerned in its use.

In view of the fact that, within the recent past Hydro-electric power has become the greatest factor in modern industry, the importance of saving our water powers for the use of the people becomes greatly emphasized, and the necessity of development imposes a duty of the greatest importance upon our public leaders and governments.

There is a great deal of discussion as to the place Canada is to take after the war—industrially and commercially. We have not heretofore shone very conspicuously as a manufacturing country, though we are improving. But the war has demonstrated that we are able to accomplish as much in manufacturing as we are able to do in the way of agricultural roduction. The war has wonderfully developed Canada's manufacturing efficiency. We have met the test in the manufacture of munitions in competition with the great manufacturing countries of the old world; our mechanics have equalled theirs in work that required high mechanical skill, and the finest accuracy, conjoined with rapid output. We need power to manufacture successfully, and our water powers, as substitutes for coal, have only to be developed to furnish the power.

Not only does Ontario's "white coal" take the place of natural coal, in the production of power for manufacturing, but electricity has become an efficient substitute for coal in the production of its raw material, in the treatment of minerals. Electric smelting, instead of being a mere laboratory experiment, is now in full operation in Canada. There are in Canada fifty-four electric furnaces successfully using the electric process, brought to practical utility by the investigations and experiments of Dr. Haanel, Director of the Dominion Department of Mines. One of these electric smelting lant the British Forgings plant, Toronto, has a capacity of 72,000 tons a year, making it the largest electric steel plant in the world.

In view of the importance of our electric resources, developed and dormant; in view of the necessity of Canada holding and advancing her position after the war by manufacturing development; in view of the national and imperial interests involved, in the necessity of Canada maintaining in peace — after the war — the proud record she has achieved, both at home and on the battle front, in helping win the war, it seems inevitable that the basic element in her industrial success—cheap and plentiful electric power—should command the prompt and practical attention of our governments and men of influence in the direction of nationalizing and developing to the furthest possible extent our great and still dormant water powers.

If the Fuel Controller would meet the heartless weather man's cold wave with a coal wave, it would be worth while to debate the question as to whether life is worth living.

THE MUTUAL OF CANADA IN 1917 NET INCREASE $13,865,000.

To the average reader it will appear difficult of explanation that with so many factors in operation apparently adverse to the life insurance business that it has nevertheless expanded during the past year more rapidly than ever before. One would think that the many public charities demanding contributions, the Victory Loan absorbing its millions and the high cost of living with its exceptional demands on the public purse, would materially reduce the number of policies issued. Such is not the case. The demand is greater than ever before in the history of Canadian life companies, and this in spite of the depletion of the ranks of young men on account of military service.

The statement of the business of the Mutual Life of Canada for 1917, for example, shows astonishing results. The amount of new assurances written, the decrease in lapses, the lowness of ratio of expense to income and the substantial increase in assets—all show a progressive and successful policy in operation under exceptionally favourable conditions.

The new business issued amounted to 10,251 policies for $20,124,563, and allowing for discontinued policies, the net increase in the business in force was $13,865,318—that is, the permanent increase in the volume of business was equal to 69 per cent. of the new business issued. This shows clearly how stable the business of the Mutual is and to how small an extent the business has suffered from lapsation.

It is well known that the interest realisable on mortgage investments is generally much higher than that which Government bonds yield; nevertheless, the policy of the Mutual Life in advancing its money to the Government at a moderate rate of interest will commend itself to all their policy-holders and the general public. The company has no less than four and a quarter millions invested in Canadian Government war bonds.

The Mutual Life of Canada is now half way through the fourth year of the war, and in spite of the financial strain inseparable from present conditions this institution has held steadily on its way increasingly prosperous. The total business in force 31st December amounted to $123,510,309. During the year nearly half a million dollars were distributed in death claims to the families of deceased soldiers who had been insured in the company.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

ON THE PRAIRIE.

A young woman called at the warerooms of a music dealer in Saskatoon to see some talking machine records. She mentioned that her home was two hundred miles from the railway and she had come to the city by motor car. Naturally enough, the dealer began to show her some of the newer and more popular records. She was not particularly interested. "We have this one," was her invariable remark. After inquiry, the dealer learned that the family received very month the catalogue of one of the leading companies and purchased largely of the records by mail order.

When a family living on the prairie, two hundred miles from a railway, is in close touch with the trend of modern music, one may begin to realise the marvellous effect which this invention is bound to have on the general state of musical culture in Canada. It used to be that only the men and women living in the largest cities had the opportunity to hear the best music played by the best artistes. Yet to-day "to earth's remotest bound" Mischa Elman, and Caruso, and McCormack, and Scotti and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra are as well known as they are in New York or Toronto.

The artistes of to-morrow will find audiences all over the world, and will need to be of superb quality to hold their position against the new and wider criticism.

THE SAILOR'S DRUM.

In a music store at Victoria is preserved a primitive bass drum which deserves a place in a National Museum of Fine Arts. One finds in such buildings the assembled instruments of civilised and of barbaric ages. The harpsichord stands by the Kitheria, and the tom-tom beside river reed. They are curiosities of manufacture. This Victoria drum is a curiosity of human temperament, and here is the story to prove that statement:

Early in the war, while the fleet of Admiral Spee had not yet come to Coronel and never dreamed of the disaster of the Falkland Islands, a half-dozen bustling little British war craft were doing coast patrol. Each was isolated in a measure from the flagship, which had a lively brass band hitting British music-hall songs every day.

The bluejackets on a smart little third-class cruiser were wearin' awa' for music—that is, for concerted music. There were half a dozen mouth organs in the ship's company, to say nothing of a "squiffer," which is Cockney for that useful and lowly instrument called a concertina.

They were assembled and the music, as one said, was "not 'arf bad." It lacked point and rhythm. The musicians knew that a band without a bass drum was a delusion and a snare. No drum was on board and there was no chance of getting one. Naturally, being sailors, the boys decided to make one, and called into play the assembled inventive genius of the ship's company. A hollow cylinder was the beginning of every drum. Therefore the lad got an empty barrel and knocked out the head and foot of it. They got canvas from stores and cut it into two circular pieces, each large enough to cover the barrel end. The usual apparatus for tightning a drum-head was manufactured from ship's string which has a flavour of tar but an abiding strength. The canvas was tightened to the utmost apparent limit and the manufacturers had high hopes. Alas! One bang on the drum head and the heart of every man sank to his boots. The sound was dull and unprofitable. It lacked resonance and "point." Sorrowfully they heaved it overboard. But the junior lieutenant objected to this reckless destruction of ship's goods. He put the ship about and had the barrel rescued.

The men made at that moment a discovery. The water had shrunken the canvas until it was really tight, and in a chance blow revealed that the invention was a success. Then was the band exalted in spirit, and immediately it was enlarged by one bass drum and drummer—without a drum stick. Here was another difficulty. But a circular piece of cork from an old life preserver was untied to a twelve-inch piece of pine, and the drum stick was ready.

For several weeks the sailors enjoyed their home-made band. Then they docked at Victoria one fine morning, and the officers though that it was time to introduce a reward of merit. A full set of brass band instruments of the best sort was secured, and there was with them a real bass drum. The substitute was brought up-town and deposited in the music store. There it lies to-day, a silent but eloquent witness to the insistent call of the mind and soul for music as a sauce for monotony, or as an antidote to eternal vigilance.

Music is as much a necessary of life as food or friendship. It "units up the ravelled sleeve of care!" When you may be inclined to think that any of the arts, and especially music, are merely the delights of the idle rich, think of the Pacific Coast Patrol and its hunger for rhythm. Think of the canvas-headed drum which was attached to a line and thrown into the sea every day just before the daily band practice.

A VERY PRACTICAL USE FOR A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT.

It seems like putting music to a very practical use when it comes to using music to make one's livelihood; to entertain and hasten the recovery of wounded soldiers; and to educate children. But an example of a still more practical way is reported by our respected relative and ally, Uncle Sam. It seems that one of the big pumps at a pumping station in California went on strike. The reason for this baffled the local engineers, and it seemed as if the only course open was to send to the manufacturers in New York for an expert to make the necessary repairs. That represented a very costly solution.

Then one of the assistant engineers thought of the talking machine. His suggestion was acted upon. A machine and several records were requisitioned. The manager spoke into the receiver describing as best he could the details of the pumps' ailments, then the talking machine was placed close to the pump to record its pulsations. The records made were sent to New York, and just as the physician listens to the action of the heart and lungs in the human body, so the New York manufacturers of the pump by means of a talking machine heard the throbs and pulsations of the pump though they were thousands of miles away. They first heard the voice outlining his description of the pump's unsatisfactory working; then the b-r-r-bang! b-r-r-bang! of a pump and an occasional sound which they recognised as the sound of escaping steam.

This enabled them to diagnose the case and suggest a remedy. There is nothing sugetive of music in this illustration other than that we get the advantages of such faithful recordings in the pleasure derived from records of all kinds of vocal and instrumental music.

Big Saving of Meat.

"The soldiers at Fort Harrison are going to do some feeding," said T. M. Conron, Chicago meat packer, who was at the Hotel Severin recently, according to the Indianapolis News.

Conron had in his pocket a contract to send to the fort 175,000 pounds of meat. The contract also called for 8,000 pounds of butter and 6,000 pounds of best oleomargarine. Conron says that meat packers are encouraging the public to set aside a meatless day. He estimates that the average family will require two pounds of meat a day. "Figure it up," he said, "and you will find that the American public will save in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 pounds of meat every time they observe a meatless day."

Didn't Love Her Enough.

"No, Herbert," she said in a low tone, "it is impossible. I fear to trust my future with you."

"And why?"

"I have watched your conduct very closely. It lacks the mark of such devotion as my soul craves."

"Do I not come to see you four nights in the week?"

"Yes, but I have detected a calculating selfishness in your nature which I fear."

"What do you mean?"

"You have never yet failed to leave in time to catch the last bus."

"But that is only common sense."

"I know it is, Herbert, and, therefore, it is not love."

Theory That Doesn't Work.

A great social truth, says the Philadelphia Ledger, was enunciated by the janitor of a New York apartment house, who had lost his job, he explained by his wife's jealousy of the elevator girls he had employed and was being sued by her for nonsupport. "Girls are girls," said this shrewd observer, "and you have to pay more attention to them than you do to men." The theory that women who go into business should be treated "just like men" is held by many, especially by the women themselves. It is an excellent theory, but it does not always work.

210 LIVES ARE LOST

ed by American warships or was one of an armada of transports carrying American troops.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — British convoys near to the torpedoed ship Tuscania, closed in quickly and did heroic work, as the comparatively small number of losses show. Such reports as were at hand to-day gave no details of how the transport, supposedly heavily convoyed, fell in with the submarine, but it was regarded as more probable that the ships stumbled on the submarine rather than that the disaster was the first shot in the much advertised German offensive against the line of American troops and supplies.

FLOATED FOR HOURS.

LONDON, Feb. 7.— The Tuscania, which was torpedoed Tuesday, remained afloat for two hours after being torpedoed. The condition of some of the survivors of the Tuscania was pitiable. Many had cast aside all their clothes and had been swimming about for two hours before being rescued.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.— Six hundred survivors of the Transport Tuscania have been landed at Larne, Ireland, War Department despatches this morning announced.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—There was sufficient time for the removal of all uninjured on board the Tuscania. The boat was one of the convoy of troop and provision ships which, after a long passage across the Atlantic, was entering what, until recently, were considered comparatively safe waters. Ships were within sight of land, which was just distinguishable in the dusk of evening, when a torpedo hit her amidships. This was about seven o'clock. The steamer took a heavy list, which made the proper lowering of boats impracticable. Some men jumped into the sea. Others were thrown into the water when the boats were lowered. The survivors are receiving every attention.

MR. BURNHAM AND EXEMPTIONS FOR FARMERS

THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT.

To farmers and others desiring exemption on the ground of the public welfare.

1. Whereas the administration of the Military Service Act, especially that part dealing with exemptions, has been a matter of great difficulty, and whereas the public, especially the farming public, has been unable in many cases to convince the authorities that numbers of farm help should be exempted in the public interest, therefore I wish to state, as the Federal representative of West Peterborough, that in the public interest I am willing to bring before the Minister of Militia all such cases applying to me in writing and addressed to me at the House of Commons, Ottawa, and that have already exhausted the procedure required in proceeding up to the notice of being finally required to report for service.

2. As I am fully persuaded that greater production is a matter of the first importance to the success of the Allies and to the welfare of the State, I will proceed to Ottawa prior to the opening of the Session, and all communications sent to me at the House of Commons on this subject, properly and definitely set out in writing and declared in the form usually employed in order that no statements shall be carelessly and irresponsibly made will be presented by me to the Minister of Militia and his adjudication sought thereon, as provided under Order in Council.

3. The Order in Council is referred to in the Canada Law Times of January, 1918, as follows:

"The Canada Gazette for January 5th contains an Order in Council, that in any case where a person engaged in agriculture has applied for exemption and such exemption has been refused, the Minister of Militia and Defence, if he is of the opinion that the services of such person are essential for promoting agricultural production, may, by order under his hand, discharge such person from Military Service."

4. It is to be hoped that in this way no means will have been left untried to do what is best in the situation referred to, and that what appears to be to many confusion and hardship in the administration of the said Act shall be rectified to the best of my ability consistent with the public interest.—Yours,

J. H. Burnham.

KEY TO CYPHER INSCRIBED ON SHOULDERS OF FEMALE AGENT

LONDON, Feb. 7.—One of the most interesting stories of the war has just been released for publication. It comes from Milan and concerns Elena Teodorini, a famous Italian opera singer, who made a sensational debut twenty-six years ago at the Constanzi Opera House, Rome, alongside the celebrated tenor, Marconi, in "The Huguenots."

Before the outbreak of war Teodorini bade what may prove to have been a final professional adieu of Europe. Singing again in company with Marconi at a gala-performance in the Italian capital, this time in the role of Luerczia Borgia, she bade good-bye to Rome, and so disappeared across the seas.

Nothing more was heard of her beyond reports of big success in the United States and in the big cities of South America, until some three months ago. Then rumours spread in Italian operatic circles of her mysterious arrest as a spy in the pay of Germany.

Met Count Luxburg.

It now appears that during her sojourn in Argentina the famous prima donna seems to have been caught in the toils of Count Luxurg and his band and thereby to have become involved in the alleged conspiracy for the undoing of France.

According to information collected by the Corriere della Sera, the American authorities had long suspected Teodorini of espionage. These suspicions were intensified through her incessant tripping to and fro between New York and Buenos Ayres. All efforts to establish any guilt were foiled till after her embarkation early in October on board the Spanish transatlantic steamship Queen Victoria Eugenie, when the American police sent a wireless despatch to the Anglo-French watchers telling of their grave misgivings that Teodorini perhaps was bearing confidential despatches to Germany's secret service agents in Spain.

"Some distance off Cadiz," reports a travelling companion of Teodorini, who is at present singing at the Constanzi Theatre in Rome (the account is published in the Milan Review), "a British destroyer loomed up. The destroyer ordered our ship, the Queen Victoria Eugenie, to follow her. We were boarded by British officials, who, having produced warrants, asked pointedly after Signorina Elena Teodorini.

"On being told that they were to ransack her baggage, Teodorina turned deadly pale; but quickly recovering herself, she assumed a more haughty demeanour, demanding 'why mine more than anybody's else?' She assisted in the search, maintaining an attitude of apparent indifference.

Laugh at Curl Papers.

"Some amusement was caused among the bystanders by the seizure among other articles, of a bulky roll of curl papers, the wrapper of which was still intact. On being subjected to a special acid test, however, these papers appeared to be covered with curious hieroglyphical writing.

"The searchers confessed that the cypher surpassed their understanding. After a British stewardess had been fetched on board to replace Teodorini's maid, orders were given to get the vessel again under way.

"While British officers still could be seen tackling their task of decipherment with all the patience of enthusiastic cryptologists, the passengers, on their part, were beginning to forget the incident in the fond imagination that they were at last nearing their port of destination.

"Instead of that they suddenly found themselves alongside a French cruiser. Then Teodorini's artiste acquaintances learned that the suspected spy had been stripped for the bath, when lo! and behold, inscribed on her shoulders was discovered a complete key to the writing on the roll of curl papers.

"Thus was delivered into the hands of Britain's ally, Signorina Teodorini, now accused of treasonable communications with the enemy."

Submarine Attacked

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, Feb. 7.—The submarine which torpedoed the Tuscania was attacked by a destroyer. An American officer gave an intimation that the submarine was destroyed.

Tenants Should Be Protected

While the Trades and Labour Council last night did not essay an expression of opinion on the methods of raising the $60,000 for the Patriotic Fund, it was felt that if the sum is raised by taxation this year, some effort should be made to protect tenants against unjust increases in rent under the landlords' pretext that such advances are to cover the tenants' contribution to the fund. Members recalled the first application of the garbage tax and related their own experiences with house owners who increased rents as high as two dollars a month, alleging that this was to meet the tenants garbage tax. And the garbage tax was only fifteen cents a month. Chairman Hartley commented that there was no method that he was aware of by which the rights of tenants could be protected against such injustice.

The members of the Council feel that the Patriotic Fund should be raised by the Government and that dependents of soldiers should be so provided for that they would not be subjected to even the semblance of charity. Opinion was considerably in favour of raising the sum entirely this year, but it was pointed out that by this plan a burden is being placed on soldiers' wives whose income is fixed and already insufficient.

Founding of Moscow.

It was on the site of the Kremlin, now the center of the city, that Moscow was founded by Yuri Dolgoruki, Prince of Kiev, in 1147, although historians believe a village existed on the heights above the River Moskov even before the advent of Dolgoruki. Within a century the new village entered into the turmoil of Slavic wars then raging.

Cleaning Photographs.

Dirty photographs are so unsightly that you will be glad to know that there is a way to clean them. Moisten a soft cloth with warm water to which a little ammonia has been added; wring the cloth out well and wipe the photographs very lightly, drying them immediately with a soft, dry cloth.

The Automobilist.

The man in front drives like mad all day, and the ladies sit still and look at the scenery. Man at the wheel has no time for that. When they stop for the night, he's too tired for conversation.—Atlantic.

Persian and African Donkeys.

Two species of the Caucasian donkey hail, the one from Persia, the other from Africa, says a nature student. Persia is also responsible for the proud mountaineers' fondness for chicken; our European ancestors got their roosters at some time during the historic period. Finally the famous Caucasus sheep took one day their departure from the broad plains situated between Persia and the Caspian sea.

Latest Report 101

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Loss of life on the Tuscania is now estimated at only 101. Cable despatches to-day report the captain, purser and chief steward of the Tuscania were saved.

It was the only car accompanying the flanger, and was rushed to Belleville to provide a temporary supply of flour.

Trades And Labour Council Appoint Three Members To Work With Board Of Trade

Messrs. J. P. Dillon, A. J. Bolwell and Wm. Stevens, were appointed representatives to the Board of Trade by the Trades and Labour Council last night. This action followed a discussion in which it was unanimously agreed that the council should identify itself with the work of the Board and assist in advancing the interests of Peterboro.

Mr. Paul Walker, of the Carpenters' Union, was re-elected financial secretary. This position was not filled at the annual elections on account of Mr. Walker's unavoidable absence.

The council decided in a motion to cooperate with the Great War Veterans in any work in which the Labour men's assistance may be helpful.

A motion to give each "local" representation on the Board of Trustees was discussed at length, and in a seeming inconclusive vote at the close of the meeting failed to effect the change from the present Board of five members.

A resolution from the convention of the Alberta Federation of Labour, regarded with disfavour the sending of returned soldiers to workshops and factories, for brief instruction. Partially skilled workers, it was contended, would be thrown on the labour market and would result in placing the recipient of such vocational training at a disadvantage in competition for employment at the conclusion of the war, "when employers discard the war sentiment." The resolution recommended that the government appoint a commission to enquire into the activities of Canada, with a view to determining the best method of extending vocational training to disabled soldiers, and the rehabilitation at the close of the war of the soldiers returning to Canada.

Peterboro Council endorsed this resolution and added that labour men compose the Commission.

"CINDERELLA" SUCCESSFULLY PRESENTED AT MIDLAND

Unbounded success financially and in every way, attended the presentation of "Cinderella" by the Amateur Dramatic Company from Peterborough in Midland. Rumours and counter rumours of the snow-bound company languishing in a snow bank somewhere near Lindsay have been flatly contradicted by the cast, who returned in two detachments by the G.T.R. yesterday, absolutely satisfied by the trip, the presentation and the receipts, which are estimated at about $300.

The Trip.

The company, 37 strong, left the city at 10.30, after a three-hour wait at the station, and arrived in Midland at 7.10 p.m., only in time to have a hurried supper before going on for the performance, which started at 8. The company, although thoroughly tired out, presented the play before a crowded house, after which they were entertained at a dance in the town The second night's performance was The second nights performance was qually successful and the large audience delighted again. On Tuesday night the company was entertained at a banquet and dance in the town hall.

The Presentation.

The cast excelled themselves in the splendid presentation. Miss Helen MacLaren, who took the leading role of Cinderella without a rehearsal, played her part with the assurance and success of a professional. Her solo was encored time and again.

Miss Doris Rathbone substituted for Miss Ruby Quartermaine and made a decided hit, likewise Miss Ida Sanderson and Mrs. Greenslade. Mrs. Perrin was enthusiastically received and highly commended both on her splendid organization and her charming presentation of her part. Miss Edith Price, a pupil of Miss Littlefield, delighted the audience by her solo dances and was enthusiastically encored. Mr. George Lynch, the "Father" in the play, always a favourite comedian, made the play decidedly lively both by his clever acting and his local hits. Too much cannot be said of the great success of Miss Florence Gladman who, as pianist, supplied all the music for the presentation. Miss Gladman's masterful handling of the musical end of the performance, went a long way towards making the play the success it was.

The company have been asked to put the play on in Belleville shortly, where a full house is assured.

The company are enthusiastic over the hospitality extended by the Midland people to the members of the cast.

Coal Orders Issued From Police Station To-day And To-morrow

The moderation of the weather and of the public demand for coal synchronized this morning. The anxiety that marked the application for feul apparently lifted with the mercury. Around the Hicks' yard the line had dwindled to small knots, but at the Police Station Chief Thompson opened up a new business this morning. A car of pea coal, received by Weir & McCarthy, is being sold under the Chief's direction and tomorrow Mr. Wm. Scott will have another car which will be sold in the same way.

As a result, the demand is being widely distributed, but the lack of quantity in the individual orders is a drawback that must be patiently endured. By this system no person should suffer from the cold except the inconvenience that is often experienced in arranging for deliveries.

700 Cords Of Wood From Keene Coming To Fuel and Cartage

Mr. T. Wedlock has been in Keene recently aranging for the hauling by sleigh and train of 700 cords of wood which should reach the city in a few days. It has been cut for some months and is much better than green wood.

Mr. Wedlock tried to arrange for a siding into the woods from a point near Drummond's station, but the severe winter and the scarcity of labour upset that plan. In the meantime the visible supply in the company's yard was steadily decreasing, and to meet the approaching void, temporarily, of course, of both wood and coal, Mr. Wedlock has arranged to have the wood drawn to the station at Keene, where it will be loaded on to G.T.R. cars and brought to Peterboro. The Peterboro Fuel and Cartage coal bins are at present empty.

Lakefield Cut Off By Snow Since Mon. Line Not Open Yet

The railway to Lakefield has been filled in with snow since Monday. On that evening a train stuck in a drift near Nassau, and had to be rescued by the local yard engine, and the plows have been so busy keeping open the main lines that there has been none available to clear the Lakefield stub.

This morning's train from Lakefield did not reach the city until after dinner, and the regular train from Toronto did not leave until noon, and was expected here about five o'clock. The main lines are operating, but the schedule is in the air, shattered by connections at the central terminals.

The train from Orillia did not reach the city last night until five o'clock. Among its passengers were the members of the Cinderella Company, returning from Midland.

A way freight was due to reach the city from Toronto this afternoon.

ONE GOAL MARGIN FOR PETES OVER OSHAWA TEAM

Local Youngsters Played Below Their Usual Form in Midnight Battle in Junior O. H. A. Series —Final Score Was 5 to 4.

RETURN ON TUESDAY

By beating Oshawa 5 to 4 in a hard fought, but ragged game at Brock street rink last night, the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team have a one goal lead to carry with them to Oshawa next Tuesday. It is not much of a margin, but if history repeats itself, may perhaps be enough. Last year the Petes went to Oshawa first and were beaten by one goal. They came home confident of an easy victory, but Oshawa waltzed away with the game on local ice by the same margin and won the round by two goals.

The Petes have a royal chance if they return to form and get working together. They were away off colour last night and instead of grabbing off a four or five goal lead, came near not having any at all.

The game did not start until 11 o'clock and it was almost 1 o'clock this morning before the final bell. The Oshawa team and Referee Waghorne arrived at 10.30 o'clock, five hours late. In spite of the long wait, however, 800 fans saw the teams pull off their midnight clash.

Frankly, the game was not worth the long wait, proving the poorest exhibition of the season. The teams seemed to lack pep, and while there were occasional spurts of brilliant hockey, there were other periods when the play dragged and became ragged and slow.

The Petes were a disappointment last night, failing to show the form they exhibited in the last two games with Lindsay. They did not work together or stick in their positions, while they trusted too much to the defence and failed to back check persistently. The result is seen in the score.

Cherrett and Hagerman did the bulk of the puck-carrying for the Petes, and both showed plenty of speed and cleverness, but would have been more valuable if they had been more unselfish. There were many occasions when a pass at the right moment would have meant a goal. Park at right wing worked hard all the way and was always in his place, while Williams, who subbed for him on several occasions, also gave the best he had. The rest of the team were below their usual form. Bartley, especially, was excess baggage last night. He was the Bad Joe Hall of the engagement, drawing frequent trips to the penalty box and putting on a climax three minutes before the end of the game when he cracked Venini, the Oshawa right wing, over the head with his stick, inflicting a deep gash. It was an incident that the majority of the spectators deplored and did not help the team or the reputation of the game.

Oshawa failed to show any combination, but they were good individually and their back-checking was a mile ahead of the Petes. They always had three men back by the time the locals invaded their territory. Venini was their fastest man, rushing well and back-checking all over the ice. He mussed up many a Peterborough rush by his fast coming back. Bowen, the centre man, was also very effective. He has a shot like a machine gun and gets it away fast from any position. Southwell did good work at left wing. The defence was effective, both Williams, who played for Bowmanville juniors last year, and Osborne checking well. Smith handled himself in his usual fashion in the nets. Although they had a substitute on the bench the visitors did not use him, keeping their original six in action all the way. The teams.

Oshawa		Peterborough.
Smith	Goal	Murray
Osborne	R. Defence	Girard
Williams	L. Defence	Hagerman
Bowen	Centre	Cherrett
Venini	R. Wing	Park
Southwell	L. Wing	Bartley
Johnston	Sub.	Williams

Referee—F. C. Waghorne.

Th game opened very auspiciously for the Petes. From the face-off, Cherrett broke away, worked his way inside and caught the top corner of the nets with a quick scoop shot in twenty-five seconds.

The Petes had several golden chances in the next few minutes. Smith was lucky to stop a hard one from Bartley when Park passed the rubber out from behind. Cherrett missed the net by an inch after a nice rush and then hit the post on a rebound.

Oshawa did not look very dangerous at this stage. They were going down with individual rushes and shooting from outside the defence. Murray handled half a dozen of these drives easily. Finally, however, Bowen sniped a long one through from the side and the teams were even up.

A minute after, however, Cherrett put the homesters in front by a quick shot from the wing, which whizzed across Smith's shins into the net.

Bowen evened it up shortly after warde when he got away alone and scored from outside the defence.

Hagerman was penalized for an accidental trip, and from the face off that followed, Southwell grabbed the rubber and beat Murray with a quick shot, putting Oshawa in front 3 to 2.

Just before the period ended Venini drew a penalty for tripping.

There was a lot of excitement early in the second period when Goalkeeper Murray was penalized for tripping an Oshawa forward. The Petes checked desperately with their goaler off and Oshawa only got one drive at the nets, which Girard stopped cleverly. With the teams even again the Petes pressed, and Hagerman tied the score after a nice rush.

There was no further scoring in this period, although Oshawa came very close to it on one occasion, only fast back-checking by Cherrett saving the day. Murray practically stopped a shot, but the rubber was rolling into the net when Cherrett fished it out.

Another unusual incident happened a moment after, when an Oshawa player dashing behind the Petes' nets, collided with the Oshawa goal umpire, and the latter took the count when he hit the ice.

The Petes broke the tie early in the third period on a nice piece of combination. Girard got away and passed to Cherrett, who made a quick return, and Girard's lightning shot fooled Smith completely. Smith had to handle several more hard shots in the next few minutes and did so nicely. The Petes were trying hard to increase their lead, but it was Oshawa who finally scored on a nice play. Williams, recovering the rubber behind the Peterborough nets and slipping it out to Bowen, who scored easily.

It began to look like a tie score as the minutes sped on without further scoring. Then Bartley felled Venini, with three minutes to play and went off for the rest of the game. With the Petes playing five men to six a tie looked the best they could get, but within two minutes of the final bell, Hagerman got away and centred nicely to Park, who slammed the winning goal past Smith.

The summary:—

First Period—

1. Peterborough, Cherrett, 25 secs.
2. Oshawa, Bowen, 6 mins.
3. Peterborough, Cherrett, 1 min.
4. Oshawa, Bowen, 3 mins.
5. Oshawa, Southwell, 5 mins.

Second Period.

6 Peterborough, Hagerman, 6 mins.

Third Period—

7. Peterborough, Girard, 45 secs.
8. Oshawa, Bowen, 9 mins.
9. Peterborough, Park, 8 mins.

Good Programme Of Athletic Events At The Armouries

The regular weekly programme of sports for E Company, 1st Depot Battalion, E.O.R., was held yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Sergt.-Major Bayne, and provided a very interesting afternoon for Peterborough's soldier boys. The lads in khaki displayed a keen interest in the different events and there were many starters in the 100 yards' dash, calling for five preliminary heats. Pte. McIlmoyle, who won this event last week, again carried off the honours.

The tug-of-war competition was spiritedly contested and furnished plenty of fun and excitement. No. 1 class won from No. 3, and No. 4 class beat No. 5, and drew the bye into the finals. No. 1, in its second contest, beat Class No. 2, but had to acknowledge defeat to No. 4 class in the final.

CURLING

GAMES POSTPONED.

Lindsay has requested the postponement of the annual inter-club games that were to have been played here on Friday. They feared that they might become storm-bound.

The curlers discussed this morning the coal saving orders. The regulations require places of amusement to close on Mondays, beginning on the 18th. Hence curlers will not be affected over the present week end.

"They might close No. 8," said one of the players, but the other seven ices can scarcely be called places of amusement, if you are getting beat. But the bunch on "No. 8," behind the glass, enjoy the play which ever way it goes. They are neutrals."

Last night's scheduled games resulted as follows:

BIG PHILIPPINE SUGAR CROP

Modern Machinery, Supplanting Hand Labor, Results in Planting of Immense Acreage.

The Philippines are like most of the sugar cane growing regions in that the available labor supply is comparatively limited. To overcome this, the tractor and modern power machinery is being introduced. As this does not pay on the small plantations, the custom is for one organization to operate several hundred or thousand acres, and a well-organized system is involved throughout the year. Labor-saving devices are employed wherever possible.

The first process in harvesting sugar cane is stripping the leaves from the stalks, an operation requiring much time and labor, as this must be done by hand. A cane knife or bolo is used by the native laborer, who passes the knife down each side of the cane, knocking off and throwing them into the middle of the row, where other laborers pick them up and load them to be hauled to the mill.

Sugar cane milling under modern methods may be divided into four essential processes, namely, the extraction of the juice from the cane, the clarification of the juice by boiling, the evaporation of the juice so as to reduce the sugar to the crystalline form, and the freeing of the sugar from impurities. The most modern machinery for all operations is fast being installed throughout the Philippine Islands, and American consumers may look forward to securing the bulk of their sugar from these distant dots on the Pacific, which owe their development to American capital and American leadership.

A Prize Winning Boy Scout Composition

The following composition which won a silver merit medal in a contest for Boy Scouts, conducted by the Lone Scout Magazine, was written by Master Alex. Edmison, Toronto, twelve years of age, son of Rev. J. H. and Mrs. Edmison, formerly of Peterborough, and grandson of Mr. Alex. Fitzgerald, East City:

CANADA'S RESPONSE TO THE CALL.

By Lone Scout Alex. Edmison, 78 Hogarth Avenue, Toronto, Ont., Can. (Silver Merit Medal—Contest No. 67.)

On August 4, 1914, when England leclared war on Germany, Sir Robert Borden, Canada's premier, held a council in which it was decided to call out the militia, numbering 44,000 men. All the old regulars rushed to the colours. In a few hours fifteen regiments had volunteered to serve the King. Every type of man volunteered, from the road-cleaner to the bank manager and merchant. Rediskins, whiteskins and blackskins all united together in the one desire to be loyal. In two days 100,000 men were accepted for overseas service.

Several citizens offered to equip regiments at their own expense. The whole Dominion gave liberally to the great cause of the Red Cross. Rich and poor gave all they could afford. Each of the nine provinces gave something to provide for the soldiers, and women gave all their time in working for the Red Cross.

Canada first thought of sending 25,000 men in the first contingent, but on the increasing demand of quick departure she added another 10,000 men. Besides having every unit used in modern warfare, the first contingent was made up of the prime of the land, fully equipped.

At last the bitter pill came, that of the departure of the troops. The troops went from Valcartier Camp to Quebec in a drenching rain, where they arrived, very wet, but in high spirits. The roads were thronged with a cheering multitude. The troops filed to the troop trains in fine order to the tune of "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." Kisses and good-lucks filled the air. When the first train pulled out there was a mighty cheer, which ended in broken hearts. One by one the trains pulled out, the soldiers in each giving a hearty cheer as the wheels began to move.

But now, alas! at least three-fifths of those voices are hushed. Their owners are lying still and cold in the grave. Alas, again, Canada's most cultured lie still in the cold dark soil of Flanders, "Somewhere in France." But, has their sacrifice been in vain? It has not! For those brave men who have lost their lives for their country did so with the desire to have one purpose fulfilled. That is to have Prussian militarism crushed forever and aye.

"Somewhere in France" these hero sons lie in soldiers' graves. The greatest gift that man can give their native land, they gave.

Sir,—I beg to express the hope that our citizens generally will be present at, and take an interest in, Dr. Grenfell's illustrated lecture at St. Paul's Church next Tuesday evening, 12th inst.

The splendid cause calls for our general and enthusiastic support, while we cannot but be stimulated and helped by contact with a personality so strong and so nobly adventurous.

Let us all come out and show that we stand behind a man who belongs to us all, and is doing part of our national work.—Yours truly,

J. C. Davidson.
